

control problems and related water resources needs of streams in Alexander and Pulaski Counties, Illinois, and those portions of the streams and basins in adjacent Illinois counties tributary to Alexander and Pulaski Counties.

2. For reasons of marginal flood control benefits, changing land use, the recognized environmental uniqueness of the area, changing Corps wetlands restoration policies and sponsorship, the planning investigation has shifted from its original focus on flood control to its present purpose of habitat restoration.

Sedimentation from tributary streams, and an altered hydrologic regime are destroying one of the most impressive wetland areas in the Cache River—the Lower Cache River Swamp National Natural Landmark area. Heron Pond Little Black Slough National Natural Landmark area is threatened by drainage induced by entrenchment of the Post Creek/Upper Cache River channel.

Prior Corps of Engineers projects have contributed at least partially to these problems: flood water recharge of the Lower Cache River wetlands has been reduced as a result of Upper Cache River and Ohio River flows being deflected away from the Lower Cache via the Corps constructed Cache River and Reevesville Levees. The Cache River levee has contributed to the entrenchment process by ensuring that major flood flows from the Upper Cache River and Main Ditch area are directed down the Post-Creek Cutoff channel. The Cache River levee culverts have contributed to reverse flowage during high and low water stages on the Lower Cache. During higher tributary stages, sediment-laden waters are carried into Lower Cache River Swamp, and during dry periods (due to the low culvert inserts), the swamp is excessively drained. The Corps' Cache River diversion outlet and levee has diverted flows away from the lowermost 7 miles of Old Cache River channel.

Unless these problems are controlled through sound environmental engineering, the landmark areas will be lost. Solutions to these problems will require a thorough understanding of the complex hydrology of the Cache River basin. The Corps has an opportunity to provide the highly specialized hydrological engineering expertise needed for such an effort. The Corps is also in a unique position to provide the implementation capabilities for installing needed structural solutions.

3. Potential habitat restoration measures include: Big Creek and Cypress Creek floodplain restoration; sediment retention dams in the uplands of Big Creek and Cypress Creek; selective sediment removal from Lower Cache River Swamp; diverting flow from the Upper Cache towards Lower Cache River Swamp; Lower Cache River Swamp water control structures; and rock weirs placement in Post Creek and the Upper Cache River.

4. Scoping process includes the Nov 1996 Phase 2 Public Workshop & Written Comments period.

5. Draft EIS will be made available to the public in 1998.

Competitive Preference Priority—Providing Program Services in an Empowerment Zone or Enterprise Community

Under this program the Secretary gives competitive preference to applications that—
