Chairman Badge statement, 7/23/69

There has recently been discussion of an offer of employment which was made to me. The facts are these.

The president of a group of mutual funds, advised by Investors Diversified Services, Inc., proposes to retire and he, on behalf of the directors of the funds, offered and I declined the position of president of these funds. There would have been nothing improper in my having accepted it. To have done so would have been consistent with the position of the Commission and its rules for many years. At no time have I had any discussions with Investors Diversified Services, Inc. The funds have their own officers and directors. It is the responsibility of those officers and directors to protect the several billion dollar investment and to otherwise represent the interests of the well over a million investors in the funds.

In order to prevent conflicts of interest, the Commission's rules of conduct prohibit a member or employee from discussing employment with a person with whom he is transacting business on behalf of the United States. I have not done this.

Neither the federal statutes nor the rules of conduct prevent members and employees of the Commission from becoming employed in the securities or mutual fund industries and this frequently occurs.

The interpretations herein have been the historic interpretations and are concurred in by the Commission, its General Counsel and its Director of Personnel.
