While CCAGW's members and supporters like you have sent more than 40,000 e-mails to the Senate, groups like MoveOn.org are countering our efforts by flooding Senate offices with their own messages in support of the "stimulus." We must not only match them e-mail for e-mail, but overwhelm the Senate with our call to vote against the borrow-and-spend American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009.

This bill is not only one of the largest spending measures ever to pass through Congress, it will cost more over two years than we've spent to date on the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan!

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has concluded that more than half of the hundreds of billions of dollars in infrastructure spending contained in the bill, such as $26 billion of the $30 billion allocated for highways and $15.5 billion of the $18.5 billion for renewable energy projects, will not take place for more than two years -- long after economists predict the current recession will have ended.

Even worse, the bill contains all sorts of special-interest and congressional pet spending projects that have virtually nothing to do with economic growth. As just one example, it allocates $335 million to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) for the prevention of sexually transmitted diseases. Not only will this "healthcare" spending do nothing for the health of our economy, CDC has a track record of using such funds for events like a transgender beauty pageant in San Francisco and a conference, entitled "Got Love? Flirt/Date/Score," that taught participants how "to flirt with greater finesse."

Mariano Q, rather than burdening today's and tomorrow's taxpayers with this massive government spending spree, Congress should create more incentives and opportunities for private-sector jobs and growth by cutting government spending and enacting across-the-board tax cuts for individuals and businesses, like those that helped reverse economic slumps in the 1960s, 1980s, and earlier this decade.

If the Senate follows the House's lead and passes this borrow-and-spend "stimulus" bill, it will waste record amounts of tax dollars, provide virtually no benefit to the economy, and only add to our nation's soaring liabilities.

Time is short, please tell your Senators today that you want them to vote NO on the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act!

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Schatz
President

P.S. Mariano Q, if the Senate approves the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, federal lawmakers will have authorized more than $2 trillion in new government spending since February, 2008. While the cost of "jump-starting" the economy is sobering, the coming fiscal mushroom cloud is truly alarming. The national debt currently stands at a mind-numbing $10.6 trillion, and America is sinking into debt at the rate of $3.3 billion per day. Our children and grandchildren simply can't afford this borrow-and-spend "stimulus" bill. Please deliver that message to your Senators today!
