

First of all I would like to say that I do support controlling the louder jets that travel in and out of Centennial Airport. However, I DO NOT support the alternate routes that would direct more planes over South East Aurora, versus over Cherry Creek reservoir or elsewhere. Changing the routes is not going to make the noise any better. We already experience planes that are descending into Centennial, and also some DIA and Buckley air traffic as well, so therefore I feel we already "share the pain" as one person put it (without complaining I might add). Besides the fact that the airport has been there longer than most of the houses, so if you don't want to hear the airplanes don't move in next to an airport!
