

Gary Crane Deputy Chief Financial Officer

Gary Crane is the Deputy Chief Financial Officer at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

Mr. Crane joined the OCC in April of 2004. In his role, he oversees an annual operating budget of approximately $672.0 million. In addition to his financial duties, he is responsible for all procurement, agency records management, and library functions.

Prior to joining the OCC, Mr. Crane served most recently as the Portfolio Manager at the Defense Finance and Accounting Service (DFAS) where he implemented the agency's capital planning and investment control process. Prior to that position, he served as the Director of the Business Solutions Division for DFAS after returning to government service in 2000.

In 1996 Mr. Crane joined Camco Financial Corporation, first as the Chief Financial Officer and Treasurer of its First Federal subsidiary and then as the Chief Financial Officer and Treasurer for Camco Financial Corporation where he was the principal finance and accounting officer for five banks, two mortgage corporations, and a title agency. Prior to CAMCO, Mr. Crane established a management consulting practice in Washington, D.C., specializing in financial regulatory compliance, general ledger systems, and accounting work in 1989.

Mr. Crane joined the federal government in 1987 as a staff accountant for the Office of Regulatory Activities, an office of the Federal Home Loan Bank System in Washington, D.C. He was promoted to Accounting and Budget Officer in 1988.

Mr. Crane began his career as a staff auditor with Ernst & Young where he gained accounting and auditing experience with financial institutions, government agencies, manufacturing, oil and gas, and health care entities.

Mr. Crane received his Bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan School of Business Administration. He is a licensed Certified Public Accountant in Ohio and Florida and is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Association of Government Accountants, and Ohio Society of CPAs. He resides in Northern Virginia with his wife Patricia, and his two children, Benjamin and Rachel.
