

Please do something about this. I can't understand the following.

In the early 1960s I was working for a refinery in west Texas. We had a two-way radio system in all our company vehicles. The FCC would sit in our tank fields and monitor our radio usage. This was great...kept trash talk off of the air. They let us know they could yank our license if filthy talk took place. Now people talk on two-way radios, over radio stations, television and do just about anything you can imagine in the movies and on the internet any old way they want to.

What happened? Are the FTC and the FCC allowing our airwaves, theaters and internet to sink our country? We now live in a cesspool of information. I feel like I need to take a bath after I get off of the computer from all the filth.

PLEASE DO SOMETHING SOON. A LOT IS AT STAKE IN MY OPINION.

I hope Congress can learn to take their jobs responsibly someday.

Thank you for listening to me.
Carey King