

Suffrage Prisoners

The following individuals depicted in Women of Protest were among the many National Woman's Party activists who were arrested and imprisoned for their role in suffrage protests. An asterisk next to the individual's name indicates that an image portrays them under arrest, in jail, wearing prison garb, or as speakers on the "Prison Special," the cross-country speaking tour to several major American cities undertaken by 26 former inmates in February-March 1919 to inform audiences about their experience as political prisoners. Among those listed below who participated in the "Prison Special," are Pauline Adams, Edith Ainge, Berthe Arnold, Lillian Ascough, Abby Scott Baker, Lucy G. Branham, Lucy Burns, Sarah T. Colvin, Lucy Ewing, L. W. E. Havemeyer, Vida Milholland, Mary Nolan, Elizabeth S. Rogers, Mabel Vernon, and Sue Shelton White.

In the Records of the National Woman's Party held by the Library of Congress Manuscript Division, there are additional photographs, which have not been digitized on this site, of these and other women who were arrested or imprisoned as suffrage demonstrators. For a complete list of activists who were jailed or imprisoned, including the names of those not depicted in Women of Protest, see Appendix 4 "Suffrage Prisoners," in Doris Stevens, Jailed for Freedom (New York: Boni and Liveright, 1920), 354-71. Jailed for Freedom is available as a Project Gutenberg e-book at <http://www.gutenberg.org/etext/3604> and elsewhere on the Web in e-book format.
