SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Social Security Ruling, SSR 03-1p.; Titles II and XVI: Development and Evaluation of Disability Claims Involving Postpolio Sequelae

AGENCY: Social Security Administration.

ACTION: Notice of Social Security ruling.

SUMMARY: In accordance with 20 CFR 402.35(b)(1), the Commissioner of Social Security gives notice of Social Security Ruling, SSR 03-1p. This Ruling clarifies the policies of the Social Security Administration for developing and evaluating title II and title XVI claims for disability on the basis of postpolio sequelae. Postpolio sequelae refer to the documented residuals of acute polio infection, as well as other disorders that have an etiological link to either the acute polio infection or to the chronic deficits that resulted from the infection. These disorders typically manifest late in the lives of polio survivors, and include such things as postpolio syndrome (also known as the late effects of poliomyelitis), the early presence of advanced degenerative arthritis, sleep disorders, respiratory insufficiency, and various mental disorders.

EFFECTIVE DATE: July 2, 2003.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Although we are not required to do so pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(1) and (a)(2), we are publishing this Social Security Ruling in accordance with 20 CFR 402.35(b)(1).

Social Security Rulings make available to the public precedential decisions relating to the Federal old-age, survivors, disability, supplemental security income, and black lung benefits programs. Social Security Rulings may be based on case decisions made at all administrative levels of adjudication, Federal court decisions, Commissioner's decisions, opinions of the Office of the General Counsel, and policy interpretations of the law and regulations.

Although Social Security Rulings do not have the same force and effect as the statute or regulations, they are binding on all components of the Social Security Administration, in accordance with 20 CFR 402.35(b)(1), and are relied upon as precedents in adjudicating cases.

If this Social Security Ruling is later superseded, modified, or rescinded, we will publish a notice in the Federal Register to that effect.

Introduction: "Postpolio sequelae" refers to the documented residuals of acute poliomyelitis (polio)¹

infection as well as other disorders that have an etiological link to either the acute polio infection or to chronic deficits resulting from the acute infection. Disorders that may manifest late in the lives of polio survivors include postpolio syndrome (also known as the late effects of poliomyelitis), early advanced degenerative arthritis, sleep disorders, respiratory insufficiency, and a variety of mental disorders. Any one or a combination of these disorders, appropriately documented, will constitute the presence of "postpolio sequelae" for purposes of developing and evaluating claims for disability on the basis of postpolio sequelae under Social Security disability. Even though some polio survivors may have had previously undetected motor residuals following the acute polio infection, they may still report progressive muscle weakness later in life and manifest any of the disorders listed above.

The Act and our implementing regulations require that an individual establish disability based on the existence of a medically determinable impairment; i.e., one that can be shown by medical evidence, consisting of symptoms, signs, and laboratory findings. Disability may not be established on the basis of an individual's statement of symptoms alone.

This Ruling explains that postpolio sequelae, when accompanied by appropriate symptoms, signs, and laboratory findings, is a medically determinable impairment that can be the basis for a finding of "disability." It also provides guidance for the evaluation of claims involving postpolio sequelae.

Policy Interpretation: Postpolio sequelae constitute a medically determinable impairment when documented by appropriate medical signs, symptoms, and laboratory findings. Postpolio sequelae may be the basis for a finding of "disability," as discussed below. When making a determination of disability in cases of postpolio sequelae, the adjudicator or decisionmaker must be sure that all of the individual's functional limitations have been considered. To do this, the adjudicator must make a comprehensive assessment of the cumulative and interactive effects of all of the from acute polio infection usually occur within the first few days following the onset of paralysis. About one-third of those individuals who do develop paralysis are left with some degree of permanent weakness, commonly involving a single extremity. Postpolio muscle paralysis is of the lower motor neuron variety and is characterized by weakness, muscle atrophy, and reflex loss.
