

An image of part of Saturn's small icy moon Phoebe, taken as the Cassini spacecraft flew by, shows many craters.

A close-up image of Saturn's moon Enceladus shows a system of rifts and lanes of grooved terrain that separate two geological provinces.

A Cassini image of Saturn's large moon Titan shows an extensive dark area as well as a large bright white area on the surface.

S A T U R N

J E W E L O F T H E S O L A R S Y S T E M