TWO STANFORD PROFS PREPARE TO LEAVE FOR KENNEDY INAUGURAL

Drs. Joshua Lederberg and Arthur Kornberg, both of the Med School, are among the 155 leading figures in the arts and sciences whom President-elect John F. Kennedy invited to his inaugural ceremonies Jan. 19 and 20 "in recognition of their importance." The professors and their wives will fly to Washington this afternoon. Invitational telegrams were sent to the persons "who have been judged to be the most creative, eminent and world-renowned in the arts, sciences and humanities," a spokesman said. Lederberg commented "In attending I feel I will be representing my colleagues at Stanford, other universities."

Registrar Reports on HS Grads

Registrar Harvey Hall cited yesterday a number of high schools in California and throughout the country whose graduates have made notable academic records at Stanford over the last three years.

In information taken from the annual Registrar's Report published by the University, Dr. Hall noted that among high schools with large numbers of students entering Stanford the following schools' graduates have averaged grade point averages of 2.8 or higher: Arcadia High School (15 students), Newport Harbor High School (17 students) and West
