OMB To Launch Newly Designed, Interactive Web Site;
Information Access Now Just Three Clicks Away

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) will today unveil its new Web site at 6 p.m., Eastern Time, as part of an integral effort to bring the U.S. government closer to citizens. The Web site can be found at www.whitehouse.gov/omb or www.omb.gov. It can also be reached through the government portal www.firstgov.gov.

“Americans deserve better information about how their tax dollars are being spent, or misspent, and the government can benefit from the citizen feedback and ideas for greater efficiency that this new site will make possible,” said OMB Director Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr.

The OMB Web site offers a completely revamped, interactive homepage to make navigation easy and to obtain information within three clicks of a mouse. Modeled after the White House Web site, the uniform format and the reorganization of the OMB site provide user-friendly access for citizens, charitable organizations, non-profits, businesses and government agencies.

The homepage features an interactive section called “The Wastebasket,” where visitors can suggest examples of mismanagement and abuse that cost U.S. taxpayers. The “Feedback and Forth” area profiles current OMB issues and enables the public to direct their opinions to OMB officials.

Other highlights include “This Week at OMB” that headlines current news and information, rotating graphics and charts, and a more robust search engine. The OMB Web site allows for continuity among federal government Web sites with official links to the White House homepage and FirstGov.gov. The OMB Web site will continue to be the home for official Statements of Administration Policy (SAP’s), news releases and comprehensive information about the federal budget.

For more information on the OMB Web site, please contact the OMB Communications Office at 202.395.7254.
