

safety-critical individual who performs safety-critical functions properly is essential to safe operations conducted under a license. In order to perform these safety-critical functions properly, a safety-critical individual must be in a mental state in which judgment is unimpaired by alcohol or unlawful drug usage, since their functions may include the ability to make time-critical decisions.

For commercial space launch operations, a safety-critical individual typically is part of a licensee's safety organization. For RLVs, safety-critical personnel also include the flight crew if they are part of a flight safety system. Crew who manage flight safety are responsible for ensuring that a launch vehicle does not pose a public safety threat. A typical safety-critical function would be initiation of a destruct command of a flight safety system, which, as defined in 14 CFR 401.5, is a system designed to limit or restrict the hazards to public health and safety and the safety of property presented by a launch or reentry vehicle in flight through controlled ending to vehicle flight. An employee performing this safety-critical function which impaired, either under the influence of alcohol or unlawful drugs, might, for instance, fail to actuate the flight safety system when the launch vehicle leaves the established flight safety limits. In this scenario, the vehicle or vehicle debris could impact a populated area, imposing an unacceptable risk to the public or property.

If a licensee were to allow an individual who performs safety-critical functions to perform those functions while under the influence of alcohol or unlawful drugs, the FAA would regard the licensee to be in violation of its safety responsibility under the license and FAA regulations. The FAA may commence appropriate enforcement action, including suspension of a license, a civil penalty action, or both, against the licensee.
