

I've seen "Flipper"!

At lantic Bottlenose dolphins (Tursiops truncatus) are common animals seen in Biscayne Bay. The average number of dolphins in the bay is about 115 per year. These mammals eat a wide variety of fishes, squids, eels, rays, shrimp, crabs, and even sharks. The average size for male and female dolphins is 9 feet and 440 pounds. The estimated life span is between 35-44 years. Dolphins are very friendly and social animals. They are often seen traveling in groups of 12-15. Because dolphins are mammals, they breathe air just like humans. Dolphins come up to the surface to breathe several times a minute.

Occasionally some dive down as long as 10 minutes. If you are lucky enough to hear the clicks dolphins make, you are witnessing their use of echolocation, a type of sonar to detect objects in the water like your boat.
