Economic Development Today

A Telecast on University Based Partnerships for Economic Development December 4th from 3:00 – 4:00 P.M. EST Telecast

Many universities are identifying research and technology that leads to successful economic development. The telecast highlights how Universities and Regional Councils have worked together to help their communities turn the corner in becoming competitive economies. Examples will focus on how community colleges are providing technical assistance to regions; how university-led technology incubators are helping to commercialize products being developed within universities; and how universities have assisted in identifying the clusters in a region. The telecast will highlight how economic development organizations and regional councils are working with local universities to strengthen their regions.

How To Participate In The Telecast

To participate all you need to do is to locate a host facility with KU Band or C Band capability. Most public facilities as well as many universities and colleges offer satellite reception capability with viewing rooms. You will need to provide the facility management with the satellite coordinates. For record-keeping purposes, please sign up for the telecast. If you have difficulty locating a viewing facility, contact Peggy Tadej at 202-986-1032, ext. 224.

About the Economic Development Information Coalition

To provide information about Economic Development Administration (EDA) programs and economic development practices, EDA has put together the Economic Development Information Coalition (EDIC). EDIC is made up of the International Economic Development Council (IEDC), the National Association of Regional Councils (NARC), and the National Association of Development Organizations (NADO). They have joined EDA to disseminate information to economic development practitioners serving distressed communities.
