

Access to Internet-accessible public access personal computers (PCs) for individuals with disabilities

NARA provides 21" monitors, trackball mice, and headsets for one of the Internet-accessible computers in each facility. Please inquire at the reference desk to use these items.

People with disabilities have definite needs and preferences relating to assistive technology. A PC cannot be equipped with all the assistive software and hardware that is currently available. Therefore, upon request, these PCs are configured to accommodate individual accessibility requirements. Individual requirements are addressed on an as-needed basis.

People who require assistive technology should notify Northeast Region (Boston) at least two weeks in advance.
