Comment on: Interconnection of consumer generation
Comments: I'm keenly interested in the possibility of installing photo-voltaic (solar) panels for power generation at my home. TVA's Green Power Switch program includes an activity called "Generation Partners" that offers very attractive incentives to help make this happen. However, inquiries have shown that my local utility is not yet prepared to help homeowners like me participate. If adoption of revised standards for net metering and grid interconnection would help to pave the way for individuals and businesses to participate in such programs, then I'm eager to see both TVA and its distributors embrace the new provisions.
