

A large banner is mounted on a wall. It features a central graphic of a tree's root system in white and brown. The roots spread across the banner, with several circular cutouts containing photographs of children in various outdoor settings: a boy pointing in a field, a boy with a bow, a boy with a butterfly, and two boys in a field. The banner has a white background with brown and olive green accents.

“When we see land as a community to which we belong,
we may begin to use it with love and respect.”

- Aldo Leopold

Earth Partnership for Schools engages students, teachers and community adults in restoring native habitats on schoolgrounds. We involve all ages, ecosystems, subjects, abilities, cultures and neighborhoods -- urban, suburban and rural. Earth Partnership nurtures love and respect for nature as children form their views of the world. We invite parents and teachers to strengthen their own commitment to the earth and to their children's future. Earth Partnership for Schools would like to thank Megan Lotts for her Artwork.

earth partnership
FOR SCHOOLS
www.uwarboretum.org/eps

Earth Partnership for Schools

Informational sign with text and images, including a small photo of children in a garden.

“Who

“When

earth partnership
Earth Partnership for Schools

Earth Partnership for Schools is a national program that provides environmental education resources and support to schools. The program is designed to help students learn about the environment and develop a sense of responsibility for the planet. Earth Partnership for Schools is a national program that provides environmental education resources and support to schools. The program is designed to help students learn about the environment and develop a sense of responsibility for the planet.

