General Comment: You are kidding, right? YOU tell us it is ok to eat melamine poisoned hogs. YOU tell us it is ok to eat melamine poisoned chickens. Yet YOU tell pregnant women, no don't handle it, not safe. A study has never been done - NEVER BEEN DONE - on just how much melamine poison is "safe" to eat. Yet you blather away, oh it's safe. And just what happens to the leftovers of all these million chickens and thousands of hogs? The remnants go right back into rendered dog food. More poison to kill dogs. Look, if you insist on killing everyone (well, the poor) at least give us a fighting chance, OK? Make meat producers and meat killers list on the package if this meat has been poisoned with melamine. Make dog food processors list right on the can if the contents have meat from melamine poison livestock. Actually you should be doing the same with chicken that is being fed arsenic, which humans then consume.

Actually, you should be doing the same with chicken feed that is made from rendered pets - dogs and cats - which is fed to chickens then humans consume. I am now being forced to make my own organic food for my 3 dogs. Simply because the FDA doesn't care anymore about the health and welfare of humans or pets. As a retired senior citizen I cannot afford this luxury, but I try to tell myself it will be cheaper than the thousands of dollars of vet bills that these contaminated pet foods will cost when they make my pets sick.
