

Environmental Health

Dedicated to the advancement of the environmental health professional

Volume 69, No. 3 October 2006

About the Cover:

Increasingly, the public is relying on the Internet to obtain information about food safety issues around the world, according to this month's feature article, "Analysis of Governmental Web Sites on Food Safety Issues: A Global Perspective." Like the globe-as-monitor on our cover, the article offers a window onto the availability, usability, and currency of food safety information provided by governmental Web sites. In light of a growing interest in food safety and an increasing demand for international travel, the authors suggest that the Web sites of many countries are not meeting an important public need.
