Preface

THIS INDEX to the Calvin Coolidge Papers is a direct result of the wish of the Congress and the President, as expressed by Public Law 85-147 approved August 16, 1957, and amended by Public Laws 87-263 approved September 21, 1961, and 88-299 approved April 27, 1964, to arrange, index, and microfilm the papers of the Presidents in the Library of Congress in order "to preserve their contents against destruction by war or other calamity," to make the Presidential Papers more "readily available for study and research," and to inspire informed patriotism.

Presidents whose papers are in the Library are:

George Washington	James K. Polk	Chester A. Arthur
Thomas Jefferson	Zachary Taylor	Grover Cleveland
James Madison	Franklin Pierce	Benjamin Harrison
James Monroe	Abraham Lincoln	William McKinley
Andrew Jackson	Andrew Johnson	Theodore Roosevelt
Martin Van Buren	Ulysses S. Grant	William H. Taft
William H. Harrison	James A. Garfield	Woodrow Wilson
John Tyler		Calvin Coolidge

The microfilm of the Coolidge Papers became available in 1965. Positive copies of the film may be purchased from the Chief, Photoduplication Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540. A positive print is available for interlibrary loan through the Chief, Loan Division, Library of Congress.

Introduction

Provenance

THE Calvin Coolidge Papers in the Library of Congress consist largely of correspondence files remaining in the White House when the President left office on March 4, 1929. Following an exchange of letters between Mr. Coolidge and J. Franklin Jameson,[1] then Chief of the Manuscript Division in the Library, the collection, now estimated to number 175,000 pieces, was transferred to the Library of Congress as a deposit. Thereafter scholars were permitted to use the papers with the assent of Mr. Coolidge or, following his death in 1933, with that of his widow. Mrs. Coolidge formally gave the papers to the Library in 1953.[2] Since her death in 1957 access has been unrestricted. To this large group of papers, constituting series 1 in the microfilm edition and in this index, a few other Coolidge items acquired over the years have been added to form a much smaller series 2. Series 3 comprises three substantial volumes of names and addresses of guests at formal White House social functions.

It might be assumed that so large a number of manuscripts would provide enough material for a thorough study of Coolidge's long career of public service which began in Northampton, Mass., in 1899 and culminated in the Presidency, or at least that the 6 years Coolidge spent as Chief Executive would be rather completely documented. Such, unfortunately, is not the case. The scholar must look elsewhere for the record of Coolidge's career before his becoming President, for the correspondence files for 1923-29, bulky as they are, reveal very little about the significant events of this period. These thousands of letters are mostly those from private citizens along with carbon copies of routine replies. They include only a small quantity of correspondence with political or governmental figures.

Although the "disappointingly thin"[3] character of the Coolidge Papers was long apparent, explanations could only be surmised until 1962 when the Edward T. Clark Papers were opened in the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress.[4] Clark, a fellow Amherst alumnus, had served as private secretary to Mr. Coolidge during the latter's tenure as Vice President and as President. In a letter to Harry E. Ross, Coolidge's last secretary, written shortly after the former President's death in 1933, Clark related that "Mr. Coolidge's desire was to destroy everything in the so-called personal files and there would have been nothing preserved if I had not taken some things out on my own responsibility."[5] Five years later in a conversation with St. George L. Sioussat, then Chief of the Manuscript Division, Mrs. Coolidge stated that the late President had "destroyed all his 'personal' papers."[6] The evidence is thus quite strong that Coolidge eliminated, if not quite all, at least a large part of his personal papers. The remainder, comprising the Calvin Coolidge Papers in the Library of Congress indexed in the present work and the smaller collection of Coolidge material at the Forbes Library in Northampton, is therefore of considerably less importance than its size or the career of its subject might suggest.

The right of each President to dispose of his personal papers in any way he might choose has been assumed throughout the history of the office, and Coolidge is not the first Chief Executive to destroy portions of his files. Martin Van Buren, Franklin Pierce, Chester A. Arthur, and William McKinley all destroyed parts of their personal papers from one motive or another.[7] In the case of Coolidge, the reason for such destruction very likely lies in his personality. His reserve is legendary. A shy and taciturn man, even by Yankee standards, he did not change the habits of a lifetime when he entered the White House. William Allen White, a critical though not unsympathetic biographer, recalled spending several days with Coolidge in 1924. "What I wanted," he wrote, "was his slant on things, his point of view, the light that glowed in the inner chambers of his heart." But, White added, "he kept it hooded."[8] Claude M. Fuess, a quite sympathetic biographer, also lamented Coolidge's silences, noting that "his secretiveness is almost unparalleled among American statesmen."[9] Finally, Edward T. Clark, who knew something of the contents of the destroyed papers and who was probably privy to as many secrets as anyone around Coolidge, in another letter commenting on the papers' destruction noted that "this would not involve the loss which you might at first imagine because as President, Mr. Coolidge did not follow the practice of other Presidents in trying to explain his Administration through letters to friends." Hoover and Wilson, he continued, had deliberately tried to supply posterity with a record through memoranda or letters on public affairs. "Mr. Coolidge, however, strictly avoided this and the files, therefore, consisted of the huge number of letters to him which might be of interest but with replies which reveal little or nothing."[10] Although this explanation may be small consolation to the student of 20th-century American politics, it is in keeping with Coolidge's personality. If he did not actually say "I have never been hurt by what I have not said,"[11] the statement epitomizes both Coolidge's attitude and the letters which have survived. The destruction of part of his own papers may have been but an extension of this philosophy.

It is against this background that the present work must be reviewed. The character of the surviving Coolidge Papers is such that it was decided that the most useful as well as most economical index would be one organized around the "case" files and subject titles of the collection's contents, together with cross references. In consequence, this index is much smaller than would be one which indexed every correspondent and every letter.

Coolidge material, of course, survives in other collections. The Edward T. Clark Papers, already referred to, contain a number of Coolidge letters and other material about him, as do the papers of his confidant and adviser Frank Waterman Stearns at Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass. The Everett Sanders Papers in the Library of Congress contain reading copies of Coolidge speeches. At the Forbes Library in Northampton, Massachusetts, there is a significant collection of Coolidge material. There, in the Calvin Coolidge Memorial Room, are to be found letters received and copies of letters sent while Coolidge was Governor of Massachusetts, along with clippings, copies of speeches, and memorabilia.

Description Of The Papers

The Calvin Coolidge Papers are in 3 series:

Series 1. Executive Office Correspondence. 1923-29. 283 manuscript boxes.
Files from the President's Executive Office, consisting of letters received, sometimes with brief notes drafted by Coolidge for reply, and carbon copies of outgoing letters from Coolidge or his secretaries. The original numbered subject or case file sequence has been retained. Within a case file or subdivision of a case file the arrangement is chronological and, within the days, alphabetical by name of correspondent or by locality of organization. Enclosures are filed with their covering letters. A typed index to case file titles in alphabetical order precedes the series.

Series 2. Additional Correspondence. 1921-29. 1 manuscript box.
Correspondence not a part of the Executive Office file, including photocopies. Arranged chronologically.

Series 3. Reception Lists. 1925-27. 3 volumes.
Lists, with addresses, of persons invited to formal social events at the White House.

The user is cautioned that the publication of the contents of this microfilm may be construed as constituting a violation of literary property rights. These rights derive from the principle of common law that the writer of an unpublished letter or other manuscript has the sole right to publish the contents thereof, unless he affirmatively parts with the right; the right descends to his legal heirs regardless of the ownership of the physical manuscript itself. It is the responsibility of an author or his publisher to secure the permission of the owner of the literary property rights in unpublished writings.

How To Use This Index

The Calvin Coolidge Papers in the Library of Congress are indexed in this volume. These are the papers available in a Library of Congress microfilm reproduction of 190 reels. Calvin Coolidge letters in other manuscript collections in the Library of Congress or elsewhere are not indexed in this volume.

Because of the special character of the surviving Coolidge Papers, titles of more than 4,000 case or subject files and subdivisions with cross-references have been indexed. The case files were established and maintained in the White House. The sample entries below illustrate the method of indexing. The first and third entries index case file titles; the exact number of pages (less than 100) is given for the first entry and an estimated number (100 or more) for the third. Cross-references cards take two forms: The second and fourth entries illustrate the first form; entries "Bremen" through "Crutchfield" illustrate the second. Item-by-item indexing in the small second and third series is illustrated in the last two entries.

Coolidge case files are numbered from 1 to 4688. The following numbers, however, are missing: 7-14, 16, 17, 22-24, 56, 60, 62, 145, 163, 179, 406, 766, 1480, 1879, 2071, 2680, 2695, 4148, 4405, 4447, 4499, 4501-4600, 4662.
