Dear Dr. Crawford,

Many of us who have studied the chemistry of food are wondering why the Food and Drug Administration is dragging its feet and holding up requests to label hydrogenated and trans fatty acids. The recent statement that labeling of trans-fat will be required next spring is welcome news but we have been trying for ten years to get the FDA to issue this requirement. We know that trans fat kills people. Why do we have to wait until next spring to label it?

Cordially,

Ed Slusarczyk
