The European Fish Price Report, based on information supplied by industry correspondents, aims to provide guidance on broad price trends. Price information is indicative and FAO is not responsible for any errors or omissions. Prices are used to show medium to long-term trends.

LATEST TRENDS

European import price trends as reported by correspondents are broadly similar to those reported for March and April. Indications for frozen groundfish fillets and chilled farmed flatfish remain generally stable while the positive trend for for seabass and seabream as well as for frozen yellowfin tuna continues. Shrimp price trends appear mixed with reports of weaker warmwater shrimp prices but upward supply based pressures on European coldwater prices. Pelagic markets are slow with low frozen mackerel and herring stocks reported in Norway ahead of the 2007/2008 season.

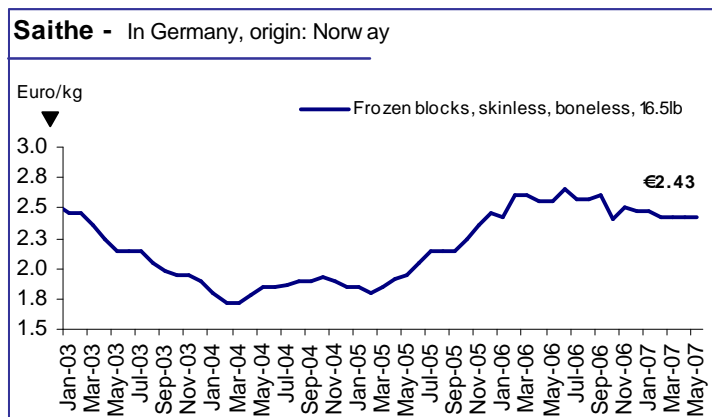

GROUNDFISH

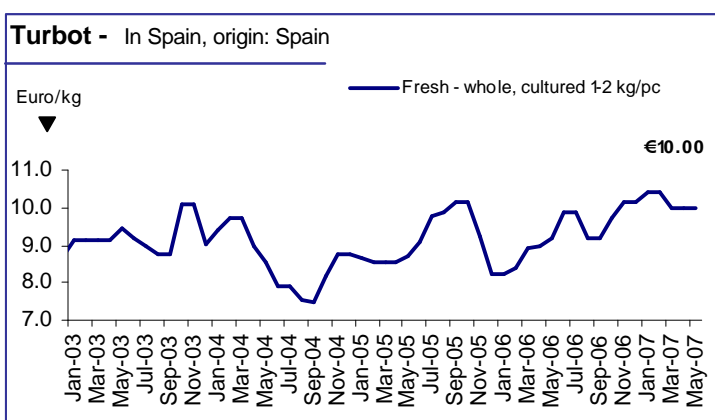

The stable trend in dollar prices for frozen groundfish fillets is again evident this month. Skinless, boneless Alaska pollack blocks of US origin are quoted at US$2.95/kg delivered Europe with fillets of Russian origin some 5% lower. Pinbone-in fillets are at US$2.65/kg, a level unchanged since the last quarter of 2006. In the hake segment, hubbsi and gayi fillets are reported in the US$3.15-3.20/kg range, a level unchanged in recent months but, in the case of hubbsi, slightly down on the beginning of the year. Due to the recent dollar weakness, prices for dollar denominated products such as Alaska pollack and South American hake, have declined in euro terms over the course of this year.

Prices for European species are also stable this month with frozen cod fillets of Polish or Norwegian origin at €5.95/kg, in line with recent months but up on the start of the year. Saithe fillet prices are unchanged at around €2.43/kg but slightly lower than in January. The negative trend in saithe fillet prices this year is reflected in recent Norwegian export figures which show average unit values for April 2007 at Nok17.20/kg, 5% below the average of Nok18.15/kg for the January-April period.

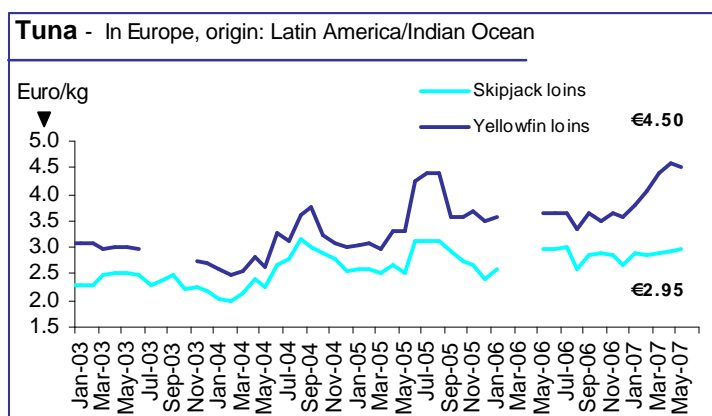

FLATFISH

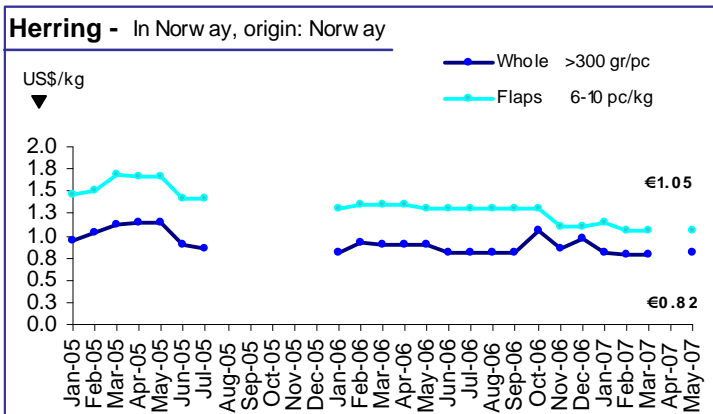

Demand for Spanish farmed turbot is described as steady and the broad stability in cif (Spain) prices this year has continued into May. Prices are expected to remain stable going into June due to low reported stock levels at farm level in Spain which is likely to balance increased price competition from wild product as the new season gets underway this month.

TUNA

The shortage of yellowfin continues to dominate the global tuna market with prices of whole raw material and loins maintaining high levels. In the Seychelles, frozen whole yellowfin reached EUR1 670/tonne FOB and in the EU frozen loins reached US$6 100/tonne CFR. Nevertheless, the strength of the Euro against the United States' dollar mitigated the financial impact of the shortage of yellowfin on EU importers. Skipjack catches improved in the Indian Ocean through significant landings by the EU fleet in the Mozambique Channel. However, cold storage holdings are still poorly supplied and skipjack prices remain high. At present, frozen skipjack prices amount to EUR950/tonne FOB in the Seychelles, while loin prices are stable at US$4 000/tonne CFR in the EU. Overall, prices of both species are not expected to decline soon.

PELAGICS

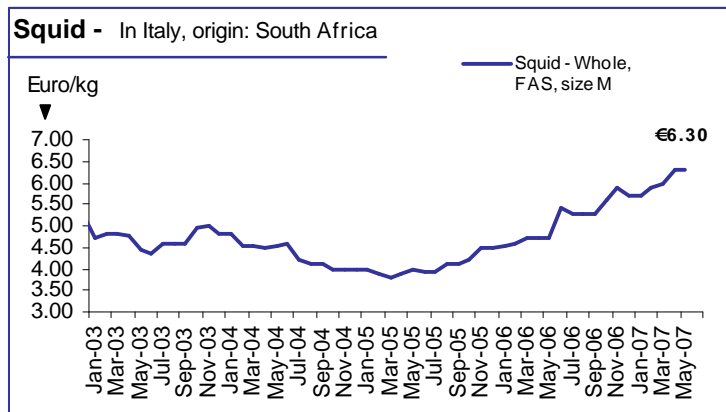

European pelagic markets are slow as the 2006-07 season winds down. The frozen stock situation for both mackerel and large round herring in Norway is reported weak which is seen as a hopeful price indicator for the start of the new season. Price indications delivered Russia for medium sized round herring grades are up between 5% and 12% on first quarter prices, a development reflecting no doubt poor frozen stock levels at the moment. Demand for large frozen herring flaps is reported slow and prices, cfp Russia, are unchanged on March levels.

CEPHALOPODS

Strong European demand is reported for round sea-frozen Loligo squid. Prices, c&f Europe, for South African product remain relatively high although the upward trend which has been evident in recent months appears, at least provisionally, to have come to an end. Catch levels in South Africa have improved after a disappointing start to the current season. With a strong demand supply gap, upward pressure on price may, however, be expected to continue.

CRUSTACEANS

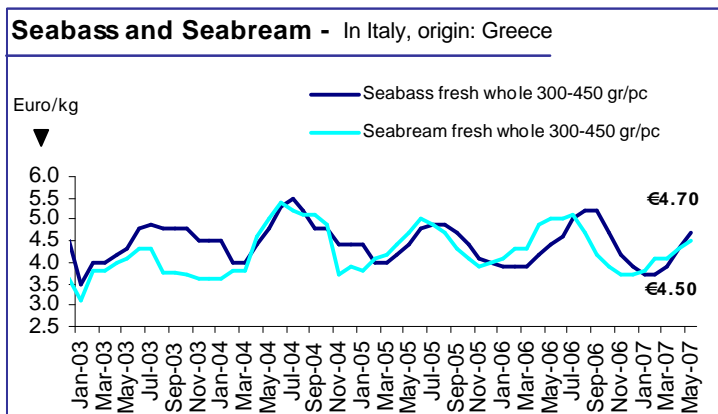

Correspondents' reports are mixed regarding current European market trends for shrimp. A relatively strong supply context for warmwater shrimp appears to be maintaining downward price pressure in this segment. Weaker prices are reported for P. vannamei products from Indonesia. At the same time, a shortage of coldwater prawns is reported in Norway and price indications, ddp UK, for peeled Pandalus are up around 4-10% on first quarter indications, depending on size grade,.

With reports of a likely increase in wild shrimp supplies from Argentina, some negative price pressure in markets such as Spain and Italy may be anticipated.

SEABASS/SEABREAM

The seasonal upward trend in seabream and seabass prices is again evident this month with delivered prices to both Italy and France for Greek seabream up between 4% and 7% on April indications for the medium grades (300-800gr range). Prices for the larger grades and the smaller 200-300gr grade are unchanged on last month. Increases are also reported for Greek seabass for the Italian and French markets although here, changes concern the small-medium grades with prices for the medium-large grades unchanged on April levels. On past trends, the positive price tendency should continue into June before new generation stocks help to ease the supply situation.
