Healthy People 2000 Midcourse Review and 1995 Revisions

Healthy People 2000: Midcourse Review and 1995 Revisions is the product of a national effort that has involved professionals and citizens, private organizations, and public agencies from every part of the Nation.

Preparation of the report was sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service (PHS), through a project coordinated by the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Health (Disease Prevention and Health Promotion). Project management was facilitated by the work of the PHS Steering Committee on HEALTHY PEOPLE 2000. Principal staff and editorial responsibility for the project was carried out by James A. Harrell and Deborah Maiese. Other staff from the Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion helping in the coordination and development of the overall project included Ashley Files, Debra Rothstein, Lisa Kane, Valerie Welsh, Adam Borah, Marilyn K. Schulenberg, Juan Washington, David Baker, and Janice Radak. The Public Health Foundation worked with the States in the development of the Consortium Action chapter.

While it is not possible to recognize herein all those citizens and officials who made contributions to Healthy People 2000, their efforts were central to the development of the final product.
