'Madness and Society from Bedlam to the Present'

Course Tutor: Hilary Marland (H315)

2001-2002

Last revised July 2001

INTRODUCTION

The course will use secondary literature and a selection of relevant primary texts to explore the relationship between madness and society from the 17th century to the present day. We will seek to understand lay explanations of mental disorder rooted in cultural, religious and intellectual frameworks and the patient's view, as well as the far from uniform approaches of medical practitioners. We will examine the rise of an institutional approach to the treatment of mental disorder from 18th-century mad-houses to asylums governed according to the dictates of moral management, and then towards the end of the 19th century vast establishments silted up with 'chronic' long-term patients. We will explore the debate about the possibilities of offering care and treatment outside an asylum context and the shift to 'care in the community' with its mixed outcome at the end of the 20th century. The role of doctors will be traced and analysed as they evolved from 'mad-doctors' to psychiatrists. Different ways of classifying insanity will be explored alongside treatment regimes, changes in definitions, explanations and depictions of madness, as expressed in psychiatric texts, cases notes, asylum records, the reports of reformers and Lunacy Commissioners, novels, art and photographs, film clips and patient narratives. We will seek to understand the economies of incarceration and care, the input of policy makers, and the role of religion, class, gender, family and community in defining insanity and its treatment. The course is based largely on British sources, but includes material on North America and France, and colonial settings (and you should feel able in your essays to expand the geographical boundaries further).

The course will be taught through 15 two-hourly seminars, which you must attend, and through assigned reading, which I expect you to read. You will be asked to make short presentations at some seminars, or to focus on particular items on the reading list. I may introduce additional documentary texts as the course proceeds, and these will be pre-circulated or placed in SRC. My office hours will be posted (room H315). I can be contacted by phone 02476-522506

TIMES

Seminars EITHER Tuesday afternoons, 1.00-3.00 (ROOM 402) OR Wednesday mornings 9.00-11.00 (ROOM 404), weeks 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9 in Term 1, and weeks 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10 in Term 2 (Week 6 is reading week in both terms). In Term 3 we shall meet in Week 2 and 4 for our revision seminars (to be confirmed depending on examination date). If there is sufficient interest, I will organise a 'film evening' towards the end of Term 2.

AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

Advanced Options involve the study of broad-ranging themes in a comparative and/or interdisciplinary context over a long chronological time frame. You can expect them to operate at a rather more sophisticated conceptual level than first- or second-year modules.

TEACHING AND LEARNING

The course will be taught primarily through seminar discussion, which will be partly student-led, non-assessed short essays, and (for some students), a 4,500- or 8,000-word assessed essay. There will be a limited number of lectures or introductions to help you grasp the main themes and issues, but as a third-year student you will be expected to organise your own learning rather more independently than hitherto. Although the course is based chiefly on secondary material, emphasis is placed on introducing a range of primary sources, including asylum records and official reports, patient's narratives, art and photography, and film. Field trips are offered to Warwick Record Office, the Modern Records Office at Warwick University and to the Wellcome Trust Library in London.

EXPECTED LEARNING OUTCOMES

- a) further development of essay writing and seminar participation/presentation skills
- b) an ability to conduct and to critically assess analyses of historical trends and to engage with interdisciplinary approaches to the study of history
- c) to provide the opportunity through writing a 4,500/8,000 word long essay and shorter class essays, and seminar participation, to demonstrate skills in understanding, analysing, and critically debating a range of historical issues and interpretations
- d) to provide experience of historical research through framing a question and writing a 4,500/8,000 word essay, involving the selection of appropriate material, independent evaluation of contrasting evidence and scholarly interpretations, and the formulation of substantiated conclusions
- e) the capacity to handle cultural evidence as well as more conventional historical sources, and to gain awareness of the work of scholars in other disciplines, including sociology, literary studies, women and gender, medicine and psychiatry
- f) the capacity to handle a range of primary source materials and to discuss approaches to the use of e.g. narratives, film, photography, literature, as well as official sources

ASSESSMENT
HISTORY (1.5 units)

2 hour exam (33.3%)
 1 assessed essay (8,000) words (66.7%)

OR

3 hour exam (66.7%)
 1 assessed essay (4,500) words (33.3%)

JOINT DEGREES (single-weighted module)

3 hour exam (100%)

OR

2 hour exam (50%)
 1 assessed essay (4,500) words (50%)

HISTORICAL STUDIES/PART-TIME DEGREES

3 hour exam (100%)

OR

2 hour exam (50%)
 1 assessed essay (4,500) words (50%)

DEADLINE for assessed essay: Monday 3rd week of Term 3, 12.00noon (to be confirmed). You will be expected to input into finding your own topic and framing your title, so start planning assessed work early (more details will follow in seminars).

COURSE WORK

This is non-assessed. 3 essays of 1,500-2,000 words each.

Joint degree and Historical Studies students need only complete 2 essays, but may hand in 3 to be marked.

DEADLINES for class essays: Term 1, Friday Week 7; Term 2, Friday Week 5; and Term 2 Friday Week 10. These early deadlines will leave you free to work on your assessed essay over the Easter vacation.

You are advised to chose your first essay title from the 1st term's seminar topics, the second from the 2nd term; the 3rd on any topic covered by the syllabus. Remember your assessed essay should not overlap in any significant way with topics covered in class essays.

All essays must be typed and properly referenced using the style guide (marks will be deducted for inattention to scholarly protocols!).

COURSE OUTLINE AND READING LIST

* Essential seminar reading – aim to read as many of the starred items as possible before the seminar,  top recommendations.

+ Recommended reading.

SRC indicates book in SRC, SRC box an item (book chapter or article) in SRC boxes (arranged alphabetically by author). I have requested that a copy of the key course books be placed in SRC. In some cases, e.g. Michael MacDonald, Mystical Bedlam, there should be a copy of the book in SRC, and two copies of a chapter taken from the book in the box. So check carefully, searching on OPAC under Marland, H; this will produce the list of SRC items. Be vigilant when searching; items are often listed under the name of the author of the piece, and not the editor, e.g. an essay taken out of Allan Ingram (ed.), Voices of Madness appears under Alexander Cruden, author of the essay, not Ingram.

Books and articles are not listed alphabetically in the reading list, but organised around themes and periods. Make good use of journal literature; don't rely on books only (e.g. History of Psychiatry, Medical History, Social History of Medicine, Bulletin of the History of Medicine, Psychological Medicine, Journal of Social History, etc.). Part of the remit of the course is to encourage you to trace and make use of further reading, so use bibliographies and footnotes to seek out material not on the reading list, especially for your essays. The reading list is not exhaustive – the literature on the history of insanity is simply colossal (especially for the 19th century). There are a limited number of some books (several are out of print). Do your best to get hold of them; if you have difficulties, read other starred or non-starred items on the reading list, and be prepared to go back and read the scarcer items later.

Abbreviations

Books used intensively throughout the course; a copy of each should be available in SRC and are abbreviated thus on the reading list:

Anatomy of Madness:

W.F. Bynum, Roy Porter and Michael Shepherd (eds), Anatomy of Madness, 3 vols. (Vol. I: 'People and Ideas'; Vol. II: 'Institutions and Society'; Vol. III: 'The Asylum and Its Psychiatry') (London and New York: Tavistock, 1985, 1985, 1988).

150 Years of British Psychiatry:

G.E. Berrios and H. Freeman (eds), 150 Years of British Psychiatry 1841-1991 (London: Athlone, 1991).

150 Years of British Psychiatry II:

Hugh Freeman and German Berrios (eds), 150 Years of British Psychiatry. Volume II: the Aftermath (London: Athlone, 1996).

Micale and Porter, Discovering:

M.S. Micale and Roy Porter (eds), Discovering the History of Psychiatry (Oxford University Press, 1994).

Faber Book of Madness:

Roy Porter (ed.), The Faber Book of Madness (London: Faber and Faber, 1991).

Insanity, Institutions and Society:

Joseph Melling and Bill Forsythe (eds), Insanity, Institutions and Society, 1800-1914 (London and New York: Routledge, 1999).

Outside the Walls:

Peter Bartlett and David Wright (eds), Outside the Walls of the Asylum: The History of Care in the Community 1750-2000 (London: Athlone, 1999).

Madhouses, Mad-Doctors, and Madmen:

Andrew Scull (ed.), Madhouses, Mad-Doctors, and Madmen: The Social History of Psychiatry in the Victorian Era (London: Athlone, 1981).

Shorter, A History of Psychiatry:

Edward Shorter, A History of Psychiatry: From the Era of the Asylum to the Age of Prozac (New York: Wiley, 1997).

Richard A. Hunter and Ida Macalpine, Three Hundred Years of Psychiatry: 1535-1860 (London: Oxford University Press, 1963). Old and somewhat dated, but still useful.

M.S. Micale and Roy Porter (eds), Discovering the History of Psychiatry (Oxford University Press, 1994). Packed with useful essays, particularly strong on historiography. SRC

Michael H. Stone, Healing the Mind: A History of Psychiatry from Antiquity to the Present (London: Pimlico, 1998). (An 'everything you ever wanted to know'... but a useful starting point to many topics, so long as you don't rely on it too much!).

SYLLABUS

Please note the reading list gives additional themes and sub-topics not included in the syllabus. This is to give you a wider choice when selecting essay subjects and titles.

1. The Madness of King George
2. 'Mystical Bedlam' and Madness in the 17th and 18th Centuries
3. The Private Asylum Trade of the 18th and Early 19th Centuries
4. Bethlem Hospital, the Birth of Moral Treatment and the York Retreat
5. The Lunatic Asylum: From Reform to Institutionalisation
6. Foucault and His Critics
7. Professional Identity: From Mad Doctor to Psychiatrist
8. Madness at the 'Periphery': Regions and Colonies
9. Women and Madness
10. Hysteria, Neurasthenia, Shell-Shock and PTSD
11. Degeneration, Hereditary Insanity and Mental Deficiency
12. 'The Patient's View': Case Histories and Narratives
13. Therapies: Psychoanalysis, ECT and Psychosurgery
14. 'Outside the Walls of the Asylum': Anti-Psychiatry to Care in the Community
15. Representations of Madness: 'Picturing the Insane'

TERM 1

TOPIC 1 (WEEK 2)

The Madness of King George

1. Did King George III's treatment at the hands of his doctors closely reflect the way madness was understood in Georgian England?
2. Was the King's madness a turning point for 18th-century psychiatry?

 Film: The Madness of King George, Directed by Nicholas Hytner, 1994 (106 minutes).

(We will view this film at the usual seminar times, Tuesday 1.00-3.00 and Wednesday 9.00-11.00, in Week 2 but also discuss the film as part of the seminar in Week 3. Two copies of the film are available to loan from SRC; also available from Blockbuster outlets.)

Read as many of the starred items as possible before the seminar:

 Ida Macalpine and Richard Hunter, George III and the Mad-Business (Penguin edn, 1969; London: Pimlico, 1991), read as much as possible, ch. 3 'Confinement at Kew' is in SRC box as well as one copy of the book in SRC (Available in paperback)

 Roy Porter, A Social History of Madness: Stories of the Insane (London: Weidenfeld and Nicolson, 1987, 1996), ch. 3 'Madness and Power'. Book in SRC (Available in paperback and a good book to buy for the course in general)

* Ida Macalpine, 'George III's Illness and its Impact on Psychiatry', Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine, 58 (1965), 31-40. SRC box

* Roy Porter, Mind-For'g Manacles: A History of Madness in England from the Restoration to the Regency (London: Athlone, 1987; Penguin edn, 1990). SRC

+ M.T. Haslam, 'The Willis Family and George III', HP, 8 (1997), 539-53. SRC box

+ Michael MacDonald, 'Lunatics and the State in Georgian England', SHM, 2 (1989), 299-319. SRC box

TOPIC 2 (WEEK 3)

'Mystical Bedlam' and Madness in the 17th and 18th Centuries

We will also allow time to discuss the film The Madness of King George in this seminar.

1. How was madness explained in the early modern period?
2. Describe and discuss Richard Napier's therapeutic regime.
3. Explain shifts in the relationship between madness and religion in the 17th and 18th centuries.

4. How far and in what ways did the treatment of the insane become more 'psychiatric' in the 18th century?
5. What impact did the Enlightenment have on the treatment of the insane?
6. 'The 18th century was a disaster for the insane'. Do you agree?

Again read as big a selection of the starred items as possible; MacDonald's book is difficult to get hold of and I will give a brief overview of this important study during the seminar. We will look in detail at Bethlem Hospital in two weeks time, but I want to give a foretaste in this session, not least to discuss the symbolic importance of 'Bethlem'.

Mystical Bedlam

 Michael MacDonald, Mystical Bedlam: Madness, Anxiety, and Healing in Seventeenth-Century England (Cambridge University Press, 1981), read as much as possible, ch. 2 is in SRC box and a copy of the book in SRC.

Cultures of Early Modern Insanity

 Michael MacDonald, 'Insanity and the Realities of History in Early Modern England', PM, 11 (1981), 11-25. SRC box

 Michael MacDonald, 'Religion, Social Change and Psychological Healing in England 1600-1800', in W. Sheils (ed.), The Church and Healing (Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1982), pp. 101-26. SRC box

 Roy Porter, Mind-For'g Manacles: A History of Madness in England from the Restoration to the Regency (London: Athlone, 1987; Penguin edn, 1990). SRC

TOPIC 3 (WEEK 4)

The Private Asylum Trade of the 18th and Early 19th Centuries

1. How and why did the private asylum trade develop in 18th-century England?
2. Private asylums were lucrative enterprises, but provided little therapeutic aid to their patients. Do you agree?
3. What can Cruden's account of his incarceration tell us about 18th-century asylums and the 'care' of the insane?

This week we will look at private asylums, and also have our first look at the 'patient's view' through the eyes of Alexander Cruden.

* DOCUMENT Allan Ingram, Voices of Madness: Four Pamphlets, 1683-1796 (Stroud: Sutton, 1997), esp. Alexander Cruden, 'The London-Citizen Exceedingly Injured, 1739', pp. 23-74. Essay in SRC box (There are other useful essays in this volume.)

TOPIC 4 (WEEK 5)

Bethlem Hospital, the Birth of Moral Treatment and the York Retreat

There is no shortage of reading material on the history of asylums and only a sample is listed here! We will devote two weeks (with the Reading Week in between) to this large subject area. The reading list should provide the basis for a diverse range of essays. I will provide a brief introduction (and handout) to public and county asylums and relevant legislation.

1. Was Bethlem Hospital a dumping ground for the unwanted, undesirable and troublesome in the early modern period?
2. How did the Tukes arrive at their system of moral management and how was this put into practice at the York Retreat?
3. How would you evaluate the rationale, significance and success of moral management and therapy?
4. What role did public asylums play in the early 19th century?

*DOCUMENTS Samuel Tuke (1784-1857), 'Description of the Retreat' (1813) and 'Report From the Committee On Madhouses in England' (1815), in Allan Ingram (ed.), Patterns of Madness in the Eighteenth Century: A Reader (Liverpool University Press, 1998), pp. 235-45, 46-55. SRC box

TOPIC 5 (WEEK 7)

The Lunatic Asylum: From Reform to Institutionalisation

1. Why were county asylums built in the 19th century?
2. 'A convenient place to get rid of inconvenient people'. Is this true for admissions to 19th-century asylums?
3. Did developments in psychiatry make an impact on asylums, and did asylums make an impact on psychiatry?
4. Who did asylums end up serving: patients, families, communities or doctors?

Scotland

The Scottish asylums overlap in many ways with the English institutions, but they were set up under their own lunacy laws and represent a strong commitment to the ideals of 'moral management' and also to ways of boarding patients outside the asylum. There is a rich literature on Scottish asylums, some of which is listed here:

TOPIC 6 (WEEK 8)

Foucault and His Critics

1. How well does Foucault's notion of a 'great confinement' reflect the reality of the asylum in England?
2. Does Madness and Civilization provide a framework for re-thinking the history of mental disorder?
3. 'Custodial rather than curative'. Discuss this verdict on the institutionalisation of the insane during the 18th and 19th centuries.

After asylums rather less reading, but do read Foucault – it is essential reading, and try to read some of the other literature for this week's session. Also think about what we have read and discussed in connection with asylums and cultures of psychiatry in previous weeks. (Try to read the material you couldn't get hold of now) Look in particular at the work of Roy Porter, Akihito Suzuki, Andrew Scull, Jo Melling and David Wright. Think about what asylums meant and did in different national contexts and in different periods and for different groups of patients. Everyone finds Foucault difficult to start with, but rewarding in the end even if his findings are disputable!

TOPIC 7 (WEEK 9)

Professional Identity: From Mad Doctor to Psychiatrist

1. Through what processes did mad-doctors evolve into psychiatrists during the 18th and 19th centuries?
2. What was the relationship between asylums and psychiatrists?
3. Why did some doctors reject asylums from the late 19th century onwards?

Much of the literature on the emergence of the psychiatric profession is submerged in the material on asylums. We will focus on 4 individuals: John Haslam (1764-1844), John Conolly (1794-1866), James Crichton-Browne (1840-1938), and Henry Maudsley (1835-1918) and I will ask four of you to prepare short presentations on these representatives of different 'stages' of psychiatric practice. TOPIC 9 (WEEK 3)

Women and Madness

1. Was a relationship constructed between women's reproductive lives and mental disorder in the 19th-century?
2. What, if anything, was special about the plight and treatment of mad women in England in the 19th century?
3. What does Charlotte Perkins Gilman's, The Yellow Wallpaper tell us about the position of women and ideas on female insanity in the late 19th century?

Please all read the short essay, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, The Yellow Wallpaper. There are numerous re-editions of this. The essay reprinted in Dale M. Bauer (ed.), The Yellow Wallpaper (Boston: Bedford Books, 1998), is in SRC box. There is also a large literature on Gilman and The Yellow Wallpaper, around PS.1744.156. Julie Bates Dock, Charlotte Perkins Gilman's 'The Yellow Wallpaper' and the History of its Publication and Reception (Pennsylvania University Press, 1998) is useful as are the essays in Bauer (ed.). Showalter has been very influential - her work is very readable and alluring - but try hard to develop a critical approach to her conclusions!

TOPIC 10 (WEEK 4)

Hysteria, Neurasthenia, Shell-Shock and PTSD

1. Was hysteria 're-invented' between the 17th and the 20th centuries?
2. How did discussions on hysteria reflect ideas on women's nature and social role in the 19th century?
3. How was shell-shock explained and treated, and did it influence psychiatric practice more generally?
4. Discuss and assess Elaine Showalter's Hystories.

TOPIC 12 (WEEK 7)

The Patient's View: Case Histories and Narratives

1. What can patient narratives tell us about attitudes to the insane and their treatment in the 18th and 19th centuries?
2. What prompted patients to describe their experiences of confinement or mental disorder?
3. Can case notes be useful in developing our perceptions of insanity and therapies in the 19th century?

TOPIC 13 (WEEK 8)

Therapies: Psychoanalysis, ECT and Psychosurgery

1. Was (is) psychoanalysis a final chapter or mere hiatus in the history of psychiatry?
2. Why was Freud so influential?
3. Why were shock therapies and psychosurgery embraced so enthusiastically by psychiatrists in the first half of the 20th century?
4. 'The physician's maxim to "do no harm" never clashes more with the desperate need to "do something" than in the case of psychosurgery'. Discuss.

'Outside the Walls of the Asylum: Anti-Psychiatry to Care in the Community

1. 'Madness is the destructuring of the alienated structures of an existence and the restructuring of a less alienated way of being' (David Cooper, 1978). Is this an apt take on anti-psychiatry's ideas of the sane and insane?
2. How influential was anti-psychiatry?
3. Why was the asylum abandoned in the 20th century?
4. Abandoning the asylums also meant abandoning the insane. Do you agree?
5. Discuss the idea and impact of 'care in the community' since the 19th century.

TOPIC 15 (WEEK 10)

Representations of Madness: 'Picturing the Insane'

In this session we will attempt to pull some of the themes of the course together by telling the story of the mad through pictures: paintings, sketches, patients' art, and photography. Try to pick out illustrative material as we work our way through the course that might help us to understand how madness was perceived and depicted in the past. We will also tie this session in with the viewing of film material e.g. The Snake Pit and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

1. In what ways can art further our understanding of madness in different periods?
2. Why was photography seized upon as a valuable tool of diagnosis and classification?
3. How does film assist in spreading ideas and images of psychiatric themes across the population?
