lipid extracts help support prostate health and urinary tract function by antispasmodic actions and by supporting healthy metabolism of hormones in the prostate gland itself. Lycopene is potent antioxidant that protects cell membranes and DNA from oxidation. Lycopene helps to maintain healthy prostate tissue during normal aging. Selenium is an essential trace element with a primary function of activating the major intracellular antioxidant enzyme-gultathione peroxidase. Selenium supports healthy prostate tissue during normal aging. Selenium also works with Vitamin E as an antioxidant. Maintenance of adequate Vitamin D status appears very important for maintenance of prostate health during normal aging. Maintenance of normally high levels of zinc in prostate tissue supports healthy prostate function. Zinc also counteracts damaging effects of cadmium (a toxic heavy metal) on prostate tissue. Calcium D-Glucarate, a nutrient found in fruits, vegetables and human bodies, has been shown to operate in the body's major cleansing pathway, glucuronidation, which helps to remove unwanted compounds.
