

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS

1965 | 2000

A BRIEF CHRONOLOGY OF FEDERAL SUPPORT FOR THE ARTS

President Johnson signs the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act, establishing the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities, on September 29, 1965.

Foreword

The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act was passed by Congress and signed into law by President Johnson in 1965. It states, “While no government can call a great artist or scholar into existence, it is necessary and appropriate for the Federal Government to help create and sustain not only a climate encouraging freedom of thought, imagination, and inquiry, but also the material conditions facilitating the release of this creative talent.” On September 29 of that year, the National Endowment for the Arts – a new public agency dedicated to strengthening the artistic life of this country – was created.

Now, at thirty-five years of age, the NEA continues to carry out its public service mandate through its commitment to fostering America’s creativity and investing in our living cultural heritage. By supporting artistic excellence, forging partnerships, building more livable communities, promoting lifelong arts education, and improving access to the arts for all citizens, the agency strengthens American democracy at its core.

This Chronology updates earlier versions published on the 20th and 30th anniversaries of the Arts Endowment, compiled to show how the agency came into being and evolved. It is not meant to be a definitive history of Federal arts support. Rather, it is an abbreviated version of the history and achievements of the Endowment.

The thirty-five year public investment in the arts has paid tremendous dividends. Since 1965, the Endowment has awarded more than 111,000 grants to arts organizations and artists in all 50 states and the six U.S. jurisdictions. The number of state and jurisdictional arts agencies has grown from 5 to 56. Local arts agencies now number over 4,000 – up from 400. Nonprofit theaters have grown from 56 to 340, symphony orchestras have nearly doubled in number from 980 to 1,800, opera companies have multiplied from 27 to 113, and now there are 18 times as many dance companies as there were in 1965.

Our arts are the hallmark of the creativity and diversity that make America strong. The Arts Endowment works diligently to make the arts central to the lives of individuals, families and communities. In the words of William James, “The greatest use of a life is to spend it on something that will outlast it.” As we enter a new millennium, the National Endowment for the Arts is nurturing our nation’s creativity and cultural heritage, advancing the nation’s cultural legacy for many future generations.

Chronology (1780-1965)

John Adams, in a letter to his wife, writes, “I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce, and agriculture, in order to give their children a right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture.”

1785

Thomas Jefferson writes to James Madison: “You see I am an enthusiast on the subject of the arts.”

1788

President George Washington declares that both “arts and sciences are essential to the prosperity of the state and to the ornament and happiness of human life.”

1790

Establishment of the United States Marine Band marks the first Federal support of a permanent musical ensemble.

1800

The Library of Congress is established by an Act of Congress to provide “such books as may be necessary for the use of Congress.” Art and music are included in the early collection.

1817

The 14th Congress commissions John Trumbull to paint four Revolutionary War scenes to hang in the Capitol Rotunda, the first Federal support of the visual arts.

1826

John Trumbull, President of the American Academy of Fine Arts, proposes to President John Quincy Adams a “Plan for the Permanent Encouragement of the Fine Arts by the National Government.”

1846

After 10 years of deliberation, Congress accepts the bequest of the late James Smithson, and establishes the Smithsonian Institution.

1859

President James Buchanan appoints a National Arts Commission to promote the arts, but it is disbanded two years later because of a lack of Congressional appropriations.

1879

Representative Samuel J. Cox (D-NY) introduces a Joint Resolution in Congress to establish “a council on arts matters.” No action is taken.

1891

President Benjamin Harrison signs legislation establishing the National Conservatory of Music in New York City. One year later it opens with Antonin Dvorak as its first artistic director.

1897

A Congressional proposal is introduced for a National Office of the Arts. No action is taken.

1899

The Utah Arts Institute is established, the first state-created arts council in the nation.

1906

The Federal government accepts the donation of the oriental art collection of Charles Lang Freer, who also provides for a building and endowment. The Freer Gallery, part of the Smithsonian Institution, opens to the public in 1923.

Chronology (1780-1965)

1909

President Theodore Roosevelt appoints a 30-member Council of Fine Arts, but it is shortly disbanded due to lack of funds.

1910

On May 17, President Taft and the Congress establish the Commission on Fine Arts “to advise generally upon questions of art.” It deals primarily with the architectural appearance of Washington, D.C.

1913

The National Institute of Arts and Letters is incorporated under a Federal charter by an Act of Congress. The American Academy of Arts and Letters is incorporated three years later, and both organizations merge in 1976.

1934

President Franklin D. Roosevelt establishes the Treasury Department’s Section on Painting and Sculpture, the first government bureau involving the arts, which assigns artists to decorate Federal buildings around the country.

1935

Public service employment programs are established under the Works Progress Administration: the Federal Writers Program, the Federal Theater Project, the Federal Art Project, and the Federal Music Project. More than 40,000 artists are directly employed by the government.

1937

Andrew W. Mellon donates his art collection to the United States, pledges funds for construction of the National Gallery of Art, and creates an endowment for the Gallery, which opens to the public in 1941.

1937

In Congress, Representative William I. Sirovich (D-NY) introduces legislation to establish a Department of Science, Art & Literature to be headed by a Cabinet-rank officer. Later in the year, Representative John M. Coffee (D-WA) introduces a bill to establish a Bureau of Fine Arts. Neither proposal is reported out of committee.

1938

Senator Claude Pepper (D-FL) introduces a bill for the creation of a Bureau of Fine Arts. The bill is not reported out of committee.

1948–49

The country’s first local arts agencies are established: the Quincy Society of Fine Arts in Illinois and the Winston-Salem Arts Council in North Carolina.

1949

Congressman Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) introduces House Joint Resolution 104 in the 81st Congress to provide for a national theater, national opera and national ballet. Javits stresses that he is not talking about a physical structure, but rather “an integrated, country-wide organization aided by the Federal government.” The Resolution is not reported out of committee.

1951

President Harry S. Truman asks the Commission on Fine Arts to investigate ways in which the arts could be helped by the Federal government.

1953

The Commission on Fine Arts reports to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, recommending that a cultural center be established in Washington, D.C., under the jurisdiction of the Federal government.

1955

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union address, advocates the establishment of a Federal Advisory Commission on the Arts: “In the advancement of the various activities which would make our civilization endure and flourish, the Federal government should do more to give official recognition of the importance of the arts and other cultural activities.”

1955

Numerous bills to support the arts are introduced in Congress over the next several years, but no action beyond limited hearings is taken. Nelson Rockefeller, then Undersecretary of Health, Education and Welfare, pushes for the establishment of a National Council on the Arts but is unsuccessful with Congress.

1958

President Eisenhower signs P.L. 85-874 to establish a national cultural center for the performing arts. Thirteen years later, the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts opens in Washington, D.C.

1960

The New York State Council on the Arts is founded by Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

February 9, 1961

Representative Frank Thompson (D-NJ) introduces H.R. 4172 to establish an advisory council on the arts, within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, that would coordinate private and government arts activities. Hearings are held, but the bill is defeated in the House.

September 2, 1961

President John F. Kennedy appoints Roger L. Stevens as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the National Cultural Center.

March 1962

President Kennedy appoints August Heckscher as his Special Consultant on the Arts and asks him to prepare a report on the relationship between the arts and the Federal government.

January 14, 1963

Senator Javits (R-NY) introduces S. 165 “to establish a United States National Arts Foundation.” Initial co-sponsors are Senators Joseph Clark (D-PA), Hubert Humphrey (D-MN), and Claiborne Pell (D-RI).

April 11, 1963

Senator Humphrey introduces S. 1316 “to establish a National Council on the Arts and a National Arts Foundation to assist the growth and development of the arts in the United States.” Initial co-sponsors are Senators Clark, John Sherman Cooper (R-KY), Javits, Russell B. Long (D-LA), Lee Metcalf (D-MT), Pell, Jennings Randolph (D-WV), Abraham Ribicoff (D-CT), and Hugh Scott (R-PA).

August Hecksher submits his report, The Arts and the National Government, which recommends the establishment of an Advisory Council on the Arts and a National Arts Foundation to administer grants-in-aid.

June 12, 1963

By Executive Order 11112, President Kennedy establishes the President's Advisory Council on the Arts. The President is assassinated before members can be appointed.

"We have agencies of the Government which are concerned with the welfare and advancement of science and technology, of education, recreation, and health. We should now begin to give similar attention to the arts."

October 26, 1963

At the dedication of a new library at Amherst College and as a tribute to the poet Robert Frost, President Kennedy says:

"I see little of more importance to the future of our country and our civilization than full recog- nition of the place of the artist. If art is to nourish the roots of our culture, society must set the artist free to follow his vision wherever it takes him.

"I look forward to an America which will reward achievement in the arts as we reward achievement in business or statecraft.

"I look forward to an America which will steadily raise the standards of artistic accomplishment and which will steadily enlarge cultural opportunities for all our citizens."

December 20, 1963

After hearings chaired by Senator Pell, Chairman of the Senate Special Subcommittee on the Arts, the Senate passes S. 2379 which combines provisions of the two earlier bills, S. 165 and S. 1316, to establish a National Council on the Arts and a National Arts Foundation.

January 8, 1964

In the House, Representative Thompson introduces H.R. 9586 and H.R. 9587, both "to provide for the establishment of a National Council on the Arts and a National Arts Foundation to assist in the growth and development of the arts in the United States."

January 23, 1964

President Lyndon B. Johnson signs Senate Joint Resolution 136, renaming the National Cultural Center as the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and designating it as Kennedy's official memorial in Washington.

May 13, 1964

President Johnson names Roger L. Stevens as Special Assistant to the President on the Arts, the first full-time arts advisor.

August 20, 1964

H.R. 9586, to establish a National Council on the Arts, passes the House of Representatives by a vote of 213 to 135. The Senate passes the bill the following day on a voice vote.

September 3, 1964

The National Arts and Cultural Development Act of 1964 is signed by the President, establishing the National Council on the Arts, providing for a chairman, the Secretary of the Smithsonian ex officio, and 24 other members to “recommend ways to maintain and increase the cultural resources of the Nation and to encourage and develop greater appreciation and enjoyment of the arts by its citizens.” One month later, an appropriation of $50,000 is approved for the National Council on the Arts.

December 2, 1964

President Johnson breaks ground for the Kennedy Center.

“No act of Congress or Executive Order can call a great musician or poet into existence. But we can stand on the sidelines and cheer. We can maintain and strengthen an atmosphere to permit the arts to flourish, and those who have talent to use it. And we can seek to enlarge the access of all our people to artistic creation.”

February–March 1965

Special subcommittees of both Houses of Congress (chaired by Pell in the Senate and Thompson in the House) hold hearings on legislation to establish a National Arts Foundation.

February 23, 1965

President Johnson appoints 24 members and one ex officio member to the National Council on the Arts.

March 10, 1965

President Johnson asks the 89th Congress to establish the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities.

“This Congress will consider many programs which will leave an enduring mark on American life. But it may well be that passage of this legislation, modest as it is, will help secure for this Congress a sure and honored place in the story of the advance of our civilization.”

Administration bills are introduced in both Houses of Congress by Pell and Thompson.

March 11, 1965

Roger L. Stevens is appointed Chairman of the National Council on the Arts by the President.

March 19, 1965

The Rockefeller Brothers Fund issues the results of a two-year study entitled The Performing Arts: Problems and Prospects which lists a number of recommendations, including one that states: “. . . while private support should remain dominant, the Federal government — together with state and local governments — should give strong support to the arts, including the performing arts, by appropriate recognition of their importance, by direct and indirect encouragement, and by financial cooperation.” Nancy Hanks is director of the Special Studies Project staff that compiles the report.

April 9–10, 1965

The first meeting of the National Council on the Arts convenes at the White House with President Johnson swearing in the members:

“Our civilization will largely survive in the works of our creation. There is a quality in art which speaks across the gulf dividing man from man and nation from nation, and century from century. That quality confirms the faith that our common hopes may be more enduring than our conflicting hostilities. Even now men of affairs are struggling to catch up with the insights of great art.

The stakes may well be the survival of civilization.”

June 10, 1965

The Senate debates and passes an amended S. 1483 to establish a National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities.

June 24–27, 1965

The second meeting of the National Council on the Arts is held in Tarrytown, New York.

September 15, 1965

The House passes S. 1483, with amendments. The following day, the Senate agrees with House amendments and passes legislation establishing the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities as an umbrella for the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities and their respective Councils.

September 29, 1965

President Johnson signs P.L. 89-209, the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act.

“Art is a nation’s most precious heritage. For it is in our works of art that we reveal ourselves, and to others, the inner vision which guides us as a nation. And where there is no vision, the people perish.”

Under this new law, Arts Council membership is increased to 26. The Chairman of the National Council on the Arts, Roger Stevens, becomes first Chairman of the Arts Endowment. Henry Allen Moe becomes the first Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The Foundation is composed of the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities, an interagency committee of Federal officials. The Foundation has no administrative or programming identity separate from its components. Each of the two Endowments is served by a respective advisory body, the National Council on the Arts and the National Council on the Humanities.

1966

JULY 1, 1965-JUNE 30, 1966

With its first appropriations bill signed October 31, 1965, the National Endowment for the Arts starts its fiscal year with only eight months remaining, a budget of $2.5 million, and fewer than a dozen employees.

Over the course of the first year, six active programs begin: Music, Dance, Literature, Visual Arts, Theater and Education. Some 22 institutions and 135 individuals are funded. Roger Stevens says: "We believe that the time has come for our society to give not merely ceremonial honor to the arts, but genuine attention and substantive support."

The third meeting of the National Council on the Arts is held on November 13-15, 1965, in Tarrytown, New York. The Council discusses whether to use outside panels and resolves that the Chairman "appoint committees of interested and qualified persons or organizations to advise the Council with respect to projects, policies or special studies as may be undertaken by the Council from time to time."

The Council also requests a feasibility study which results in the establishment of the American Film Institute in 1967. Programs of individual grants for choreographers to create and produce dance works and theater performances for secondary school students are launched.

On December 20, 1965, Vice President Hubert Humphrey presents a check for $100,000, representing the Endowment's first grant, to the American Ballet Theatre. The New York Herald Tribune reports:

"The Treasury of the United States has saved a national treasure. Not directly, perhaps, but the taxpayers, through the government's recently established National Council on the Arts, saved the American Ballet Theatre from extinction."

The National Council on the Arts holds its fourth meeting, this time in Washington, D.C. The Martha Graham Dance Company is recommended for funding to make its first national tour in 15 years, and a grant also goes to the Robert Joffrey Ballet.

"Dialogues on the Art of Poetry," a poets-in-the-schools pilot project, is launched by the Literature Program in school systems in New York City, Detroit and Pittsburgh.

Roger Stevens announces the receipt of $100,000 from the Martin Foundation, the first donation to the special Treasury Account, established under the Endowment's legislation and requiring a 3-to-1 match in non-Federal to Federal funds.

At the fifth meeting of the Council, the Federal-State Partnership Program, mandated by law to begin in Fiscal Year 1967, is launched, with $2 million to be made available to all 50 states and special U.S. jurisdictions. The first grants for non-profit professional theaters are recommended, and funds are set aside for art in public places. The Council discusses and later recommends ways to involve the United States in international arts events. A matching grant is made to provide a United States exhibit, assembled by the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian Institution, at the September 1966 Biennale in Venice.

JULY 1, 1966-JUNE 30, 1967

For its first full fiscal year of operation, the Endowment budget is $7,965,692 and new programs in Architecture, Planning & Design, Federal-State Partnerships, and Public Media are added. Expenditures include $1,007,500 for Theater, $892,780 for Education and $39,500 for Folk Arts. A Music Advisory Panel is established.

Chairman Stevens warns that “there is at the present time, in the performing arts alone, an income gap of about $20 to $23 million per year. This figure will reach at least $60 million by 1975.” Stevens adds that “the Federal government cannot, and should not, be expected to carry the total burden. This must be a cooperative effort, to include private enterprise, foundations, state and municipal support, regional organizations and individual contributions.”

The National Council, at its sixth meeting in Washington, D.C., recommends the first grants to individual creative writers, three pilot museum projects, opera touring, public television programs and others.

Performing Arts — The Economic Dilemma, by Professors William J. Baumol and William G. Brown, is published in November by The Twentieth Century Fund. The book supports the earlier Rockefeller Report and adds the sobering conclusion that “the need of the performing groups for contributed funds is likely to continue to grow ever larger.”

At the December meeting of the National Council, an initial fund of $1.3 million is set aside for an American Film Institute and a series of grants is made in the field of architecture and design. A program of individual grants for painters and sculptors is launched.

Five months later at its May meeting in Tarrytown, New York, the Council formally recommends that the American Film Institute be established with $1.3 million from the Endowment and matching private donations of $1.3 million from the Ford Foundation and $1.3 million from the member companies of the Motion Picture Association of America. The Music Program’s Audience Development Project is established to fund presenters of local concert series for young or unknown artists, and grants are recommended to assist individual composers. The Literature Program offers assistance to non-commercial presses.

The American Film Institute is established on June 5, 1967 as a non-profit, non-government corporation with George Stevens, Jr., as Director and Gregory Peck as Chairman of the Board. The AFI is to preserve and develop the nation's artistic and cultural resources in film.

On June 20, 1967, President Johnson requests the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities to prepare a report on the status of the nation's museums. The Federal Council commissions the American Association of Museums to undertake this project.

Created by the Endowment in 1967, the American Film Institute has been at the forefront of preserving America's rich film heritage, including Broken Blossoms (1919) starring Lillian Gish.

The Endowment's budget is $7.2 million and grants are made to 187 individuals and 276 organizations. Reauthorization for two more years of operation is approved by Congress despite some criticism about aiding the arts during the nation's growing involvement in Vietnam.

Two endeavors are added: a dance touring program and grants for museums to purchase the works of living American artists. The "American Musical Digest" is launched with the Endowment's support to strengthen music criticism through excerpting, translating and reprinting articles and reviews on American music and musicians from local, national and international publications. The first grant for regional arts programming goes to the Federation of Rocky Mountain States for an audience development project.

The ninth meeting of the National Council on the Arts is held in July, 1967 in Los Angeles. Part of the discussion focuses on the conversion of the old Bell Telephone Laboratories on New York's Lower West Side into a national artists' housing center. An Endowment matching grant with the J.M. Kaplan Fund makes this project possible, and groundbreaking for Westbeth takes place on June 21, 1968. Six regional dance companies are recommended for support.

At the next meeting of the Council in Washington, D.C., support for literary festivals and grants to young writers is recommended. The Endowment helps establish the Theatre Development Fund, and arts demonstration projects in New York City, Buffalo, Minneapolis and Louisville are funded in partnership with the newly formed AFL-CIO Council for Scientific, Professional and Cultural Employees. During that same autumn, at the instigation of David Rockefeller and other corporate leaders, the Business Committee for the Arts is established under the chairmanship of C. Douglas Dillon to stimulate corporate support for the arts.

The Endowment's budget is $7.8 million with $326,750 going to Architecture, $641,627 going to Dance, $526,450 going to Education, $332,000 going to Literature, $861,620 to Music, $222,200 to Public Media, $1,007,600 to Theater, $336,800 to Visual Arts, $469,550 to Coordinated Arts, and $1.7 million to Federal-State Partnership. Formal panels now adjudicate applications in the majority of programs. A $100,000 transfer from the Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to the Endowment's Education Program initiates a program placing visual artists in secondary schools. In November, the Conditions and Needs of America's Museums (The Belmont Report) is sent to President Johnson by the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities.

On January 20, 1969, Richard M. Nixon is sworn in as President of the United States. Roger Stevens' term expires as first Chairman of the Endowment on March 11. In June of that year, Leonard Garment is named Special Consultant to the President, and his duties include the arts and the humanities.

On December 10, 1969, President Nixon in a special message to Congress says: “The attention and support we give the arts and the humanities, especially as they affect our young people, represent a vital part of our commitment to the quality of life for all Americans.”

President Nixon asks the Congress to reauthorize the two Endowments for another three years.

A grant to the College Entrance Examination Board supported the establishment of three innovative Advanced Placement Courses, two in the visual arts and one in music. This is the first time that the arts have been included in the Board's program for high school seniors, which provides college credit and advances students immediately beyond the introductory courses offered college freshmen.

The first budget under Chairman Nancy Hanks is $15.1 million, almost double that for Fiscal Year 1970. The Museum Program is launched, as is the Expansion Arts Program for professionally directed, community-based arts activities. A full program of support for symphony orchestras is put into place. The Visual Arts Program formalizes support for photography.

Existing peer panels are expanded and additional panels are established for the Literature, Museum, Expansion Arts, Public Media and Special Projects Programs. America pay off so handsomely as the money spent to stimulate the arts."

The President directs all federal agencies and executive departments to see how the arts can benefit their programs and how their programs might assist artists.

There are now 10 advisory panels. Nancy Hanks notes that panel members will serve on a rotating basis with terms of approximately three years. Under this new system, the first rotation occurs in July of 1972.

The Endowment's budget nearly doubles again — to $29,750,000 — and existing programs are expanded. Full programs of support are established for opera companies and for jazz. The Endowment's budget is now $38.2 million. Advisory panels now number over 200, including such well-known individuals as Zelda Fichandler and Harold Prince in theater, Roy Lichtenstein and George Segal in visual arts, Julian "Cannonball" Adderly, Rise Stevens, Robert Shaw and Gian-Carlo Menotti in music, and Toni Morrison and Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. in literature.

The Visual Arts Program offers Craftsmen's Fellowships. The Artrain, begun in Michigan in 1971 and supported by the Endowment, moves west to visit 30 towns in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Nevada.

On April 2–3, 1973, the First Federal Design Assembly, sponsored by the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities, is held to increase the awareness by Federal administrators of the importance of good design.

As it begins its tenth year, the Endowment's budget has risen to $74,750,000. More than 14,000 applications pour in from all over the country. Staffing is more than 250 people.

Encouraged by the success of earlier specials featuring the American Ballet Theatre and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre, an Endowment grant to the Educational Broadcasting Corporation (WNET-TV) initiates the "Dance in America" series on public television. The series premieres in January 1976 with a feature on the Joffrey Ballet.

Stone Enclosure: Rock Rings is a commissioned work on the campus of Western Washington University by Nancy Holt, a 1975 Visual Arts Program Fellowship recipient.

Beginning in Fiscal Year 1975, instead of authorizing a specific dollar amount for the state arts agencies as the original legislation had done, the reauthorization stipulates that no less than 20 percent of all program funds must go to the state arts agencies and "regional organizations," with 75 percent of this amount being divided equally among the state arts agencies. Each of the 50 states and five jurisdictions is eligible to receive at least $200,000 to support local programs.

The two-year City Spirit program is launched, with $2 million available in matching grants for cities, towns and neighborhoods to strengthen and showcase their own cultural heritage and creativity.

In August 1974, President Gerald R. Ford is sworn into office. In an August 23rd letter to Nancy Hanks on the upcoming, second Federal Design Assembly, President Ford says: "I firmly believe that, in order to inspire the people's pride in their Government, we must provide them with manifest evidence of its vitality, creativity and efficiency by setting the highest standard in architectural design, environmental planning and visual communication."

The Federal government changes the parameters of its fiscal year so that it now begins on October 1 and ends the following September 30. The Endowment's budget is $82 million for Fiscal Year 1976, and an additional $34 million is appropriated for July 1–September 30, 1976 as the "Transition Quarter."

The tenth anniversary of the Endowment is celebrated on September 29–30, 1975 at the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin, Texas. Participants include the National Council on the Arts, Lady Bird Johnson, Nancy Hanks, Hubert Humphrey, Jacob Javits, Kirk Douglas, James Wyeth, Robert Merrill and scores of others. Beverly Sills points out that although the Endowment's budget has increased, "we cannot be complacent or satisfied because there are a great many cities in this country that don't give one nickel toward their own cultural institutions."

The Arts: Years of Development, Time of Decision, a report on the two-day symposium at the LBJ Library, is later published by the LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

The Endowment budget is $94 million and more than 300 panelists help judge the merits of applications from the field. The Media Arts Program sets up the Short Film Showcase to help present the works of independent filmmakers in commercial movie houses nationwide.

On October 8, 1976, President Ford signs into law reauthorization for the Endowment for four more years. Chief Congressional sponsors are Congressman John Brademas (D-IN) and Senator Claiborne Pell. Congress establishes the Institute of Museum Services to provide general operating support to museums. National Council members, for the first time, require Senate confirmation.

Challenge Grants are authorized. Nancy Hanks notes: "Regardless of who the successful applicants are, the Endowment has injected a stimulus into the arts that will be felt far beyond the modest Federal funds expended. One Federal dollar can generate three or four private dollars, and 75 percent of those private contributors are likely to contribute again."

Nearly 20 years later, Nancy Hanks' expectations are exceeded. The Challenge Grant Program stimulates roughly eight dollars for every Federal dollar invested.

In January 1977, Jimmy Carter becomes President of the United States. Nancy Hanks serves the remainder of her second term.

After 18 months of work, the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies' Federal-State Study Committee released in May a recommendation that "an ongoing, structured process of policy planning between the Endowment and the state arts agencies be established on a formal, Endowment-wide basis."

On July 16–17, the National Support the Arts Conference is held in Washington, D.C. to “find ways to help local arts institutions help themselves in their efforts to gain long-term stability and independence,” Nancy Hanks tells the conference.

Later that summer, the first Round I Challenge Grants are announced. Fifty-nine grants benefitting 66 organizations are funded at $27,345,000 over two years. In August, as one of her last acts at the Endowment, Nancy Hanks establishes a Task Force on the Education, Training and Development of Professional Artists and Arts Educators.

At the August 12–14 meeting of the National Council on the Arts, a report from a year-long reassessment of the Federal-state partnership calls for expansion of the partnership concept to include Federal, state, regional and local public arts agencies; leadership in national arts advocacy; and leadership in addressing the needs of new and minority constituencies.

The Office of Federal-State Partnership splits into two offices: State Programs, which gives block grants to state and regional arts agencies, and Partnership Coordination, which works with other Federal arts programs, state, regional and local arts agencies and professional arts organizations. The Artists-in-Schools Program evolves into the Artists-in-Education Program with grants to state arts agencies for artists' residencies in schools and other settings, pilot learning projects and other technical services.

On June 5, 1981, President Reagan appoints a Presidential Task Force on the Arts and Humanities to review the purposes, activities and records of the Arts and Humanities Endowments. Co-chaired by actor Charlton Heston, Hanna H. Gray, President of the University of Chicago, and Daniel J. Terra, Ambassador-

At-Large for Cultural Affairs, the Task Force is asked to find methods of increasing private support for the arts and humanities. It is also charged with finding ways to bring more non-governmental professionals, private groups and individuals into the Endowment's decision-making process and to recommend ways to improve the management, organization and structure of the two Endowments and the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

On October 14, 1981, at a White House luncheon, President Reagan introduces to the Presidential Task Force on the Arts and the Humanities Frank Hodsoll, Deputy Assistant to the President, as his nominee for Chairman of the Arts Endowment. The Task Force Report recommends that the existing structure of the Endowments be kept; that the professional panel review systems be continued; that adjustments in the tax code be made to stimulate private philanthropy; and that coordination and cooperation among Federal, state and local arts agencies be strengthened.

In accepting the Task Force Report, President Reagan says: "The Endowments, which began in 1965, account for only 10 percent of the donations to the arts and scholarship. Nonetheless, they have served an important role in catalyzing additional private support, assisting excellence in arts and letters, and helping to assure the availability of arts and scholarship."

On November 13, 1981, following Senate confirmation, Frank Hodsoll is sworn in as the fourth Chairman of the Endowment by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger. Former Chairmen Stevens, Hanks and Biddle are present for the ceremony, which occurs at the beginning of the 70th meeting of the National Council on the Arts. Chairman Hodsoll stresses that the Endowment's mission is to "foster the excellence, diversity and vitality of the arts and to help broaden the availability and appreciation of such excellence, diversity and vitality.” Hodsoll also prepares for longer-range support of the Challenge and Advancement Programs, improving and streamlining the Endowment’s administration and strengthening the public-private partnership.

On June 15, 1982, President Reagan establishes the President’s Committee on the Arts and the Humanities to help stimulate increased private support and to promote recognition of excellence in these fields. The Committee is comprised of up to 34 Federal and non-Federal members. Its Chairman is Andrew Heiskell, and the Vice Chairmen are Armand S. Deutsch and W. Barnabas McHenry.

1983

OCT. 1, 1982–SEPT. 30, 1983

The Endowment's budget rises slightly to $143,875,000. President Reagan says: "We support the work of the National Endowment for the Arts to stimulate excellence and make art more available to more of our people."

The Endowment initiates the Test Program of Support for Local Arts Agencies, to encourage more local government support for the arts while improving administration and planning. The Literature Program starts a project that publishes short stories in newspapers.

Curriculum-based, sequential arts education from kindergarten through 12th grade becomes a priority for Chairman Hodsoll. A series of regional meetings is scheduled, and discussions with the J. Paul Getty Trust and others are begun to bring television more directly into the arts education process.

The Challenge II Program is begun, and previous Challenge Program recipients are eligible again for support. The purpose of Challenge II is to stimulate improved balance sheets for the very best arts institutions. Advancement Grants are opened up to all the discipline fields. A new Dance on Tour Initiative begins in the Inter-Arts Program to assist state and regional arts agencies in increasing dance presentations nationwide. The Visual Arts Program begins assisting regional arts organizations in the provision of fellowships for emerging visual artists.

On January 7, 1983, the Endowment's second Chairman, Nancy Hanks, dies after a long battle with cancer. Three weeks later, on January 26, President Reagan requests Congress to name the Old Post Office complex, which is to be the new home of the two Endowments, the Nancy Hanks Center. On February 15th, the President signs Public Law 98-1, the first bill of the new Congress, stating: "This designation is particularly apt since the renovation of the Old Post Office, its occupancy this year by Federal cultural agencies and commercial enterprises and its exhibits are due in large measure to the foresightedness, persuasiveness, intellect and vigor of Nancy Hanks."

The Old Post Office Building is dedicated as the new home of the two Endowments, the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities, the Institute of Museum Services, and the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation on April 19, 1983.

At a White House luncheon on May 17 organized by the President's Committee, President Reagan honors 12 artists and patrons for service to the arts. The President also asks Frank Hodsoll to explore with Congress the possibility of creating a medal to honor artists and patrons of the arts.

The first National Symposium on Access to Cultural Programs for disabled and older individuals is sponsored by the Endowment and held July 13–16 at Indiana University in Bloomington.

Apprenticeships are begun through state arts agencies. The Theater Program begins a new Ongoing Ensembles category to assist groups of theater artists working together over time. The Dance Program starts a project placing choreographers with repertory dance companies to create new work. A Touring-Commissioning Initiative for major interdisciplinary work is begun in the Inter-Arts Program. The Office of International Activities is formalized.

The American Association of Fundraising Counsel reports that in 1983 private contributions to cultural activities increased to $4.08 billion, an increase of 36 percent and $1 billion over 1981. Individuals continued in 1983 to provide the bulk of this support.

On May 31, 1984, President Reagan signs into law legislation for the National Medal of Arts, authorizing the President to award up to 12 medals a year to "individuals or groups who in the President's judgment are deserving of special recognition by reason of their outstanding contributions to the excellence, growth, support and availability of the arts in the United States." The Medals are to be based on recommendations of the National Council on the Arts.

During the National Medal of Arts ceremonies on June 18, 1987, President Reagan says: "Why do we, as a free people, honor the arts? The arts and the humanities teach us who we are and what we can be. They lie at the very core of the culture of which we're a part, and they provide the foundation from which we may reach out to other cultures so that ours may be enriched by—as well as itself enrich—other enduring traditions. We honor the arts not because we want monuments to our own civilization, but because we are a free people. The arts are among our nation's finest creations and the reflection of freedom's light."

The Endowment's budget is $167,731,000.

In March 1988, the first 16 state arts agency planning grants are made, fostering collaboration with state education agencies to make the arts more basic in education.

In May 1988, the Endowment publishes Toward Civilization, which argues that basic arts education is suffering serious neglect in the United States. This two-year study on the teaching of the arts in our nation's schools warns, "the artistic heritage that is ours, and the opportunities to contribute significantly to its evolution, are being lost to our young people." More than 180,000 copies are sold or distributed.

Chairman Hodsohl resigns on February 28, 1989 after serving nearly eight years. Hugh Southern is appointed Acting Chairman.

The Expansion Arts Program begins a Rural Arts Initiative, helping state arts agencies to regrant funds for strengthening rural arts organizations. Similarly, the States Program begins awarding small grants of up to $25,000 for projects developed by state arts agencies in response to the needs of rural communities. The States Program also begins an effort to encourage new collaborations between the states and regions and the Endowment's discipline programs.

OCT. 1, 1989–SEPT. 30, 1990

In its 25th year, the Endowment's budget rises to $171,255,000.

John Frohnmayer is sworn in as the fifth Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts in October 1989.

At a ceremony in the White House on November 17, 1989, President Bush awards the National Medals of Arts, noting: "Art opens entire new worlds for each of us, letting us see and hear and even feel life through the mind of someone else—from new perspectives. And instead of seeing a single world, we can see as many worlds as there are artists and writers, dancers and musicians."

In a speech at the Corporate Council for the Arts in Seattle on June 29, 1990, Chairman Frohnmayer says: "In this technological age, we must prepare our schools to help our children understand and appreciate the aesthetic dimension of our lives. We must be prepared to use creativity not as an adjunct to our education, but as its central component, because creativity will be the currency of the 21st century."

On July 9–10, 1990, the Endowment and the Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation convene the first regional conference devoted to access, bringing together 260 arts administrators to discuss ways to make the arts more available to older and disabled individuals.

The Endowment's budget is $174,080,737.

On November 5, 1990, Congress reauthorizes the Endowment for Fiscal Years 1991 through 1993. Twenty-five percent of program funds are reserved for state and regional arts agencies and another five percent is set aside for these agencies to address the needs of underserved communities, particularly in rural and inner-city areas. New emphasis is placed on arts education.

Panel reforms remove even the appearance of conflicts of interest on the part of the Endowment's panelists. Modified panel structures, including split panels and multi-year applications, are adopted. Consequently, the number of panelists grows from 792 in 1990 to 947 in 1991. The Chairman is granted authority to approve all applications except those on which the Council makes a negative recommendation.

For the sixth consecutive year, the Endowment's budget rises slightly to $175,954,680. Chairman Frohnmayer resigns effective April 30, 1992. From May 1992 through January 19, 1993, Anne-Imelda Radice is Acting Chairman.

Throughout 1991, staff from the Inter-Arts Program meet with hundreds of artists, presenters and representatives of service organizations to gather their views on a new program to present the performing arts and commission new work. In January 1992, Inter-Arts becomes the Presenting & Commissioning Program.

OCT. 1, 1992–SEPT. 30, 1993

The Endowment's budget is $174,459,382. With the inauguration of President William Clinton, a new administration begins. During much of this period the function of chairman resides with Madeleine Kunin, Deputy Secretary of Education, who delegates practical, day-to-day authority to Ana M. Steele, Acting Senior Deputy Chairman.

The Office of International Activities becomes the International Program. Through its partnerships as well as direct grants, the International Program provides funding for 185 projects in 1993. One of its first concrete achievements is the creation of the U.S./Canada/Mexico Creative Artists' Residencies. ArtsLink, which to model programs of accessibility for disabled and older people published by the American Association of Museums. The agency publishes Dancemakers, a research study on the dire economic straits of choreographers, and Generation of Fellows, an anecdotal history of the impact of Endowment grants to individual artists. Moving Around: Partnerships at Work in Dance on Tour, published for the Endowment by Dance/USA, summarizes successful dance touring projects by dance companies and presenters.

For Fiscal Year 1994, the Endowment's budget stands at $170,229,000.

On October 8, 1993, Jane Alexander is sworn in by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor as the sixth Chairman of the Arts Endowment. As part of her pledge to Congress, she sets out to survey the state of the arts in America. Within her first 14 months in office, Chairman Alexander visits 130 different communities in all 50 states and Puerto Rico.

The first federally sponsored national arts conference, Art-21: Art Reaches into the 21st Century, is held in Chicago, Illinois, April 14–16, 1994. Over 1,100 participants meet to discuss national arts policy centered around four themes: "The Artist in Society," "Lifelong Learning through the Arts," "The Arts and Technology," and "Expanding Resources for the Arts." President Clinton addresses the conference via video: "Each of us is born into a society that passes along its values through its culture. And that's why the National Endowment for the Arts was established three decades ago: to enliven creative expression and to make the arts more accessible to Americans of all walks of life."

ally generates 1.3 million jobs, $36.8 billion in expenditures, $790 million in local government tax revenues, $1.2 billion in state government tax revenues, and $3.4 billion in Federal tax revenues.

The arts are among the first disciplines to develop educational goals and standards as part of the Goals 2000 education reforms, and they are published as the National Standards for Arts Education. A consortium of national arts education associations, in conjunction with the Endowment, focuses on what every young American should know and be able to do in dance, music, theater and the visual arts. The Goals 2000 Arts Education Planning Process begins in the summer of 1994.

Design for Accessibility: An Arts Administrator's Guide is introduced on July 28, 1994, the fourth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Produced in partnership with the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies (NASAA), the book assists Endowment grantees and others in making their programs and facilities fully accessible to people with disabilities and older adults. The Arts Endowment and NASAA disseminate 800 free copies of the Guide to grantees through the state arts agencies.

The Research Division publishes Trends in Artist Occupations: 1970–1990, which uses U.S. Census figures to show a 127 percent increase in the number of artists over that 20 year period, for a total of over 1.67 million artists in the U.S.

1995

OCT. 1, 1994–SEPT. 30, 1995

The National Endowment for the Arts is now 30 years old. The Endowment's budget is $162,311,000, following successive reductions by Congress, including a rescission in funds late in the year. The Endowment's staff is being reduced as well.

On October 13, 1994, at a luncheon in honor of the National Medal of Arts recipients, Chairman Alexander names all the former members of the National Council on the Arts as Ambassadors for the Arts.

Designers and civic leaders discuss options for the rebuilding of downtown Oklahoma City after the bombing of the Murrah Federal Building as part of a charrette organized and run by the Design Program.

Congressman Ralph Regula (R-OH) assumes Chairmanship of the House Appropriations Subcommittee with responsibility for the Endowments. Senator Slade Gorton (R-WA) assumes Chairmanship in the Senate.

The International Program publishes World Arts: A Guide to International Arts Exchange and makes the information available through on-line technology. The Special Constituencies Office is re-named the Office of AccessAbility to reflect its mission of making the arts more accessible to all Americans. The Office of Policy, Planning and Research is re-organized as the Office of Policy, Research and Technology, and plans commence to create an Endowment site on the World Wide Web.

On January 23, 1995, the series American Cinema premieres on public television as part of the Endowment's millennium celebration of American art in the 20th century.

Congress begins deliberations on reauthorization of the Arts and Humanities Endowments and the Institute of Museum Services. At a Congressional hearing on the future of the Arts Endowment,

Chairman Alexander declares: "A great nation supports and encourages the education of all its people. A great nation recognizes that the life of the spirit, of the human mind, is what endures through the passing on from generation to generation a heritage that says: this is who we are, this is who we were, and this is who we will be in days to come. That heritage is manifested through the arts, the humanities and the sciences. That heritage is what we seek to keep alive at the Endowment for the Arts."

Chairman Alexander accepts a Tony Award on behalf of the agency in recognition of the Endowment's role in the growth of regional theater in the U.S.

Based on funding levels appropriated by Congress, the Endowment begins planning for a major re-structuring.

For the first time in its history, the National Heritage Fellowship awards presentation is held at the White House, hosted by First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

On September 29, 1995, the Endowment celebrates its 30th anniversary.

1996

OCT. 1, 1995-SEPT. 30, 1996

1 1996 is a pivotal year for the National Endowment for the Arts. The budget is cut by 39 percent to $99.5 million – down from $162.5 million the previous year. With a backdrop of concern about a balanced budget, artistic expression and the grantmaking process, Congress debates the appropriate Federal role for arts funding.

After a year-long budget battle with the President, which includes two Federal government shutdowns, Congress votes to phase out funding for the agency over a two-year period. The House of Representatives announces a plan to eliminate the Endowment.

The agency reorganizes itself and the staff is cut by 47 percent, from 279 to 148.

Congress places specific prohibitions on the agency. All individual artist

Masters awards are retained. Congress also prohibits seasonal or general operating support grants, allowing only project support to organizations. Restrictions are imposed on allowing grantees to subgrant to third party organizations and artists.

The agency restructures its grantmaking operation from 17 discipline-based programs to four categories: 1) Creation & Presentation; 2) Heritage & Preservation; 3) Education & Access; and 4) Planning & Stabilization. Applicants are limited to one proposal per year.

The study reveals how local artists and educators can help turn around the lives of young people.

The Rockefeller Foundation publishes the report Looking Ahead: Private Sector Giving to the Arts and the Humanities, summarizing funding trends to cultural organizations. It states that, despite significant growth in foundation giving in the 1980s, the National Endowment for the Arts remains the largest, single funder of the arts in the United States.

After a House vote to eliminate the Endowment's funding, a House-Senate conference finalizes the Fiscal Year 1998 budget at $98 million.

Congress mandates that state arts agencies receive 40 percent of agency program funds, up from 35 percent. Congress also imposes a 15 percent cap on total grant funds awarded to organizations in any one state, excluding projects of national or multi-state significance. It further mandates the National Council on the Arts be reduced from 26 to 20 persons, with six being Members of Congress who serve in a non-voting, ex-officio capacity. Congressional representatives first attend a National Council meeting in March.

1999

OCT. 1, 1998-SEPT. 30, 1999

The Endowment's Fiscal Year 1999 appropriated budget is again set at $98 million, with a $34,000 reduction in August when Congress applies a rescission to all federal agencies to offset the Emergency Oil and Gas Bill.

The NEA's new strategic plan for 1999-2004 is released. The agency's mission statement is revised to read: "The National Endowment for the Arts, an investment in America's living cultural heritage, serves the public good by nurturing human creativity, supporting community spirit, and fostering appreciation of the excellence and diversity of our nation's artistic accomplishments."

In one year, the ArtsREACH program increases the number of agency direct grants to the 20 eligible target states by over 350 percent.

Chairman Bill Ivey proposes the "Challenge America" initiative, and President Clinton seeks funding for it in his Fiscal Year 2000 budget request to Congress. The initiative has two broad purposes: 1) bringing together the arts, the American people and communities to address community concerns, and 2) fostering development of new cultural initiatives and programs in previously underserved areas.

The NEA launches four Design Leadership Initiatives to foster design talent and improve the overall quality of design across the country. They focus on improving the design of public projects, reworking out-of-date suburban malls, examining the design and revitalization of schools, and finding ways for design to enhance the quality of life in rural areas.

A landmark research study of YouthARTS, a project funded by the Arts Endowment and the U.S. Department of Justice, demonstrates that arts programs help decrease youth delinquency. # 2000

OCT. 1, 1999-SEPT. 30, 2000

The House votes to fund the NEA at the 1999 level after rejecting both a proposed increase and a proposed decrease. The Senate votes for a $5 million increase. Final legislation for Fiscal Year 2000 includes a government-wide funding reduction of 0.38 percent, and the agency's budget drops slightly to $97.6 million.

To celebrate its 35th year, the Endowment presents America's Creative Legacy: An NEA Forum at Harvard at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The event brings together the current Chairman and four former NEA Chairs for a discussion of U.S. arts policy.

The Endowment broadens its outreach by further supporting the production and distribution of radio and television programs aimed at nationwide audiences.

The Endowment invests in several Leadership Initiatives designated as Official Millennium Projects by the White House Millennium Council. These projects highlight artistic excellence and include significant community involvement in all 50 states:

- Under Artists & Communities: America Creates for the Millennium, coordinated by the Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation, host communities sponsor visual and performing artists' residencies in which artists and local citizens together create new works for the 21st century.
- Arts on Millennium Trails, administered by the National Association of State Arts Agencies, supports the creation of community-centered public art projects along the 50 Millennium Legacy Trails designated by the U.S. Department of Transportation.
- Continental Harmony, administered by the American Composers Forum, provides for composers' residencies and the creation of new musical works reflecting the lives and hopes of host communities, with many premiere performances on July 4, 2000.

- The Favorite Poem Project, conceived by Poet Laureate Robert Pinsky and conducted in partnership with the Library of Congress, Boston University and the New England Foundation for the Arts, celebrates the poems Americans love through public readings and the creation of an audio and video archive of people from varied backgrounds reading their favorite poems aloud.
- Live at the Library 2000, in cooperation with the American Library Association, develops opportunities for literary, visual and performing artists to present their work in libraries across the country.
- Through The Mars Millennium Project, an interdisciplinary learning project of the Arts Endowment, U.S. Department of Education, NASA and the J. Paul Getty Trust, students in grades K-12 work with artists and scientists to design model communities for life on Mars in the year 2030.
- SOS! 2000 — Save Outdoor Sculpture, a project of Heritage Preservation, funds conservation treatment of artistically and historically significant outdoor sculpture.
- Treasures of American Film Archives, in cooperation with the National Film Preservation Foundation and 12 major film archives across the country, preserves, screens and distributes to public libraries a rich collection of “orphan,” or noncommercial, films from the past century.
