Telephone caller (did not state name or affiliation) pointed out that, apart from some large multinational corporations, convincing foreign parties that they must obtain authorization from the United States government is very difficult.