Federal Information Systems Security Educators' Association
4th FREE WORKSHOP

"Best Practices for Executive-Level Training:
A Panel Discussion"
Wednesday, October 12th

Presented by: U.S. Department of State, Diplomatic Security Training Center Information Assurance Training Team in collaboration with the Federal Information Systems Security Educators' Association (FISSEA)

Overview: Attendees are invited to participate in a panel discussion on the best practices for designing and implementing information systems security training specifically tailored for the executive role. We will begin the discussion with an overview of how NIST SP 800-16 defines the executive role. Panelists will then discuss their personal experiences and lessons learned with the participants. This will include both instructor-led and distance learning options that are available for agencies to consider. The final item for the workshop will be to generate a list of possible options that can be used to deliver executive-level information systems security training. Thus, participants will leave with many ideas that can be used in their own organization for implementing information systems security training for executives.

Attendees: Training professionals interested in or responsible for ensuring that role-based training requirements are met in an effective learning environment. Attendees should be familiar with NIST or other federal guidance regarding information systems security, and related policies and procedures that have been developed by their agencies.
