EXECUTIVE ORDER

Reestablishing and Renaming the Colorado Community and Interagency Council on Homelessness

Pursuant to the authority vested in the Office of the Governor of the State of Colorado, I, Bill Ritter, Jr., Governor of the State of Colorado, hereby issue this Executive Order reestablishing and renaming the Colorado Interagency Council on Homelessness as the Colorado Community and Interagency Council on Homelessness.

1. Background, Need, and Purpose

On August 28, 2006, Colorado conducted a summer point-in-time count of homeless people statewide. Results from a subsequent winter count will be released soon. In those counts, nonprofit agencies and volunteers fanned out to survey homeless people and families in shelters, campgrounds, soup kitchens, transitional housing facilities and other places across the state frequented by the homeless. According to the February 2007 final report of the summer count, as many as 16,203 people were homeless on the single night of August 28.

According to analysis of other point-in-time surveys, it is almost certainly an undercount.

The summer survey demonstrated that homelessness is prevalent throughout Colorado. It is not solely an urban concern. Homelessness is real, though often underestimated, in the rural parts of our state. Only ten of Colorado's sixty-four counties reported no homeless people.

According to the summer point-in-time count, approximately 62% of the homeless are parents and children. Fully one-third of all the homeless people identified in the count were homeless children or teens.

The count also found that Coloradans from minority racial and ethnic groups were over-represented among the homeless. In addition, it showed that homelessness is not confined to the very poor. Working people and middle-class families also found themselves homeless.

Homelessness is traumatic for those who suffer it. It may mean families cannot stay together. It may be caused by and it may exacerbate significant health problems. It may seriously scar children in both their physical and mental health. It will almost certainly impede their academic and social progress.

For a caring community, homelessness creates both moral challenges and significant economic burdens, as people who lack permanent shelter and the ability to access regular support ricochet through separate but always expensive public and charitable systems – law enforcement, hospital emergency rooms, mental health programs, substance abuse treatment programs, shelters, and emergency housing.

Colorado needs a smarter, more humane, more effective approach to the issues of homelessness. At the very least, it needs to work on assuring that public resources, public programs and public efforts work together to confront, and to the extent possible, end homelessness.

The purpose of this Executive Order is to declare that we must give priority to developing consolidated, coordinated, and cooperative approaches to the issues of homelessness. This Executive Order is intended to provide guidance and directives to a reconvened, revitalized, and renamed Colorado Community and Interagency Council on Homelessness (the “Council”). This Executive supercedes and replaces Executive Order D 017 03, which established the current Colorado Interagency Council on Homelessness.

2. Mission

The objective of the Council is to make cross-agency and community cooperation the norm in responding to homelessness and to use a more efficient and supportive approach in creating and implementing evidence-based plans to address homelessness and, to the extent possible, end it.

To that end, the Council will work to:

- Streamline the administration of programs across agencies and jurisdictions to reduce duplication, consolidate availability of services and ease clients’ ability to access services;
- Streamline funding of homelessness programs to leverage existing resources more effectively;
- Facilitate tighter partnerships and linkages among service providers;

- Integrate state policy and coordinate relationships among all levels of public and non-profit agencies working to address homelessness;
- Increase access by homeless people and families to mainstream supportive services and resources for which they may be eligible;
- Solicit input and suggestions from faith communities, advocacy organizations, the business community, the concerned public and other governmental agencies on the most effective strategies to address homelessness;
- Assemble accurate data upon which strategies and policies should be based and against which outcomes can be measured;
- Identify best practices from other states in combating homelessness;
- Educate other involved agencies, the public and the legislature about the causes and consequences of homelessness; and
- Create comprehensive plans and develop effective collaborative strategies to prevent and end homelessness in Colorado.

The Council shall serve as the advisory body to the Governor on homeless issues and shall recommend such policies and programs as it believes will assist in preventing and, to the extent possible, ending homelessness in Colorado.

3. Membership

The Council shall consist of the following members:
