Precautionary health advisory lifted for Nye Beach

A health advisory for contact with marine water at Nye Beach in Newport, Or., was lifted today by the Oregon Department of Human Services, in conjunction with the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality and Oregon Parks and Recreation Department.

The advisory was issued Thursday after a recent overflow of treated sewage. Increased pathogen and fecal bacteria levels in ocean waters can come from both shore and inland sources, including storm water runoff. Subsequent monitoring shows the waters do not pose a higher-than-normal risk.

State officials encourage recreational activities at all Oregon beaches, suggesting only that water contact be avoided when advisories are in effect.

Since 2003 state officials have used a federal Environmental Protection Agency grant to monitor popular Oregon beaches and make timely reports to the public about elevated levels of fecal bacteria. State agencies participating in this program are the Oregon Department of Human Services State Public Health Division, Oregon Parks and Recreation Department, and the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality.
