Welcome to Canaveral National Seashore

It has been my privilege to serve as the Superintendent of Canaveral National Seashore since January 2005.

I hope that you will find Canaveral National Seashore to be a recreational paradise with back-country camping, horseback riding, canoeing, kayaking, hiking, fishing, surfing, swimming, boating and bird watching opportunities. As you pass through this national park area with its barrier island, open lagoon, coastal hammock, pine flat woods and offshore waters, I hope that you may be enticed to linger in this environment of old Florida to view an endangered wood stork feeding along a roadside canal, or catch a glimpse of the West Indian Manatee near the Eldora State House.

We hope our website helps prepare you to experience the great variety of extraordinary natural and cultural resources and memorable experiences that await you at Canaveral National Seashore.
