

intervals, the test allows the observation of signs of toxicity. Moreover, use of OECD guidance for humane endpoints should reduce the overall suffering of animals in this type of test. The Agency strongly recommends the use of the revised UDP to meet the testing requirements for industrial chemicals and registration of pesticides. Acute oral toxicity studies using the UDP which are initiated after December 17, 2002, should be in accordance with the UDP described in this guideline. Two other alternative guidelines are available through OECD (420 Acute Oral Toxicity—Fixed Dose Method and 423 Acute Oral Toxicity—Acute Toxic Class Method). These methods assess lethality within a dose range. The Agency is also making available revised final test guideline OPPTS 870.1000 Acute Toxicity Testing—Background to reflect revision of the OPPTS 870.1100 Acute Oral Toxicity test guideline and acceptability of two other OECD alternative guidelines.

IV. Are There Any Applicable Voluntary Consensus Standards That EPA Should Consider?

This notice of availability does not involve a proposed regulatory action that would require the Agency to consider voluntary consensus standards pursuant to section 12(d) of the National Technology Transfer and Advancement Act of 1995 (NTTAA), Public Law 104–113, section 12(d) (15 U.S.C. 272 note). Section 12(d) of NTTAA directs EPA to use voluntary consensus standards in its regulatory activities unless to do so would be inconsistent with applicable law or otherwise impractical. Voluntary consensus standards are technical standards (e.g., materials specifications, test methods, sampling procedures, and business practices) that are developed or adopted by voluntary consensus standards bodies. The NTTAA requires EPA to provide an explanation to Congress, through Office of Management and Budget (OMB), when the Agency decides not to use available and applicable voluntary consensus standards when the NTTAA directs the Agency to do so.
