2000 Census Counts for Alaska Natives

Description of the Tables

Data Sources.

The population counts in this report were determined by merging three Census 2000 Redistricting Data (Public Law 94-171) base files for Alaska. They were machine-readable data files published by the U.S. Census Bureau in March 2001 labeled: AK00001, AK00002, and AKGEO. Statistical Package for the Social Sciences (SPSS) software was used to merge files and count population at the community level. The Census Bureau surveyed, but has not yet published, the correct population counts for Lime Village.

American Indian/Alaska Native Definition.

American Indian and Alaska Native individuals are defined as the 98,043 individuals who identified themselves as American Indian/Alaska Native (one race only) on the 2000 Census form, plus:

- The 19,506 individuals who identified themselves as American Indian/Alaska Native in addition to one other race.
- The 1,506 individuals who identified themselves as American Indian/Alaska Native in addition to two other races.
- The 157 individuals who identified themselves as American Indian/Alaska Native in addition to three other races.
- The 28 individuals who identified themselves as American Indian/Alaska Native in addition to four other races.
- The one individual who identified her/himself as American Indian/Alaska Native in addition to five other races.

Geographical Definition.

The communities listed in this report are Census Designated Places (CDP's) with two exceptions. Knik tribe is defined as a one mile radius around the village and the Eklutna tribe is defined as the Alaska Native Village Statistical Area of Eklutna. The service area of individuals living outside of census designated places were identified using P.L. 94-171 voting district/state legislative district outline maps (Census 2000). The block level maps used for this report can be found at http://ftp2.census.gov/plmap/pl_vtd/. The location of individuals living outside of census designated places are described in Appendix 3. Census area abbreviations are defined in Appendix 2.

Service Area Definition.

Most communities were grouped into health service areas based on the existence of a traditional council, IRA tribe (Indian Reorganization Act), ANCSA tribe (Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act) or regional tribe. Some communities were grouped based on where the residents receive health care services. Others were grouped based on mutual agreements between tribes on the provisions of health care services. Some inter-tribal agreements are still being negotiated.
