Dear Commissioner,

I am writing you as a concerned citizen and mother of a seven-year old boy. My family has a lower middle class income and although we currently have no health insurance, we spend extra money to obtain the purest food we can buy. In other words, we purchase organic foods as much as possible.

I urge you to support mandatory labeling of genetically engineered or modified ingredients in all foods. I believe these foods are potentially dangerous to humans and have little or no benefit to the environmental balance.

Thank you for all your work in protecting the food and drugs available to the U.S. public. Please work to encourage organically grown food, natural medicines and do be a pawn to corporate money.

Respectfully yours,
Eleanor Weisman
