

Environmental Health

Dedicated to the advancement of the environmental health professional

Volume 69, No. 10 June 2007

About the Cover:

How consistent is proper handwashing behavior among food service workers? Our cover illustrates the answer suggested by this month's feature article, "Food Workers' Perspectives on Handwashing Behaviors and Barriers in the Restaurant Environment." A woman presses her hand against a glass wall, which separates her from the soapy water in the foreground. The wall is also a maze, representing the complex, systemic barriers that can prevent good handwashing practice even among the most conscientious workers.
