LOCAL PROJECT SAFE NEIGHBORHOODS TEAM RETURNS FROM NATIONAL CONFERENCE WITH NEW TRAINING & RESOURCES TO FIGHT GUN CRIMES

Sacramento, California – Six members of the federal, state, and local Project Safe Neighborhoods team returned from the Justice Department conference in Philadelphia this weekend. More than 1,300 prosecutors, law enforcement officials, and community leaders attended the national conference to coordinate local strategies to prevent gun violence and take criminals who use guns off our nation's streets.

At the conference, local team members were addressed by several senior federal government officials, including Attorney General John Ashcroft, Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson and the Director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives Bradley Buckles.

"This conference was an important tool in bringing together all those who work to eliminate illegal gun use and make our streets more safe," said Attorney General John Ashcroft, who spoke at the conference. "The team of community, state and federal leaders and law enforcement officials will ensure that offenders face hard time in prison."

"Our district's program has focused on the Stockton and Bakersfield areas, and we are attempting to expand our efforts to other areas. This office is committed to reducing gun violence and is pleased to work with law enforcement and community leaders in this effort," said John K. Vincent, United States Attorney.

A number of federal grants to further these efforts have already been awarded, including a grant to the Kern County District Attorney's Office. More recently additional grants were awarded, including a grant of $400,000 to the San Joaquin County District Attorney's Office; that money will be used to hire a deputy district attorney and investigator enhancing the office's ability to prosecute juvenile gun crimes.

The Project Safe Neighborhoods conference provided training on topics from enforcement strategies to get gun violators off the streets, to school programs to prevent violence, to community partnership building initiatives. The conference continues Project Safe Neighborhoods' unprecedented coordination between all levels of government to implement a national strategy to prevent gun violence on a local level, and pursue the strongest possible punishment for those who violate firearms laws.

The national PSN conference was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Justice in partnership with the International Association of Chiefs of Police, National District Attorneys' Association and the National Crime Prevention Council.
