

Col John E. McManigle, USAF, MC

Colonel

John E. McManigle was recently named Vice Dean, F. Edward Hébert School of Medicine, Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences. Dr. McManigle is a native of Emporium, Pennsylvania, and graduated from Cameron County High School, The Pennsylvania State University, and Jefferson Medical College prior to entering the United States Air Force Medical Corps in 1980. Dr. McManigle completed Internal Medicine training at USAF Medical Center Keesler, Keesler AFB, Mississippi, and was selected to serve as Chief of Residents. Following his year as Chief of Residents, Dr. McManigle was assigned to RAF Lakenheath, United Kingdom as a Staff Internist. While at Lakenheath, Dr. McManigle also served as Director, Cardiopulmonary Services; Chief, Allergy Immunization Clinic; and Primary Member of the Air Transportable Hospital. Dr. McManigle then pursued further specialty training in Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. Dr. McManigle later served as Chair, Department of Internal Medicine, Malcolm Grow Medical Center, Andrews Air Force Base, Maryland. In January 2007, the Air Force designated Dr. McManigle a Clinical/Academic Grand Master in recognition for his outstanding career accomplishments in academic and clinical medicine. While at Walter Reed Army Medical Center as a Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine Fellow, Dr. McManigle's association with the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences began. Most recently, Dr. McManigle served as Assistant Dean of Clinical Sciences. In that role, he provided strategic oversight to assure the delivery of high-quality clinical experiences in multiple clinical specialties at twenty-two clinical training sites spread across the nation. In addition, Dr. McManigle was responsible to assure that USU clinical programs met all standards set by Middle States Association and Liaison Committee on Medical Education. As Assistant Dean for Clinical Sciences, Dr. McManigle also served an essential role in reviewing, revising, and establishing policy throughout the School of Medicine (SOM). In his new role as Vice Dean, Dr. McManigle serves as principal deputy to Dean, School of Medicine, to oversee degree programs for medical and graduate students that meet the standards of accrediting bodies and the needs of the uniformed services; manage the School with the purpose of furthering the School's academic goals, the needs of the uniformed services, and the welfare of the students, faculty, and staff; lead the School's faculty; maintain an environment that insures and promotes the academic and personal welfare for the School's students, faculty, and staff. In these roles and many others, Dr. McManigle serves as an academic leader and trusted advisor on high visibility strategic management issues to the Dean, School of Medicine, and President, Uniformed Services University. Dr. McManigle and his wife, Eleanor, reside in Rockville, Maryland.
