As a livestock producer, you understand that the value of your product is a direct result of your diligent care and handling of your animals. Take the first step to protect that investment by registering your premises with the voluntary National Animal Identification System (NAIS) program, a State-Federal-Industry partnership. Federal law protects individuals' private information and confidential business information from disclosure. At the Federal level, the system will hold and maintain only minimal premises information. This premises information helps first responders quickly determine the size and scope of a disease outbreak or other animal health event and the resources needed to contain it. Additional information about the NAIS program is available at the USDA website: www.usda.gov/nais.

Protect Your Animals

No one can help you protect your animals if they don't know where they are. By choosing to register your premises, animal health officials can quickly notify you when a disease situation may put your animals at risk. Knowing where animals are located and how to reach producers is the key to rapid, accurate, and cost-effective disease response.

Protect Your Neighbors

Premises registration is a critical element in preventing the spread of animal diseases. A disease outbreak can impact every segment of animal agriculture bringing hardships due to the loss of animals, jobs, and income. Choosing to participate in premises registration demonstrates your commitment to protect the larger agriculture community.

Protect Your Access To Markets

A single report of disease can shut down the movement of animals and call their health into question. Premises information can help quickly define which regions of our country are, and are not, affected by an outbreak, keeping markets open for unaffected producers and preventing unnecessary movement restrictions.

Participation is voluntary and it's free. Take a few minutes to provide basic contact information and location information on where the animals are located. On the back page, you will find instructions on filling out the form including a sample form. Return the form in the pre-paid stamped envelope.

If you tried to register your premises last year, but have not received a registration confirmation, please submit a new registration form. It may be that we did not receive sufficient information on the premises location for registration. New mapping tools have been added to help us research premises locations. If you no longer have livestock or poultry, please let us know, as we are continually updating our mailing lists.
