

APR 26 2006

GSA Office of the Chief Acquisition Officer

MEMORANDUM FOR JERRY ZAFFOS
DIRECTOR
CONTRACT POLICY DIVISION (VPC)

FROM: RALPH J. DESTEFANO, DIRECTOR
REGULATORY AND FEDERAL
ASSISTANCE DIVISION (VIR)

Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01, Revision Initiative

Additional comments were received on the subject GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 published at 71 FR 7910, February 15, 2006. The comment due date was April 17, 2006.

Response Number	Date Received	Comment Date	Commenter
2006-N01-18	04/18/06	04/18/06	American Small Business League/President Lloyd Chapman
2006-N01-19	04/19/06	04/18/06	American Small Business League (717 comments received)
2006-N01-20	04/25/06	04/20/06	ITAA/CSA

Attachments

APR 18 2006

GSA Office of the Chief Acquisition Officer

MEMORANDUM FOR JERRY ZAFFOS
DIRECTOR
CONTRACT POLICY DIVISION (VPC)

FROM: Laura Briggs
for RALPH J. DESTEFANO, DIRECTOR
REGULATORY AND FEDERAL
ASSISTANCE DIVISION (VIR)

Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01, Revision Initiative

Attached are comments received on the subject GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 published at 71 FR 7910, February 15, 2006. The comment due date was April 17, 2006.

Response Number	Date Received	Comment Date	Commenter
2006-N01-1	04/17/06	04/17/06	GSA(PQC)
2006-N01-2	02/23/06	02/23/06	Arlene Fitzpatrick
2006-N01-3	02/23/06	02/23/06	Modular Systems Network, Inc.
2006-N01-4	02/28/06	02/26/06	Dawn Dippell
2006-N01-5	03/09/06	03/09/06	Laura Briggs
2006-N01-6	03/09/06	03/09/06	Jean Davis
2006-N01-7	03/29/06	03/29/06	GSA (Reg.9)
2006-N01-8	03/31/06	03/31/06	GSA (FXA)
2006-N01-9	04/10/06	04/10/06	Purdue
2006-N01-10	04/14/06	04/14/06	GSA (5PCT)

Response Number	Date Received	Comment Date	Commenter
2006-N01-11	04/17/06	04/17/06	Coalition for Government Procurement
2006-N01-12	04/17/06	04/17/06	GSA(FTS) FEDSIM
2006-N01-13	04/17/06	04/17/06	Clayton S. Marsh, Esq.
2006-N01-14	04/17/06	04/17/06	GSA (PBS)
2006-N01-15	04/17/06	04/17/06	SAIC
2006-N01-16	04/17/06	04/17/06	ASCE
2006-N01-17	04/17/06	04/17/06	ACEC

GSAR ANPR 2006-1101-1

Laura H.
Strohbach/PQ/CO/GSA/GOV

04/17/2006 11:41 AM

To Christopher T. Giavis/PGB/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA, Matthew A. Urnezis/PGC/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA, Anthony Pagonis/WPQ/RW/GSA/GOV@GSA, Arthur M. Wendy J. Liebl/PQ/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA, gary.roberts@gsa.gov, Susan Alexander, Denise C. Broskey/3P/R03/GSA/GOV@GSA, David A.

bcc

Subject GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 PQC Comments on GSAR Revision Initiative

Chris, Matt is out today, and someone said you might be consolidating the PBS responses for the GSAR comments in Matt's absence. If you are not the right person, please forward to the responsible person.

Attached are the PQC comments. Please include these in the PBS response which is due today per <http://a257.g.akamaitech.net/7/257/2422/01jan20061800/edocket.access.gpo.gov/2006/E6-2185.htm>
Thank you,

Laura Strohbach
Lead Realty Specialist
General Services Administration (PQC)

1800 F Street, NW, Room 2326
Washington, DC 20405

202/208-0664-office
202/557-9000-blackberry

"However beautiful the strategy, you should occasionally look at the results." Winston Churchill

GSAR Changes 4-17-06.DOC

GSAR ANPR 2006-N01-1

GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
April 17, 2006

The Realty Policy Group (PQC) in Public Building Services' Office of National Customer Services Management (PQ) in conjunction with Office of General Counsel provide the following comments:

1. In GSAR 570.102, Definitions, change the definition of "Small business" so that it references the Small Business Administration Size Regulations that changes the gross receipts amount over time. Currently, GSAR provides a dollar amount that is out of date. The change will ensure that the GSAR keeps up with SBA changes. Suggested language is:

Small business" means a concern including affiliates, which is organized for profit, is independently-owned and operated, is not dominant in the field of leasing commercial real estate, and has annual average gross receipts for the preceding three fiscal years which are less than the size standard established by Small Business Administration. The size standards may be found at <http://www.sba.gov/size/sizetable2002.html>. For most procurements, the NAICS code is 531120.

2. In GSAR 570.103 Authority to Lease, the paragraph has been modified and citations have been updated as follows:

(a) The Administrator of General Services is authorized by 40 U.S.C. § 585, to enter into a lease agreement for the accommodation of a federal agency in a building (or improvement) which is in existence or being erected by the lessor for the accommodation of the federal agency. The lease agreement may not bind the Government for more than 20 years.

3. In GSAR 570.105-2, Two Phase Design-Build Selection Procedures, the initial reference to section 303M has been updated to provide the United States Code (U.S.C.) citation as follows:

"....Act of 1949, as amended, 41 U.S.C. § 253m,...."

Add a reference to the relevant FAR provisions for ease of use. The suggested language is as follows:

"Use the procedures in section 303M and FAR 36.3 when you meet the conditions in (a) and (b) below:"

4. In GSAR 570.105-2 Two Phase Design-Build Selection Procedures, subsection 570.105-2(b)(4)(iii) should be changed to:

(iii) The experience and past performance of potential contractors

FAR 15.304 requires evaluation of past performance when the contract value is more than $100,000.

5. GSAR 505.101 Methods of Disseminating Information, we suggest the chart be changed to reflect that when an ad is required for leasehold interests in real property that fedbizopps.gov is required, and local ads are optional. This reflects the changes in our technology and business processes. We also want to reconcile different response times for FBO notices and published advertisements.

(c) For acquisitions involving real property:

	Then you must publicize the proposed acquisition...
If the acquisition is not exempt under FAR 5.202 or GSAR 505.202, and...
The acquisition is for real property appraisal services estimated to cost $25,000 or more.	At fedbizopps.gov
The acquisition is for leasehold interests in real property estimated to exceed 10,000 ANSI/BOMA Office (usable) square feet (except lease construction on a pre-selected site).	At fedbizopps.gov
The acquisition is for a leasehold interest in a building to be constructed on a pre-selected site.	At fedbizopps.gov

(d) You may additionally publicize real property appraisal services or proposed leases of any dollar value or square footage, respectively, in local newspapers or at fedbizopps if it will serve to promote competition.

6. In Publicizing and Response Time, to better reflect market conditions, we suggest that GSAR 505.203(a)(1) should be changed as follows:

(1) For leasehold interests in real property, 20 calendar days between solicitation issuance and the date established for receipt of initial offers or consider the individual acquisition and establish a reasonable response time.

7. For GSAR 570.109 Certifications should be changed to include representations as they are part of our business process:

Before awarding a lease, review applicable representations and certifications for compliance with statute and regulations.

GSAR APRR 2006-1101-1

8. In GSAR 570.111 Inspection and Acceptance, we request an expansion on the information that should be captured prior to rent commencement:

Before you accept space, obtain an inspection to ensure that the space complies with the Government's requirements and specifications. Document the inspection and acceptance in the contract file. The inspection and acceptance document must contain the square footage accepted and the acceptance date.

9. GSAR 570.113 Disclosure of Mistakes After Award should be changed to reflect the language used in FAR 15.508. Suggest:

If you discover a mistake in a lessor's offer after award, process substantially in accordance with FAR 14.407-4 and GSAM Subpart 514.407.

10. GSAR 570.203-2(a) Competition should be changed to reflect the FAR 15.403-1 requirements for adequate price competition.

(a) Solicit at least two sources to promote competition to the maximum extent practicable. If you have repeated requirements for space in the same market, and if practicable, invite two sources not included in the most recent solicitation to submit offers.

11. GSAR 570.203-4 Negotiation, Evaluation and Award should be changed to clarify all cost elements that are included in determining contract value. This section is also changed to refer to the citation that establishes the threshold for determining whether cost or pricing data is needed. This amount changes over time.

(c) If the total price (whether funded by GSA, the lessor, and/or the tenant agency by Reimbursable Work Authorization) and options, exceeds the amount established by FAR 15.403-4, consider whether you need cost and pricing data to determine that the price is fair and reasonable. In most cases the exceptions at FAR 15.403-1 will apply.

(d) If the total contract value (whether funded by GSA, the lessor, and/or the tenant agency by Reimbursable Work Authorization) of the lease, including options, will exceed the amount established by FAR 15.403-4, the proposed awardee must provide an acceptable small business subcontracting plan. This requirement does not apply if the proposed awardee is a small business concern. (SBA's Small Business Size Regulations implement the Small Business Act's mandate to SBA.)

GSAR APRR 2006-NDI-1

12. GSAR 570.303-2 Issuing the SFO should be changed to provide augmented coverage so as to avoid future protests and to reflect changing technology.

Release the SFO at the same time to all prospective offerors, including the incumbent lessor, and any other person who requests one. The SFO may be issued electronically.

13. GSAR 570.303-4 Changes to SFOs should be changed to provide augmented coverage of the subject.

(d) If an amendment is so substantial that it requires a complete revision of the SFO, cancel the SFO, readvertise as may be required by GSAM 570.106, and issue a new SFO.

(e) If there are changes to the Government's requirements for amount of space, delineated area, occupancy date, and/or other major aspects of the requirements, consider whether you need to readvertise.

14. GSAR 570.304 General Source Selection Procedures has been changed to adopt certain business processes contain in FAR.

(a) The procedures at FAR 15.3 are required for acquisitions of leasehold interests for two-phase design-build procedures authorized by GSAR 570.105-2.

(c) You must include price or cost to the Government, past performance, and other factors as required by FAR 15.304 as evaluation factors in every case.

(d) The evaluation factors and significant subfactors must comply with FAR 15.304 and either...

15. GSAR 570.305 Two-phase Design-build Selection Procedures has been changed to provide augmented coverage of the process.

(a) These procedures apply to acquisitions of leasehold interests if you use the two-phase design-build selection procedures authorized by FAR 36.3.

16. GSAR 570.402-5 Potential Acceptable Locations has been changed to reflect the Government's consideration of all costs in a procurement:

(a) If the cost-benefit-benefit analysis indicates that the Government will recover relocation costs and duplication of costs through competition, develop an SFO and negotiate with all interested parties following 570.3.

Disclose in the SFO (Price Evaluation) the Government's estimate of relocation costs, including, but not limited to, furniture and equipment move, breakdown and setup of systems furniture and other equipment, telecommunications costs, administrative time, and costs to duplicate fixtures.

17. Change GSAR 570.501 General subsection (a) to correct an inappropriate reference. The first part should read:

Acquire alterations for an existing lease.....

18. Change GSAR 570.502 Alterations by the Lessor to correct a typographical error. The word supplement should be supplemental.

19. The dollar citation in GSAR 570.505-2 Procedures should be changed to the FAR reference that establishes that value and which changes over time:

(d) If you require cost or pricing data and the alterations project will exceed the threshold established in FAR 15.403-4, request an audit.

20. GSAR 570.503(b) Alterations by the Government or through a Separate Contract should be changed to reduce redundancy:

(b) If the Government decides to contract for the work, invite the lessor to submit an offer in the procurement for the alterations project.

21. In the "If" column of the chart at GSAR 570.601 FAR provisions and clauses, for the Pre-award Onsite Equal Opportunity, change the $500,000 to FAR 15.403-4 which establishes that value and which changes over time.

22. Based on recent disaster experience, GSAR 552.270-7, Fire and Casualty Damage should be changed to read as follows:

552.270-7 - FIRE AND CASUALTY DAMAGE (XXX 2006)

If the entire premises are destroyed by fire or other casualty, this lease will immediately terminate. In case of partial destruction or damage, so as to render the premises untenable, as determined by the Government, the Government may terminate the lease by giving written notice to the Lessor within 15 calendar days from such determination; if so terminated, no rent will accrue to the Lessor after such partial destruction or damage; and if not so terminated, the rent will be reduced proportionately by supplemental agreement hereto effective from the date of such partial destruction or damage. Nothing in this lease shall be construed as relieving Lessor from liability for damage to or destruction of property of the United States of America caused by the willful or negligent act or omission of Lessor.

23. We are determining whether or not the tax clause and operating costs clause can be deleted from GSAR.
24. A new contract clause regarding mold is being proposed to provide augmented coverage.
25. Since GSAR 570 does not currently provide coverage for changes of ownership and novations as provided by FAR 42.12, we propose a new contract clause to incorporate this process into lease contracts.
26. Change GSAR 570.701 Standard Forms by deleting the second sentence which reads, "Delete the reference to the Standard Form 2-A in paragraph 7." The SF-2 was revised in June 2003 and no longer contains this reference.
27. GSAR 570.702 GSA Forms should be amended to include another form. This form will streamline certain portions of the lease procurement process. The suggested language is:
 - d. You may use the GSA Form 1217, Lessor's Annual Cost Statement, to obtain pricing information regarding offered services and lease commissions.

The following comment is provided solely by the Realty Policy Group (PQC) in Public Building Services' Office of National Customer Services Management (PQ)

28. In 570.405, lease extensions, modify paragraph (c) of the last sentence to:
 - c. This authority may apply to lease extensions in situations such as, but not limited to, the following:

In addition, add:

 - (4) The agency occupying the space has encountered unexpected delays in planning for a potential relocation to other federally controlled space due to verifiable organizational, financial, or other uncertainties.

GSA - ANPR 2006-N01-2

Arlene F.
Fitzpatrick/3FN-CO/R03/GSA/
GOV

02/23/2006 11:45 AM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov

cc

bcc

Subject streamlining GSA acquisition processes

I am a GSA Contracting Officer; however, I am commenting here as a private citizen.

Why are so many levels of review needed for acquisition packages prepared by Warranted Contracting Officers thru Team Lead -- then thru Div Director - then thru a 2d Div Director. This often delays processing time and makes GSA look back.

Related to the above is the inconsistency of various reviewers as to format. Packages are kicked due to format and wording preferences ... if what needs to be there is there ... even if not in the preferred place or in the preferred languagelet it go! again ... delays, which cause customer (and CO) frustration.

Why are all acquisition personnel still using paper "fill-in-the-blanks" contract load sheets when the CO is the one loading the contract????

Why are we still using paper "fill-in-the-blanks" Contract file covers (not addressing the use of GSA Form 3420) to be prepared by all levels of acquisition personnel. I can see the use for junior level folks -- so they can make sure all items are addressed but for senior level personnel -- taking the time to manually fill in this form is offensive and just takes time away from other tasks.

Acquisition tasks should be, in my opinion, should be assigned so that acquisition personnel are working on one kind of acquisition for a period of time -- perhaps rotated every so often so that personnel are cross-trained in functional areas.

Having acquisition personnel handling MAS, Open market purchases, and projects (which normally include both MAS buys and open market purchases)....increases the chance for mistakes to happen as different rules apply to the different kinds of purchases. Additionally, project management requires a different set of skills and often acquisition personnel are expected to do both procurement management and project management. (These are two different GS series' for a reason -- i.e., 1102 and 0343).

--arlene
PH: 703-605-9210

GSA-ANPR 2006-N01-3

"Michael Paxton"
<paxton_m@msn.com>
02/23/2006 04:15 PM

To VARegulations@va.gov
cc jmandel@govexec.com, gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
bcc

Subject Service Disabled Vet has problems with GSA contract

Good Morning,

My Name is Michael Paxton. I own a Service Disabled Veteran Owned Small business and was awarded a GSA contract on Oct. 18 2005. (GSA Contact Number: GS-29F-0001S) for Comprehensive Furniture Management. At the time the Director of the GSA National Furniture Center Mr. Arthur Hackney, a service disabled veteran himself implemented an innovative idea to award my company a contract that incorporated two contracts into one. That meant combining Comprehensive Furniture Management and Packaged Office under one contract. The intent was to streamline the purchasing process and give the agencies the ability to write one purchase order for both contracts, saving the Government agencies time and money, as well as his own organization. The intent of the combined contract was also to give agencies an avenue to meet the Executive order for the 3% set aside for Service Disabled Vets. I was assigned Ms. Arlene Fitzpatrick as my contracting officer from the National Furniture Center, who put the package together. Mr. Hackney retired before the contract was awarded and Ms. Rose Hudgens was then made acting director. The wording of my contract is such that all other Government agencies outside of the DC National Furniture Center interpret the contract as it was intended. Now the GSA Furniture Center that awarded the contract is interpreting it differently and requesting that I repeat the entire process and obtain a second GSA contract. Since this new request I have spoken with Ms. Arlene Fitzpatrick who informed me she has since been reassigned. Ms. Fitzpatrick indicated that the intent and wording of my contract is clear and that my understanding all along was correct. However, regarding the problem with the my contract she said that I need to take it up with your organizations and that she can no longer speak with me on this matter. Ms. Fitzpatrick said she is willing to speak with your organizations since she wrote the contract and was present during meetings on how the contract would be written to incorporate both contracts. I also contacted her boss Ms. Pam Blumenstien who said she could be of no assistance to me now that the contract has been issued since she works on a different side of the house, so to speak, and the buying side of the house's interpretation is where the problem lies. I am now in a situation that leaves me without the ability to participate in solicitations that pertain to the main stay of my business. Since the National Furniture Center in DC has disputed the intent of the contract, which is in black and white. This is after I have just completed the process of obtaining the GSA contract that would best suit the scope of my business. That process consumed almost a year of time away from my business and thousands of dollars in expenses. All along the intent of the contract was clear to all parties. Now I am being asked to repeat the process and obtain a second contract. That would cause great hardship on my small business as well as defeat the purpose for which this contract was awarded by GSA. Having a second contract would cause the Government entities more work and would require that multiple contracts be awarded rather than one. This would decrease efficiency in the procurement process. I am asking if you can please help me with this matter, as I have exhausted all other avenues known to me.

Sincerely,

Michael Paxton
President

65AR-HNPK-206-101-3

Modular Systems Network Inc.

(619) 440.3375

(619) 440.3333 FAX

(619) 843.3274 CELL

Express yourself instantly with MSN Messenger! Download today - it's FREE!
<http://messenger.msn.click-url.com/go/onm00200471ave/direct/01/>

GSAR-ANPR 2006-N01-4

"Dawn Dippell"
<dldippell@intergate.com>
02/28/2006 08:02 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc
bcc
Subject GSAR ANPR2006-N01 Comment

Dear Ms. Duarte and staff:

FAR does not allow for new technologies to be introduced for consideration in the federal procurement process and this been a multi-year flaw in FAR! This is my experience as founder of the U.S. launch and head of Colorado-based Immtec, Inc.'s government operations.

The GSA is hooked on the smart card standard that is fundamentally flawed because of its use of RFID. Not only is it possible to remotely clone smart cards using a smart card reader, homemade device and flash camera, but it is possible to swap the biometric images of an original credential holder with those of a thief on a cloned card in any home lab, while leaving intact on the cloned card's chip the original credential holder's demographic information. Any Math and Computer Science major has this ability. The result is an imposter could pass anywhere the original credential holder's reputation is permitted, producing their own biometrics and creating not the slightest bit of suspicion with security and law enforcement personnel. The smart card completely defeats the purpose for which it was intended. The biometric smart card puts true meaning into the words: "a false sense of security." The GSA's adoption of the biometric smart card has proven it isn't serious about the combating of terrorist, organized and ordinary crime. The GSA's adoption of smart cards has made the U.S. less secure than it was prior to the 2001 attacks!

Smart cards also aren't flexible. To have confined Immtec's's electronic wallets to smart card classifications was to treat it as though the two are equal. Smart cards don't touch our platform in security and flexibility!

In July of 2002, DOD Combating of Terrorism Technology Support Office Technical Support Working Group (TSWG) referred Immtec to Michael Dinning at Volpe Center in Cambridge, MA to have our platform be reviewed for the Transportation Worker Identification Credential. Later that summer National Institute of Standards and Technology assigned Immtec's platform the name "smart wallet" in its Biometrics and Security Systems and Applications Program. In October of 2002, the GSA became involved in the review of Immtec for the TWIC program. The GSA banned Immtec from federal procurement because of our "monopoly-power." Not only haven't I found that to be a legitimate excuse within FAR, but Immtec had just three management team members scattered between the U.S. and EU. Immtec's smart wallet was far from a monopolistic threat!

FAR stated in October of 2002 contractors can subcontract up to fifty percent of of a contract, but I was told the GSA would not permit Immtec to subcontract at all. This included we had to be the OEM of our fingerprint reader and infrared or RFID data transport technologies. When the smart card companies later (summer of 2003) introduced a biometric version of their platform, there was a doublestandard where they didn't have to be the OEM of their biometric components.

In October of 2002, the S. Koreans were releasing a very rudimentary m-commerce platform throughout S. Korea using infrared-enabled mobile phones. In discussions with Mr. Dinning, I learned the GSA shared Immtec's platform--passed by DOD as defense and critical infrastructure technology, with the S. Koreans and possibly IrDA which was representing the S. Koreans worldwide. Within three to four months, the S. Koreans were releasing much of Immtec's platform and by the following year spread from S. Korea to Japan. In 2004 they moved into Frankfurt, Germany. The GSA's damage has been extensive! While Immtec holds the intellectual property to release its platform in proprietary devices, we also are the intellectual property holders to release our platform in mobile phones and PDAs. The GSA's act of chattiness led the S. Koreans to file a near duplicate of our intellectual property in February of 2003. This was a full three years after Immtec had filed! The GSA's act to share our platform was illegal! It also was an act of friendly espionage and none of the GSA staff involved have been jailed for their act of treason!

GSA - April - 2006 #1-4

In December of 2001 the Russian Federal Government offered Immtec a 100 % financing package. At the time we were seeking to raise $ 10 million. We had the good sense to turn that offer down, which just had the effect of the Russians sweetening the offer with nice homes and other personal perks. The Russians did not go away until July of 2003!

In October of 2002, the U.S. GSA made Immtec management look like the worst of fools! Already we were declining an offer eleven months from a Communist nation, that as of today, intends to enrich uranium for the Iranians. As a reward for our loyalty to the U.S. federal government, the GSA compromised our platform with the S. Koreans and told Immtec to in spirit, "Get Lost! Go Away!" The GSA has held firm to that, now nearly three and one-half years later!

It is March of 2006! The GSA has never lifted its ban on smart wallet technology! Immtec had more legitimate foreign funding offers it declined to adhere to the Buy American Laws--U.S. Law, and then a buyout offer early last July that was later retracted anyhow. The retraction was most likely because of the morality lecture I gave its offeror. Had Immtec management accepted it instead of initially turned the offer down, the Communist Chinese Military--the people who really run the Beijing government, would have been the beneficiaries of our platform. Immtec never intended to launch in China and did not file intellectual property for that market.

China and Russia are adopting biometric smart card platforms because they haven't another choice. They are Immtec's rejects! The GSA is adopting government-wide the biometric smart card platform. The GSA is adopting government-wide the same technologies quasi-U.S. enemies are adopting, when the GSA had a better alternative when appointed officials had me found a U.S. launch just over four years ago. The U.S. has a mission to technologically remain many steps ahead of its enemies. In practice, the GSA wants the U.S. federal government to be at par with its enemies! Again, the U.S. GSA isn't remotely serious about the combating of terrorist, organized and ordinary crime!

The U.S. GSA needs to revamp FAR, NAIC codes, etc. If it does not, the Chinese and Russians will be fighting for "the pickings" inside the capital beltway within five years! I am a walking and talking example of what happens to entrepreneurs if they remain patriotic to the U.S. and adhere to U.S. law...they have furnaces break and they can't afford to repair them. They lose every extra they ever knew and eventually lose their home for remaining loyal to a nation that rebuffs their superior platform and in spirit wants U.S. enemies to control it. I have far more to tell regarding Immtec's experiences in the U.S., some that can be found at the Washington Post's "Lobbying Scandal May Prompt Reform." I am Dawn, Dawn (The Doormat) and Dawn the Doormat in the comments section. Other comments used to be there, but the Washington Post decided to remove them and leave just mine. The revamping of FAR should have been done years ago, because I am full of nothing but regrets! Immtec and its EU unit are so vulnerable because of all that went wrong in the U.S. where no one adheres to procurement law, that the odds are high the Russians will finally get their wish and gain control of Immtec's platform within weeks. It has become impossible to decline another offer of that kind and in fact, we have no choice but to pursue such offers! I really don't know what the U.S. will do to protect itself once this happens. This is 1,419 days since I began laying the groundwork for a U.S. launch. The U.S. homeland defense can no longer be my concern. The GSA is apart of a long list of federal agencies that proved Americans are undeserving of Immtec's platform. Again, this concern regarding FAR should have been done years ago and anything to emerge from it will be too late to undo the damage done to Immtec and its smart wallet! Immtec was not started to fail, and if after all these years we have to lean on the Russians, this was the U.S.' choice not ours! The U.S. federal government and GSA had 1,419 days to undo the need for the Russians and chose not to. All federal identification credentialing programs are currently fixed in violation of FAR, so the U.S. has lost all rights to Immtec's showing a single shred more of loyalty.

BSA, AMK-2006-101-4

Dawn Dippell

33 AR, ANPR-2006-N01-5

"Briggs, Laura - Millbrook, NY"
<Laura.Briggs@ny.usda.gov>

03/09/2006 09:52 AM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov

cc

bcc

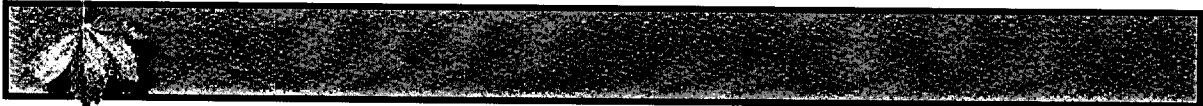

Subject N01

I would like to comment on our new policy with FSA in regards to purchasing. We have been told to purchase items only from GSA, and then to make sure that they are JWOD products besides. We have ordered this way twice since training, and it is not only slow, but more expensive. We have ordered the past 15 years from Quill Corporation, and they are much cheaper in price, and I can Fax my order to them in the afternoon, and the products are in my hands the next morning! Not only that, but the GSA catlog is very limiting, and I can't understand why the government would want the county offices to spend more money than is necessary. We are told that this fiscal year is tight, tight, tight, but then we are ordered to purchase supplies that are more expensive that we have done in the past. Makes no sense to me.....does it to you?

I sincerely appreciate the opportunity to be able to comment and share my frustrations.

Sincerely,
Laura L. Briggs

Laura L. Briggs
Programs Technician
Dutchess County FSA
2715 Route 44
Millbrook, N. Y. 12545-5566
(845) 677-3952
FAX: (845)677-8354

GSAR, APR 2006 N01-6

"Davis, Jean - Ellicottville, NY"
<Jean.Davis@ny.usda.gov>

03/09/2006 04:21 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov

cc

bcc

Subject acquisition of office supplies

I believe we should be allowed to buy supplies at the most cost effective prices. Our Agencies is being required to buy supplies at significantly higher prices than they can be purchased from the public sector. The National office has announced that FSA will have to look at closing some offices again and reducing staff numbers in order to be able to balance our budget. Due to the budget situation, and as a tax payer, I believe we should be allowed to buy supplies at the most cost effective prices. This will then allow us to stretch our operating budget further. Thank you for you consideration in this matter.

Jean Davis
Farm Service Agency

Cattaraugus County

GSAR, ANPR-2006-N01-7

Menlu
Bruce/9FG/R09/GSA/GOV
03/29/2006 03:52 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc
bcc

Subject FAR/GSAR

1) The order of precedence clause FAR 8.002 is outdated. This section of the FAR was applicable when GSA schedules were a mandatory source of supply. Since schedules are optional sources and not mandatory they should be removed from FAR 8.002 which lists only the mandatory sources.

GSA has several options for providing IT solutions to Government agencies. Those options are not only GSA schedules but also include GSA GWACs and other Multiple Award Contracts including the Telecom contracts such as Connections, Network and future vehicles which may use the MAC format. FAR 8.002 creates confusion by listing a non-mandatory (optional) source of supply with mandatory sources of supply. Many agencies such as DOD have supplemental language which allows them to select the best solution for their requirements. In many cases the agencies go further by requiring their internal MACs to be mandatory before use of any non DOD contract including schedules. On the other hand GSA has no such supplementary language in their GSAM that allows a GSA CO to make a decision based on the best solution whether schedules or GWACs or MACs. At the very least, the FAR language should address optional sources of supply such as GWACs and MACs equally with GSA Federal Supply Schedules prior to considering full and open competition.

Leaving the optional schedules language in the order of precedence creates confusion (and in some cases a very narrow interpretation) among GSA CO's and actually hurts GSA's mission to provide the best solution to the client. While awaiting the FAR Case suggest an interim Acquisition Alert to all GSA Contracting Officers letting them know this is being removed. In addition, you might consider a GSAM change or FAR deviation while the FAR Case is being reviewed.

8.002 Priorities for use of Government supply sources.

(a) Except as required by 8.003, or as otherwise provided by law, agencies shall satisfy requirements for supplies and services from or through the sources and publications listed below in descending order of priority—

(1) Supplies.

(i) Agency inventories;

(ii) Excess from other agencies (see Subpart 8.1);

(iii) Federal Prison Industries, Inc. (see Subpart 8.6);

(iv) Supplies which are on the Procurement List maintained by the Committee for Purchase From People Who Are Blind or Severely Disabled (see Subpart 8.7);

(v) Wholesale supply sources, such as stock programs of the General Services Administration (GSA) (see 41 CFR 101-26.3), the Defense Logistics Agency (see 41 CFR 101-26.6), the Department of Veterans Affairs (see 41 CFR 101-26.704), and military inventory control points;

(vi) Mandatory Federal Supply Schedules (see Subpart 8.4);

(vii) Optional use Federal Supply Schedules (see Subpart 8.4); and

(viii) Commercial sources (including educational and nonprofit institutions).

(2) Services.

(i) Services which are on the Procurement List maintained by the Committee for Purchase From People Who Are Blind or Severely Disabled (see Subpart 8.7);

(ii) Mandatory Federal Supply Schedules (see Subpart 8.4);

(iii) Optional use Federal Supply Schedules (see Subpart 8.4); and

(iv) Federal Prison Industries, Inc. (see Subpart 8.6), or commercial sources (including educational and nonprofit institutions).

(b) Sources other than those listed in paragraph (a) of this section may be used as prescribed in 41 CFR 101-26.301 and in an unusual and compelling urgency as prescribed in 6.302-2 and in 41 CFR 101-25.101-5.

(c) The statutory obligation for Government agencies to satisfy their requirements for supplies or services available from the Committee for Purchase From People Who Are Blind or Severely Disabled also applies when contractors purchase the supplies or services for Government use.

2) FAR 17.204. The FAR addresses 10 - year technology contracts as an exception to the basic five year requirement. The GSAM also addresses this by restating the authority for 10 year technology contracts as well as adhering to the proper approvals. However, neither section (FAR or GSAM) addresses task orders(TO) that exceed five years.

The questions that need to be addressed:

- FAR/GSAM- If approvals have been met at the contract level for a 10 year IT Contract would that also mean TO's have the same blanket approval
- FAR/GSAM - Language needs to incorporate any approvals at the TO level, if applicable
- GSA needs to keep in mind other agency policies as it pertains to TO's exceeding the five year period of performance. DOD has implemented approval of 10 year task orders under Section 843 and 813 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 2004 and 2005, respectively. This ruling changes the 5-year limit on the period of task or delivery order contracts to a 10-year limit. This case was anticipated to be send to the Federal Register on 10/15/2005.

17.204 Contracts.

(a) The contract shall specify limits on the purchase of additional supplies or services, or the overall duration of the term of the contract, including any extension.

(b) The contract shall state the period within which the option may be exercised.

(c) The period shall be set so as to provide the contractor adequate lead time to ensure continuous production.

(d) The period may extend beyond the contract completion date for service contracts. This is necessary for situations when exercise of the option would result in the obligation of funds that are not available in the fiscal year in which the contract would otherwise be completed.

(e) Unless otherwise approved in accordance with agency procedures, the total of the basic and option periods shall not exceed 5 years in the case of services, and the total of the basic and option quantities shall not exceed the requirement for 5 years in the case of supplies. These limitations do not apply to information technology contracts. However, statutes applicable to various classes of contracts, for example, the Service Contract Act (see 22.1002-1), may place additional restrictions on the length of contracts.

(f) Contracts may express options for increased quantities of supplies or services in terms of-

(1) Percentage of specific line items,

(2) Increase in specific line items; or

(3) Additional numbered line items identified as the option.

(g) Contracts may express extensions of the term of the contract as an amended completion date or as additional time for performance; e.g., days, weeks, or months.

517.204 Contracts.

(a) Information technology contracts. Notwithstanding FAR 17.204(e), the 5 year limitations apply also to information technology contracts unless a longer period is authorized by statute.

(b) Requests to exceed 5-year limitation. A request to exceed the 5-year limitation specified in FAR 17.204(e) must provide all the following information:

(1) Clearly explain the contract(s) and organization(s) covered by the request.

(2) Support the need for and reasonableness of the extension. Consider factors such as the following:

(i) The results of market research.

(ii) Stability of the requirement(s).

GSA, APR 2006 NOI-7

- (iii) Benefits to the Government.
- (iv) Use of a performance-based contracting approach.
- (v) Availability of funds to cover estimated cancellation costs as well as costs for the first contract period.
- (vi) Customary commercial practice.
- (vii) Mechanisms to adjust for economic fluctuations.
- (c) Approval authority. Requests to exceed the 5-year limitations specified in FAR 17.204(e) must be approved by:
 - (1) The head of the contracting activity for individual contracts.
 - (2) GSA's Senior Procurement Executive for classes of contracts.

/signed/ Mimi Bruce

MIMI BRUCE
Director, Client Support
FSS Enterprise GWAC Center
925-735-1641

<http://www.gsa.gov/answer>

CREATING A SUCCESSFUL FUTURE AT GSA
by Living our values everyday and working together to achieve our goals.

GSAR-ANPR-2006-1101-8

Lureen L.
Deemark/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV
03/31/2006 09:59 AM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc
bcc
Subject comments GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 notice on GSAR Revision Initiative (Federal Register dated 2/15/06)

Please see minor suggested changes below, which have been shared with management.

----- Forwarded by Lureen L. Deemark/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV on 03/31/2006 08:19 AM -----

Lureen L.
Deemark/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV

03/08/2006 09:50 AM

To Michael A. Blumenfeld/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV, Gail L. Hauswirth/FC/CO/GSA/GOV, Wanda S. Bowman/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV,
cc Dewayne F. Carter/FXA/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA, Bernadette
Mount/FC/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA,
Subject Re: comments on 2/15 Federal Register Notice of proposed rule Link

- Under GSAR Part 504.5, reference to Electronic Posting System (EPS) should be replaced with newer reference to Federal Business Opportunities, or FedBizOpps (FBO).
- Part 505.101 suggest changing Business Service Center to read Small Business Utilization Centers.
- Part 501.202 suggest deleting references to publicize in the Commerce Business Daily (CBD) and replace with publicizing opportunities in FedBizOpps.
- Part 519.870-8 no longer applies since the 8(a) MOU has not been renewed.
- Also any references to the Office of Enterprise Development (OED) should be changed to Office of Small Business Utilization (OSBU) since that name was officially changed in 2002.

Please note: A revised subcontracting plan model has recently been provided to the OSBU for submission to Rhonda Cundiff, OCAO. The obsolete version shown at Appendix 519A has not been updated since 1999 and several current socio-economic categories are missing. Hubzones became effective in 1999 and both veteran-owned and service-disabled veteran-owned small businesses were added in 2000 and 2001 respectively.

GSAR, ANPR-2006-NOI-8

Section 5 of the model plan (Clause Inclusion and Flowdown) and Section 6 (Reporting and Cooperation) both reference the now obsolete Standard Forms 294 and 295, and need to include the new government wide requirement for electronic subcontract report submissions from large business contractors to www.esrs.gov.

Lureen Deemark
Business Specialist, FAS Central Office
Office of Acquisition Management
Socio-Economic Resource

(Phone: 703-605-2575; Crystal Plaza 4, Room 802)

PURDUE

GSAR-ANPR 2006-1101-9

One Stamford Forum
Stamford, CT 06901-3431
www.purduepharma.com

April 10, 2006

VIA FEDERAL EXPRESS

General Services Administration
1800 F Street, NW
Room 4035
Washington, DC 20405

Attn: Laurieann Duarte

Re: Federal Agency Retail Pharmacy Program, GSAR ANPR2006-Nov1

Dear Ms. Duarte:

Purdue Pharma L.P. and its associated U.S. companies appreciate this opportunity to comment on the proposed rule published by the General Services Administration ("GSA") in the Federal Register on February 15, 2006, concerning the reorganization of the General Services Administration Federal Acquisition Regulation ("GSAR"). Purdue is a distributor of pharmaceutical products that are sold to commercial and government customers. Federal government customers purchase our commercial products primarily under our Federal Supply Service ("FSS") contract with the Veterans Administration ("VA"), which negotiates and administers contracts for products listed on Schedule 65 under a delegation of authority from GSA.

We are writing about one specific GSA regulation and mandatory contract clause that is having an unintended adverse effect on our commercial business and needs clarification. Specifically, GSAR 532.7003 requires contracting officers to insert Alternate 1 of the clause at 552.232-77 in FSS schedule solicitations and contracts, except FSS Schedule 70, Information Technology. Clause 552.232-77 permits government orders by using the Governmentwide commercial purchase card if agreeable to the contractor. However, Alternate I provides that the FSS contractor must accept the Governmentwide commercial purchase card for payments equal to or less than the micro-purchase threshold ($2500). We believe this provision was included because GSA assumed that FSS contractors selling commercial products normally accept credit card purchases from their commercial customers, and that the provision was not intended to force companies to accept credit cards on commercial sales if it was not their commercial practice to do so. However, unless clarified, that is precisely the effect of this mandatory clause.

Credit card companies do not permit participating vendors to discriminate by accepting their cards from some customers and not others. Therefore, if a company does not currently accept credit card payments, a government contract requirement to accept payment by credit card from government agencies will force the company to accept credit cards payment from all commercial customers as well. The problem is exacerbated in case Schedule 65, because the

Laurieann Duarte
General Services Administration
April 10, 2006
Page 2

GSAL, ANPL - 2006-101-9

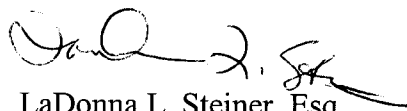

requirement applies only to direct purchases from the contractor, but the majority of Schedule 65 orders are placed by government purchasers indirectly through the prime vendor program. Thus, contractors such as our company must change their commercial practices for a very small percentage of government sales. Further, Schedule 65 contractors have little choice under the Veterans Health Care Act but to offer their products on the FSS under mandatory terms established by law and regulation.

Large companies that do substantial business with the government can establish government divisions which do business differently than their commercial divisions, and thus can limit the practice to the customers of that division. However, for small companies such as ours that do not wish to change their commercial practices and pay the fees associated with the credit card transactions (two to three percentage points on any purchase), the only alternative would be to increase the minimum order amount to exceed the micro-purchase threshold. This is not a good solution for the government or for Purdue.

We request that you clarify that the requirement that FSS contractors must accept the Governmentwide purchase card only applies where the company accepts credit cards from its commercial customers as a business practice in the ordinary course of its business. Alternatively, we request that the requirement need not apply where an FSS contractor participates in the prime vendor program and 90% or more of the government orders for Schedule items are placed through the prime vendor.

We believe this is the fairest and most reasonable application of the regulation consistent with commercial sales practices.

Sincerely,

LaDonna L. Steiner, Esq.
Associate General Counsel

Admitted to Practice in Connecticut, Illinois and Indiana

cc: Alicia Graziano

GSAR-ANPR 2006-N01-10

DeLois
Glover/5PCT/R05/GSA/GOV
04/14/2006 04:42 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc Cindy Meraz/5PCT/R05/GSA/GOV@GSA, Marilyn Roldan/5PCT/R05/GSA/GOV@GSA, Cecelia A. Morris-Rivera/5PCT/R05/GSA/GOV@GSA, Geoff
bcc
Subject GSAR ANPR2006-N01

Below is a list of suggested changes and or clarifications to various GSAR clauses.

GSAR Sections 506.1 and 506.2 reference synopsising in the CBD, which of course no longer exists.

Part 515.305(d)(1) of the GSAM discusses the requirement of using ("must use") PPIRS (Past Performance Information Retrieval System). It goes on to say that a contracting officer "may use" questionnaires tailored to the circumstances, interviews, and other sources. On the other hand, FAR Part 15.203(3) specifically indicates what past performance evaluations "shall address." This includes contractor's record of conforming to contract requirements and to standards of good workmanship; contractor's record of forecasting and controlling costs; contractor's adherence to contract schedules, including administrative aspects of performance; contractor's history of reasonable and cooperative behavior and commitment to customer satisfaction; and generally, contractor's business-like concern for interest of the customer. Additionally, FAR Part 9.105-1 and 42.15 provide steps to conducting past performance survey, including checking List of Parties Excluded from Federal Procurement and Non-Procurement Programs, reviewing previous pre-award survey reports, and requesting information from other government offices. The FAR seems to be substantially more specific in nature than the GSAM.

515.403-4 Requiring cost or pricing data (10 U.S.C. 2306a and 41 U.S.C. 254b).

To determine if a contract action meets the threshold at FAR 15.403-4 for requesting cost and pricing data, consider the value of the action plus any priced options. Exercise of a priced option is not a price adjustment and does not require submission of cost and pricing data. NOTE: GSAR should be revised to state what the threshold is.

515.306 Exchanges with offerors after receipt of proposals.

Limit access to Government cost estimates to Government personnel whose official duties require knowledge of the estimate. During negotiations, you may disclose part or all of the Government estimate under FAR 15.306(e) when necessary to arrive at a fair and reasonable price. After award, you may reveal the total amount of the independent Government estimate. NOTE: More information should be included to explain the various types of exchanges that can be conducted with offerors.

Appendix 515A—Source Selection Procedures

[This Appendix will replace GSA Order, Source Selection Procedures (APD P 2800.2). The source selection procedures are being updated based on the FAR Part 15 rewrite.] NOTE: Would be greatly beneficial to see this section completed.

I would like to see a clause added to the GSAM that allows for use of FAR part 12 in relation to construction or remodeling of real property. The clause could provide guidance on when and how Part 12 could be used for procurement of construction projects. The reason being is that for small to medium size offices, there often is little difference between what we provide for a client agency vs. what is done in the commercial real estate world. The use of this clause would not prevent us from enforcing other provisions of the FAR like Davis-Bacon or GSA regulations, such as security requirements that are particular to the government world.

While I would not personally want to use Part 12 for large projects, I can see the benefit of having it as an option for small office buildouts, or remodeling projects that are relatively simple in scope and similar to what would be done in any commercial office building on a daily basis.

2006-1101-10

If you have any further questions or need additional information, please let me know.

The equitable adjustment clause is 552.243-71. Specifically, I believe that the Overhead, Profit, and Commission section needs to be re-worded to be more clear about the breakdown and distinctions between Subcontractor and Prime Commission, and Overhead and Profit, and the maximum allowable amounts for each.

D. GLOVER

Contracting Officer
Office of Customer Solutions
Technical Services Branch (5PCT)

U. S. General Services Administration

Public Buildings Service
230 S. Dearborn Street, Suite 3622
Chicago, IL 60604
office: 312.353.3978 · mobile: 312.636.0911
fax: 312.886.3330 · e-mail: delois.glover@gsa.gov

GSAR-ANPR 2006-N01-11

General Services Administration,
Regulatory Secretariat (VIR) 1800
ATTN: Laurieann Duarte
1800 F Street, NW, Room 4035x
Washington, DC 20405

Dear Sir,

The Coalition for Government Procurement (Coalition) is pleased to submit the following comments in response to GSAR ANPR 2006-N01.

GSA's intends to rewrite the General Services Acquisition Regulation (GSAR) to improve clarity, maintain consistency with the FAR and implement streamlined and innovative acquisition procedures. GSA specifically ask for suggestions on parts of the GSAR which:

1. Should be clarified to provide consistency with the FAR;
2. Should be eliminated because they duplicate the FAR or create inconsistencies within the GSAR;
3. Have inappropriate regulatory references
4. Have become irrelevant because of changes in technology or business processes
5. Can be streamlined or simplified to eliminate unnecessary administrative burdens on contractors
6. Need to be revised to provide new and/or augmented coverage
7. Unnecessarily impose a significant adverse impact on small entities.

The Coalition offers the following comments and suggestions

1. General

a. We applaud your efforts to take a comprehensive look at the GSAR. GSA is a major procurement arm of the federal government. Its acquisitions have a critical impact on the missions of other agencies and the business interest of broad array of companies. GSA acquisitions impact both small local businesses as well as large global companies. GSAR could be a major factor in driving procurement innovation and should be a go-to document for resolving questions from contractors about how to do business with GSA. We hope that your efforts will be a start to creating such a regulatory instrument.

GSAR
ANPR-2006-1501-11

b. The Coalition suggests that GSA be proactive in using GSAR to address unresolved acquisition issues, particularly regarding GSA Schedule contracting. Over the past several years, Schedule contractors have requested guidance and consistent policy on matters such as time and material task orders, and the extent to which G & A can be added to travel. Some of these issues are addressed generally in FAR. However, specific questions regarding application to Schedules contracting have gone unanswered leading to inconsistent applications across the Schedule program. Since GSA (and VA based on a delegation from GSA) is the only agencies that award Schedule contracts, we believe that GSAR is the appropriate regulatory vehicle for addressing these issues.

2. GWACs and GSA Assisted Services

GSAR should include coverage on GWAC contracting and the use of GSA assisted service. With the reorganization of the Federal Supply and the Federal Technology Services into a new Federal Acquisition Service, GWACs and assisted services seem to be an increasing part of the agency's acquisition strategy. The GSAR however, covers neither of these topics. GSAR might include topics such as criteria for establishing GWAC and/or assisted acquisition services, pricing objectives, and standard clauses. Including these topics would have several benefits. First, the government could implement best practices of individual offices across the entire program. Secondly, consistent GSA standards afford GSA contractors an opportunity to streamline their internal corporate systems and processes. Such streamlining can result better service and more cost efficient systems that may ultimately reflected in the government's prices.

3. Section 542.12. Novations

The GSAR and the FAR both provide guidelines on how novations and change of name agreements should be processed. Neither GSAR nor FAR clearly specify when a contractor must file the novation or name change agreement. The novation process is taking on greater importance as the number of corporate acquisitions and restructurings continue to grow. Further, the Central Contract Registry (CCR) is now used government-wide. Contractors are required to update CCR annually. When formal contract documents and information contained in the CCR become out of sync, it can impact a contractor's ability to get paid by all agencies.

Currently paragraph (p) of the Commercial Items clause (FAR 52.212-4) gives some guidelines as to when a novation or name change must be filed. In our experience, neither contractors nor contracting officers routinely know to look to that section for guidance. When they do turn to that section, it is not always easily understood. The Coalition recommends that GSA rationalize the rules of FAR 42.12, GSAR 542.12, and the commercial item clause. GSAR should then prescribe language that states at what point in time a GSA contractor should file request to novate or change its name. We also recommend that GSAR include a timeframe for the contracting officer to complete his or her review and make a decision on the request for novation or name change.

3. Size Status and the CCR

GSAR should resolve how the requirement to annually update CCR impacts the position that small business size status is as of the time the offer is submitted. The Coalition recommends that GSAR prescribe language to insert in GSA Schedule price lists on this topic. The language would inform agencies that notwithstanding data in CCR, for purposes of ordering against the schedule a contractor is small for the 5 year period of the schedule contract. Schedule contractors are required to recertify size status at the time of a renewal

4. Section 538 Federal Supply Schedule Contracting

The Coalition recommends that GSA consider adding a section describing the purpose and objectives of Schedule contracting. Such a section would provide context and focus that could help improve consistency in the myriad of decisions that contracting officers have to make daily. Increasingly, our members report use of contracting tactics that appear to depart from the basic philosophy of Schedule contracting even though GSA has not published regulatory changes. For example, in addition to processes directed by GSAR 538.70, some contracting officers are attempting to compare prices offered by one company to prices of another for similar but not identical services and products. We find this process highly objectionable for a number of reasons.

First, it seems inconsistent with the underlying philosophy of the GSA Schedule program providing choice to federal customers in order that they make technical selections that meet their needs at best value pricing.

Secondly, GSA does not have a valid technical standard for making the comparison. The inclusive multiple contractor model is appropriate because GSA does not have adequate knowledge, specifications or requirements regarding specific agency needs to enable it narrow the universe of contractors to a small number or compare prices. Because of the lack of technical standards, GSAR instructs contracting officials to evaluate prices by comparing the prices that a prospective contractor offers the Government with the prices that the offeror extends to commercial customers.

Finally, such a comparison builds an additional, unpublicized, and inconsistently applied process into MAS negotiations. Such processes are administratively burdensome and slow the evaluation process.

5. Section 538.70 Most Favorite Customer Pricing

a. The Coalition recommends that GSA clarify the MAS pricing policy by deleting the term "most favorite customer (MFC)" from this section of the GSAR. The term is widely misunderstood and inconsistently applied. In summary, GSA's pricing policy is to negotiate the best discounts possible considering the government's terms and conditions, and the commercial sales practices of the offeror. The policy as articulated in section 538.70 stands on its own and is clearer without the phrase, "most favorite customer".

b. The Coalition further recommends that GSA clarify GSAR by more specifically stating the circumstances that warrant the government getting lower discount than commercial customer. Currently some contracting officers feel compelled by the phrase "MFC" and the fear of being second guessed, never to back off their original price negotiation objective. Other contracting officers may back off their negotiation objectives when is not appropriate to do so. We believe that clarifying this section of GSAR will result in quicker negotiations and better contracts for both the government and its industry partners.

c. Section 538.70 revised to incorporate the recommendations above would read substantially as follows:

538.70 Evaluation of multiple award schedule (MAS) offers.

(a)(1) The Government's high negotiation objective is to seek to the offeror's best price. However, the Government recognizes that the terms and conditions of commercial sales vary and there are legitimate reasons why the best price is not achieved.

(a)(2) The following circumstances are examples of circumstances when the best price may not be achieved. A commercial customer.

- Commits to a specific volume
- Historically purchases in excess of government's estimated annual volume under the MAS
- Agrees to exclusive use
- Has a single order and or delivery point
- Markets the offeror's products or services
- Buys FOB origin if the government buys FOB destination
- Commits to other terms or conditions that result in a reduction in the offeror's cost of doing business or provides demonstrable value to the offeror

(b) Establish negotiation objectives based on a review of relevant data and determine price reasonableness

GSAK
ANPR-2006-1101-11

(c) When establishing negotiation objectives and determining price reasonableness, compare the terms and conditions of the MAS solicitation with the terms and conditions of agreements with the offeror's commercial customers. When determining the Government's price negotiation objectives, consider the following factors:

- (1) Aggregate volume of anticipated purchases.
- (2) The purchase of a minimum quantity or a pattern of historic purchases.
- (3) Prices taking into consideration any combination of discounts and concessions offered to commercial customers.
- (4) Length of the contract period
- (5) Warranties, training, and/or maintenance included in the purchase price or provided at additional cost to the product prices.
- (6) Ordering and delivery practices.
- (7) Any other relevant information, including differences between the MAS solicitation and commercial terms and conditions that may warrant differentials between the offer and the discounts offered to the most favored commercial customer(s). For example, an offeror may incur more expense selling to the Government than to the customer who receives the offeror's best price, or the customer (e.g., dealer, distributor, original equipment manufacturer, other reseller) who receives the best price may perform certain value-added functions for the offeror that the Government does not perform. In such cases, some reduction in the discount given to the Government may be appropriate. If the best price is not offered to the Government, you should ask the offeror to identify and explain the reason for any differences. Do not require offerors to provide detailed cost breakdowns.

(d) You may award a contract containing pricing which is less favorable than the best price the offeror extends to any commercial customer for similar purchases if you make a determination that both of the following conditions exist:

- (1) The prices offered to the Government are fair and reasonable, even though comparable discounts were not negotiated.
- (2) Award is otherwise in the best interest of the Government

GSAR

ANPL-2006-101-11

6. Section 538.271.

a. GSAR should be revised to reflect that many MAS contracts are no longer awarded as a discount from catalog. This shift has occurred as more services have been introduced into the program. Even product oriented companies that are in highly competitive and volatile pricing markets have been impacted. In such case prices may be negotiated as a mark-up over cost or utilizing some other method to determine prices fair and reasonable. The GSAR needs to give guidance regarding proper method and strategies when awarding contracts based on other than established catalog prices. Particularly, the coalition urges GSA to eliminate application of the price reduction clause to contracts award using strategies other than discounts from catalog prices. See comments on GSAR 538.272

b. GSAR should limit (or give better guidance) as to the number of commercial customers that can be the basis of award. As currently implemented some contracting officers dictate the use of extremely broad categories, such as 'all commercial customers'. Such tactics seem to go well beyond the purpose of the GSAR to assure that the government maintain the value of its bargain over the life of the contract. Moreover, they result in contracts that are nearly impossible for the most well intentioned contractor to administer.

7. GSAR 538.272; 552.238-75. Price Reductions Clause

The Coalition strongly recommends that GSA eliminate the Price Reductions Clause during its re-write of the GSAR. The GSA Schedule is a commercial item contract type. The Price Reduction Clause is not commercial in nature and for this reason alone, should be eliminated from Schedule contracts.

Yet, there are also market-driven reasons to eliminate the Price Reductions Clause. Simply put, the Price Reductions Clause is not responsible for maintaining price reasonableness in the overwhelming majority of schedule contracts. Rather, competition and market dynamics keep prices low every day. This is especially the case in the IT and services arenas where not just schedules-based competition exists, but competition from Government Wide Acquisition Contracts and single agency Multiple Award Contracts all work to ensure that prices on individual contracts stay competitive. In today's intense government market, no contractor can afford to have prices too high relative to their competition, regardless of what their Price Reductions Clause says. As such, the Clause is an anachronism that is nearly meaningless in terms of achieving its original intent. Far from being benign, however, the Clause causes significant problems due to its mishandling by government contracting offices.

GSAR
ANPR 2006-1101-11

Many GSA contracting officers routinely violate GSA's own guidance in establishing MFC and tracking customer relationships. The end result is that the Price Reductions Clause serves not as a useful means to ensure continued fair pricing, but a punitive tool to punish even the most diligent schedule contractor. Many companies are hectorred into accepting contracting officer demands for improperly broad tracking customer relationships in order to get a timely contract award. These companies may fail to meet the requirements of the Clause, not because of any intended wrong-doing, but because government contracting officers guarantee their failure by misapplying government rules.

8. Contract Renewals

GSAR should provide specific guidelines on the Schedules renewal process. Many major corporations have existing GSA schedule contracts. Rather than submit new offers, companies renew existing contracts. Industry embraced the concept of multiple year contracting for GSA Schedules because they anticipated that this would be a faster and more efficient process than submitting a new offer. Generally, we are happy that it has been a more efficient process. We are, however, noticing a pattern of increasing inconsistencies and more onerous requirements across GSA buying centers. The Coalition recommends that GSAR include a section that would address timelines for submission of proposals, information which should be submitted with the renewal proposal and standards for audit of such proposals.

Sincerely,

Kathryn Coulter
Director of Policy
Coalition for Government Procurement

GSAR APR 2006-N01-12

Lesa P.
Scott/TFM/CO/GSA/GOV
04/17/2006 05:35 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc
bcc
Subject gsaranpr.2006-N01

Lesa P. Scott/TFM/CO/GSA/GOV

Lesa P.
Scott/TFM/CO/GSA/GOV
04/17/2006 02:57 PM

To Althea Kireilis/VPC/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA
cc
Subject Request for GSAM changes

Dear Sir/Madam:

Re: GSAR 504.7001-4 Supplemental procurement instrument identification number

I would recommend the modification identifiers (PC, PA, PS, & PO) be deleted. They are burdensome and duplicative of Blocks 13 A-D on the SF 30. I recommend replacing them with:

1. The DoD standard of A for ACO or P for PCO then 3 digit number,
2. Put the number in front of the letter designations: xxPC, xxPA, xxPS, xxPO, xxAC, xxAA, xxAS, & xxAO.

I can think of plenty of reasons why/how the PC, PA, PS, & PO came about. All of the reasons revolve around manual and paper dependent systems. With computers, the different designations actually are bothersome when sorting and tracking modifications in the electronic systems. If the number was in front, then the systems would order the modifications numerically and the type of action would be visible.

Take care,

Lesa P. Scott, CPCMC
Contracting Officer, FEDSIM Acquisition
GSA/FTS/FEDSIM - the leader in large scale integration

Voice: (703) 306-7604
Fax: (703) 306-7711

GSAR
ANPR 2006-1101-13

"Clayton S. Marsh"
<csmarsh@govcontracts.net>
04/17/2006 04:39 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc
bcc
Subject GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 comments

Dear Madams and Sirs,

I am an attorney specializing in federal government contract law and compliance. Among other services, I perform due diligence review of companies that are not my clients, but rather are willing targets for investments by my clients. In this capacity, I see a great deal of GSA Schedule contracts, and applications/proposals, from companies in a wide variety of industries.

From this perspective, I offer comments that I believe are in the best interest of GSA, federal purchasing agencies, and the U.S. taxpayers. The impact of these comments is likely to be neutral to my investor clients, except to the extent that GSA removes ambiguity in contract rights and obligations, and thus uncertainty to an investor.

My comments all focus on the GSAR 552.238-75 PRICE REDUCTIONS (currently MAY 2004) clause, the Commercial Sales Practices Format (CSPF) in GSAR 515.408, and the Figure 515.4 Instructions that accompany them.

1. Failure to identify the customer (or category of customers) that formed the basis of award

Companies I have reviewed in recent years do not possess a record of a negotiated customer or category of customer for future Price Reductions (hereinafter in these comments, the "benchmark"). I do not recall encountering this absence of an agreed benchmark in the 1980s or 1990s, when post-award audits seemed more common. This is despite the clear statement GSA's Price Reductions clause that "[b]efore award of a contract, the Contracting Officer and the Offeror will agree upon (1) the customer (or category of customers) which will be the basis of award, and (2) the Government's price or discount relationship to the identified customer (or category of customers)."

GSA perhaps makes an internal record of a benchmark, but it appears to me that no record is shared with contractors, and that no record is acknowledged or signed by the contractor, or there surely would be a copy in the possession of at least one company I have reviewed.

I conclude that GSA and the taxpayers are at a substantial risk, under those GSA Schedule contracts I have reviewed in recent years, that there is no enforceable benchmark customer or category of customer, for purposes of GSAR 552.238-75(c)(1)(iii):

A price reduction shall apply to purchases under this contract if, after the date negotiations conclude, the Contractor—(iii) Grants special discounts to the customer (or category of customers) that formed the basis of award, and the change disturbs the price/discount relationship of the Government to the customer (or category of customers) that was the basis of award.

I note that the Instructions at 515.408, Solicitation provisions and contract clauses specify that "you will be aligned with the customer or category of customer that receives your best price for purposes of the Price Reductions clause at 552.238-75," but even that rule applies only in stated circumstances (where price offered is below any price offered to others). The failure to create a clear record of an agreed benchmark, which record is in the possession of both parties, creates a high risk of rendering this right of GSA and taxpayers unenforceable. In a dispute, discovery powers might reveal a consistent failure by GSA to agree upon, and record, a usable benchmark for Price

GSAR
APR 2006-101-13

Reductions.

Recommendation: Add to existing documents a clear line for proposing a benchmark, and a clear line for both parties to acknowledge the agreed benchmark. The awarded contract itself should do the latter. The CPSF standard template could provide a line for the contractor's proposed benchmark.

2. More consistent parameters for CPSF data

I believe that there is value in consistency – a greater likelihood of driving fair prices among all contracts for a type of product or service. One area for consistency is in the data collected in CSPF charts. GSA's sample format does a commendable job toward that goal. I believe it could be improved.

I have found that some but not all contractors complete their CSPFs explicitly stating restrictions on the data being disclosed, which restrictions are not in GSA's Instructions. I also have found that some but not all contractors complete their CSPFs with data that have been restricted, legitimately, through internal steps including written policies (re "open" contract awards) or corporate organization/subsidiaries (re domestic sales) that limit the data required to be disclosed. The limitations are not inherently harmful to GSA, procuring agencies, or taxpayers. Lack of consistent data among offering contractors, however, is potentially harmful to GSA's ability to negotiate fair prices across all GSA Schedule contracts for a type of product or service.

o Domestic Sales

I have found that some companies are organized so that only one subsidiary applies for a GSA Schedule contract; that subsidiary also makes sales to the general public but only in the United States or North America. I have found that other companies simply state in connection with CSPFs that sales data provided are limited to sales in the United States or North America. In order to have companies providing data on equal footing, I would make this restriction apply to all CSPFs submitted.

Recommendation: In the "Figure 515.4—Instructions for Commercial Sales Practices Format" in GSAR 515.408, limit disclosure requirements to domestic sales, or to North American sales. The result would be that there is not such a large potential discrepancy between a submission from a company that legitimately limits its disclosures to such sales, and a competing company that does not. I suspect that domestic or North American discounts are the ones that drive ultimate price/discount negotiations, anyway.

o Last 12 months

I have found that some companies explicitly limit their certified CSPF disclosures to sales in the last 12 months, to clarify reach of the vague Instructions language that any sales agreement "in effect" at the time CSPF charts are prepared should be included. Other companies do not state a 12-month restriction. The vague Instructions language ("in effect") permits a broad range of interpretation and thus disclosure. Again, this hinders useful comparisons by GSA, in negotiations across competing companies.

Recommendation: In the "Figure 515.4—Instructions for Commercial Sales Practices Format" in GSAR 515.408, limit disclosure requirements to orders that have produced revenue in the last 12 months preceding the certification date. This would make for better apples-to-apples comparisons across offerors. It also would align better with the 12-month sales data collected CSPF item (1).

GSA
ANPR-2006-1101-13

Clayton S. Marsh, Esq.
3 High Street #3
Ipswich, MA 01938
978-312-1284
fax 978-312-1285

This message is intended for the named recipient(s) only and may contain ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGED communication or information. If you are not an intended recipient, please notify the sender immediately. Thank you.

GSAR ANPR-2006-001-14

Gary D.
Roberts/PQ/CO/GSA/GOV
04/17/2006 04:37 PM

To gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov
cc chris.reutershan@gsa.gov, Kay
McNew/PG/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA, Christopher T.
Giavis/PGB/CO/GSA/GOV@GSA,
bcc
Subject GSA Public Buildings Service Comments

Submitted for

Christopher Reutershan
Assistant Commissioner
Office of National Customer Services Management
Public Buildings Service

US General Services Administration GSAR Changes 4-17-06_ v2.DOC

GSAR ANPR-2006-N01-14

GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
April 17, 2006

The GSA Public Building Service provides the following comments:

1. In GSAR 570.102, Definitions, change the definition of "Small business" so that it references the Small Business Administration Size Regulations that changes the gross receipts amount over time. Currently, GSAR provides a dollar amount that is out of date. The change will ensure that the GSAR keeps up with SBA changes. Suggested language is:

Small business" means a concern including affiliates, which is organized for profit, is independently-owned and operated, is not dominant in the field of leasing commercial real estate, and has annual average gross receipts for the preceding three fiscal years which are less than the size standard established by Small Business Administration. The size standards may be found at <http://www.sba.gov/size/sizetable2002.html>. For most procurements, the NAICS code is 531120.

2. In GSAR 570.103 Authority to Lease, the paragraph has been modified and citations have been updated as follows:

(a) The Administrator of General Services is authorized by 40 U.S.C. § 585, to enter into a lease agreement for the accommodation of a federal agency in a building (or improvement) which is in existence or being erected by the lessor for the accommodation of the federal agency. The lease agreement may not bind the Government for more than 20 years.

3. In GSAR 570.105-2, Two Phase Design-Build Selection Procedures, the initial reference to section 303M has been updated to provide the United States Code (U.S.C.) citation as follows:

"....Act of 1949, as amended, 41 U.S.C. § 253m,..."

Add a reference to the relevant FAR provisions for ease of use. The suggested language is as follows:

"Use the procedures in section 303M and FAR 36.3 when you meet the conditions in (a) and (b) below:"

4. In GSAR 570.105-2 Two Phase Design-Build Selection Procedures, subsection 570.105-2(b)(4)(iii) should be changed to:

GSAR, APRIL 2006-102-14

(iii) The experience and past performance of potential contractors

FAR 15.304 requires evaluation of past performance when the contract value is more than $100,000.

5. GSAR 505.101 Methods of Disseminating Information, we suggest the chart be changed to reflect that when an ad is required for leasehold interests in real property that fedbizopps.gov is required, and local ads are optional. This reflects the changes in our technology and business processes. We also want to reconcile different response times for FBO notices and published advertisements.

(c) For acquisitions involving real property:

If the acquisition is not exempt under FAR 5.202 or GSAR 505.202, and...	Then you must publicize the proposed acquisition...
The acquisition is for real property appraisal services estimated to cost $25,000 or more.	At fedbizopps.gov
The acquisition is for leasehold interests in real property estimated to exceed 10,000 ANSI/BOMA Office (usable) square feet (except lease construction on a pre-selected site).	At fedbizopps.gov
The acquisition is for a leasehold interest in a building to be constructed on a pre-selected site.	At fedbizopps.gov

(d) You may additionally publicize real property appraisal services or proposed leases of any dollar value or square footage, respectively, in local newspapers or at fedbizopps if it will serve to promote competition.

6. In Publicizing and Response Time, to better reflect market conditions, we suggest that GSAR 505.203(a)(1) should be changed as follows:

(1) For leasehold interests in real property, 20 calendar days between solicitation issuance and the date established for receipt of initial offers or consider the individual acquisition and establish a reasonable response time.

7. For GSAR 570.109 Certifications should be changed to include representations as they are part of our business process:

Before awarding a lease, review applicable representations and certifications for compliance with statute and regulations.

8. In GSAR 570.111 Inspection and Acceptance, we request an expansion on the information that should be captured prior to rent commencement:

Before you accept space, obtain an inspection to ensure that the space complies with the Government's requirements and specifications. Document the inspection and acceptance in the contract file. The inspection and acceptance document must contain the square footage accepted and the acceptance date.

9. GSAR 570.113 Disclosure of Mistakes After Award should be changed to reflect the language used in FAR 15.508. Suggest:

If you discover a mistake in a lessor's offer after award, process substantially in accordance with FAR 14.407-4 and GSAM Subpart 514.407.

10. GSAR 570.203-2(a) Competition should be changed to reflect the FAR 15.403-1 requirements for adequate price competition.

- (a) Solicit at least two sources to promote competition to the maximum extent practicable. If you have repeated requirements for space in the same market, and if practicable, invite two sources not included in the most recent solicitation to submit offers.

11. GSAR 570.203-4 Negotiation, Evaluation and Award should be changed to clarify all cost elements that are included in determining contract value. This section is also changed to refer to the citation that establishes the threshold for determining whether cost or pricing data is needed. This amount changes over time.

- (c) If the total price (whether funded by GSA, the lessor, and/or the tenant agency by Reimbursable Work Authorization) and options, exceeds the amount established by FAR 15.403-4, consider whether you need cost and pricing data to determine that the price is fair and reasonable. In most cases the exceptions at FAR 15.403-1 will apply.

- (d) If the total contract value (whether funded by GSA, the lessor, and/or the tenant agency by Reimbursable Work Authorization) of the lease, including options, will exceed the amount established by FAR 15.403-4, the proposed awardee must provide an acceptable small business subcontracting plan. This requirement does not apply if the proposed awardee is a small business concern. (SBA's Small Business Size Regulations implement the Small Business Act's mandate to SBA.)

12. GSAR 570.303-2 Issuing the SFO should be changed to provide augmented coverage so as to avoid future protests and to reflect changing technology.

Release the SFO at the same time to all prospective offerors, including the incumbent lessor, and any other person who requests one. The SFO may be issued electronically.

13. GSAR 570.303-4 Changes to SFOs should be changed to provide augmented coverage of the subject.
 - (d) If an amendment is so substantial that it requires a complete revision of the SFO, cancel the SFO, readvertise as may be required by GSAM 570.106, and issue a new SFO.
 - (e) If there are changes to the Government's requirements for amount of space, delineated area, occupancy date, and/or other major aspects of the requirements, consider whether you need to readvertise.
14. GSAR 570.304 General Source Selection Procedures has been changed to adopt certain business processes contain in FAR.
 - (a) The procedures at FAR 15.3 are required for acquisitions of leasehold interests for two-phase design-build procedures authorized by GSAR 570.105-2.
 - (c) You must include price or cost to the Government, past performance, and other factors as required by FAR 15.304 as evaluation factors in every case.
 - (d) The evaluation factors and significant subfactors must comply with FAR 15.304 and either...
15. GSAR 570.305 Two-phase Design-build Selection Procedures has been changed to provide augmented coverage of the process.
 - (a) These procedures apply to acquisitions of leasehold interests if you use the two-phase design-build selection procedures authorized by FAR 36.3.
16. GSAR 570.402-5 Potential Acceptable Locations has been changed to reflect the Government's consideration of all costs in a procurement:
 - (a) If the cost-benefit-benefit analysis indicates that the Government will recover relocation costs and duplication of costs through competition, develop an SFO and negotiate with all interested parties following 570.3. Disclose in the SFO (Price Evaluation) the Government's estimate of relocation costs, including, but not limited to, furniture and equipment move, breakdown and setup of systems furniture and other equipment, telecommunications costs, administrative time, and costs to duplicate fixtures.

17. Change GSAR 570.501 General subsection (a) to correct an inappropriate reference. The first part should read:

Acquire alterations for an existing lease.....

18. Change GSAR 570.502 Alterations by the Lessor to correct a typographical error. The word supplement should be supplemental.

19. The dollar citation in GSAR 570.505-2 Procedures should be changed to the FAR reference that establishes that value and which changes over time:

(d) If you require cost or pricing data and the alterations project will exceed the threshold established in FAR 15.403-4, request an audit.

20. GSAR 570.503(b) Alterations by the Government or through a Separate Contract should be changed to reduce redundancy:

(b) If the Government decides to contract for the work, invite the lessor to submit an offer in the procurement for the alterations project.

21. In the "If" column of the chart at GSAR 570.601 FAR provisions and clauses, for the Pre-award Onsite Equal Opportunity, change the $500,000 to FAR 15.403-4 which establishes that value and which changes over time.

22. Based on recent disaster experience, GSAR 552.270-7, Fire and Casualty Damage should be changed to read as follows:

552.270-7 - FIRE AND CASUALTY DAMAGE (XXX 2006)

If the entire premises are destroyed by fire or other casualty, this lease will immediately terminate. In case of partial destruction or damage, so as to render the premises untenable, as determined by the Government, the Government may terminate the lease by giving written notice to the Lessor within 15 calendar days from such determination; if so terminated, no rent will accrue to the Lessor after such partial destruction or damage; and if not so terminated, the rent will be reduced proportionately by supplemental agreement hereto effective from the date of such partial destruction or damage. Nothing in this lease shall be construed as relieving Lessor from liability for damage to or destruction of property of the United States of America caused by the willful or negligent act or omission of Lessor.

23. We are determining whether or not the tax clause and operating costs clause can be deleted from GSAR.

24. A new contract clause regarding mold is being proposed to provide augmented coverage.
25. Since GSAR 570 does not currently provide coverage for changes of ownership and novations as provided by FAR 42.12, we propose a new contract clause to incorporate this process into lease contracts.
26. Change GSAR 570.701 Standard Forms by deleting the second sentence which reads, "Delete the reference to the Standard Form 2-A in paragraph 7." The SF-2 was revised in June 2003 and no longer contains this reference.
27. GSAR 570.702 GSA Forms should be amended to include another form. This form will streamline certain portions of the lease procurement process. The suggested language is:
 - d. You may use the GSA Form 1217, Lessor's Annual Cost Statement, to obtain pricing information regarding offered services and lease commissions.
28. In 570.405, lease extensions, modify paragraph (c) of the last sentence to:
 - c. This authority may apply to lease extensions in situations such as, but not limited to, the following:

In addition, add:

 - (4) The agency occupying the space has encountered unexpected delays in planning for a potential relocation to other federally controlled space due to verifiable organizational, financial, or other uncertainties.

GSAR ANPR 2006-N01-15

April 17, 2006

General Services Administration,
Regulatory Secretariat (VIR)
1800 F Street, NW, Room 4035
Washington, DC 20405
ATTN: Laurieann Duarte

Re: GSAR Revision Initiative, GSAR ANPR 2006-N01 (71 FR 7910, Feb. 15, 2006)

Dear Ms. Duarte:

In regard to the advance notice of proposed rulemaking (ANPR) with request for comments regarding the General Services Administration Acquisition Regulation (GSAR) revision initiative published in the Federal Register Feb. 15, Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC) commends GSA for undertaking this effort and trusts that GSA will use the opportunity to make changes that will enhance the ability of its government customers and industry to do business with the agency. As you know, GSA and SAIC have had a longstanding and, we trust, mutually productive relationship. We at SAIC fully support GSA's vital mission in offering vehicles to meet the changing needs of its government customers.

Within the 60-day comment period allotted, SAIC has reviewed selected portions of the GSAR and is pleased to offer the following comments for your consideration.

Integrate the GSAR rewrite with changes necessitated by the GSA reorganization.

As a preliminary observation, SAIC notes that the impending GSA reorganization likely will necessitate changes to the GSAR. Such changes may in some cases supersede any changes resulting from the GSAR revision. Thus, to avoid duplication of effort, GSA may wish to hold off on revising the GSAR until the reorganization is in place.

Public meeting(s). GSA's decision to issue an ANPR (rather than a proposed rule) means that industry will have another opportunity to offer comments. Given the magnitude of the undertaking, GSA may want to consider holding a public meeting once it has had the opportunity to review the input on the ANPR. Alternatively or in addition, GSA may want to consider holding a public meeting after the proposed rule is issued.

Contractor teaming arrangements; other Web guidance. Guidance on teaming arrangements is available on GSA's Web site but not in the GSAR itself. GSA may want to consider putting all such guidance in the GSAR itself.

Consistency across GSA regions. Currently, the GSA regions have their own guidance, which varies across regions. These inconsistencies make it harder for contractors to do business with GSA. Accordingly, GSA may want to consider harmonizing the guidance.

EPA clause. Currently, GSA schedule holders are subject to the Economic Price Adjustment clause limiting price increases to 10 percent after a one-year waiting period. The EPA clause was intended to prevent the government from paying excessive amounts for an item, but it is now hurting many GSA schedule holders as well as Government customers. In today's competitive economic environment, in which prices are constantly fluctuating, the EPA clause is outmoded. The clause in effect penalizes those who are more established in the market and entered into a GSA schedule contract earlier. If a schedule holder cannot increase GSA pricing proportionately as its costs rise, it often simply removes the item from its schedule offerings. The Government must then initiate a separate procurement process for a needed item, bypassing the GSA schedules and thereby increasing transaction costs. A potential solution is for GSA to implement the same language being utilized in Quick-Mod for all GSA schedules. Under Quick-Mod, unit pricing is removed from the contract and contract pricing is re-established on another basis of award, such as "discount off of list price" or "markup over the contractor's cost of the item." Therefore, the EPA provisions of contract clauses 552.216-70 and I-FSS-969 do not apply to pricing re-established under Quick-Mod. Such an approach would facilitate market-driven pricing based upon increases and decreases to the product list and basis of award.

Accessibility clause. The clause at GSAR 552.238-70, Identification of Electronic Office Equipment Providing Accessibility for the Handicapped, is dated September 1991, which predates the 1998 amendments to the Rehabilitation Act. Since some office equipment may fall under the statutory definition of Electronic and Information Technology (EIT) as presented under Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act (29 USC Part 794d, as amended 1998), SAIC recommends that GSAR 552.238-70 be amended to include reference to the Electronic and Information Technology Accessibility Standards (36 CFR Part 1194, effective June 21, 2001). The Accessibility Standards regulation specifies the technical performance requirements for all EIT purchased by the Federal Government after June 21, 2001, and would include the subset of office equipment that is also categorized as EIT.

In closing, SAIC appreciates the opportunity to comment on the GSAR rewrite initiative.

Should you wish to contact me, I can be reached at 858 826-6623 or ROBERT.S.AYERS@saic.com.

Very truly yours,

R. Stephen Ayers
Senior Vice President, Contracts and Procurement
Science Applications International Corporation

GSAR ANPR 2006-N01-16

American Society of Civil Engineers

Washington Office
101 Constitution Avenue NW
Suite 375 East
Washington, D.C. 20001
(202) 789-7850
Fax: (202) 789-7859

The General Services Administration

Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

GSAR ANPR2006-N01

71 Fed. Reg. 7910 (Feb. 15, 2006)

COMMENTS OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS*

April 17, 2006

ISSUE

The General Services Administration (GSA) is requesting public comment on possible revisions to the General Services Administration Acquisition Regulation (GSAR) to clarify and simplify its procedures, 71 Fed. Reg. 7910 (Feb. 15, 2006). Commenters have been asked to discuss a number of issues, including recommendations for improvements to parts of the regulation that may “[u]nnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities.” Id. at 7911.

The American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) believes that the GSA strategy for providing long-term, governmentwide contracts with commercial firms for engineering and design services¹ through its Schedules Programs operates to the great economic disadvantage of

* ASCE was founded in 1852 and is the country's oldest national civil engineering organization. It represents more than 139,000 civil engineers individually in private practice, government, industry, and academia who are dedicated to the advancement of the science and profession of civil engineering. ASCE is a non-profit educational and professional society organized under Part 1.501(c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

¹ The industry includes all establishments in the North American Industrial Classification System (NAICS) sector 541330, Engineering Services, and comprises establishments primarily engaged in applying physical laws and principles of engineering in the design, development, and utilization of machines, materials, instruments, structures, processes, and systems. The services provided may involve the provision of advice; the preparation of feasibility studies, of preliminary and final plans and designs, small businesses. These engineering schedules also disregard the requirements of the Brooks Architect-Engineers Act of 1972, 40 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.

Therefore, we request that the GSA stop circumventing the government's policy to select firms for engineering and related services on the basis of demonstrated competence and qualifications for the type of professional services required. To accomplish this GSA must remove any mention of civil engineering from the Federal Supply Schedules (Schedule 871 and Schedule 899). The current disclaimers are not working, as is evidenced by the contracts' being awarded from FAR Part 36-covered activities by the Federal Supply Schedules.

BACKGROUND

A. The Federal Supply Schedules

Under the GSA Schedules—also known as Multiple Award Schedules (MAS) and Federal Supply Schedules (FSS)—GSA signs long-term, governmentwide contracts with commercial vendors to provide more than 10 million commercial supplies and services that can be ordered by federal agencies directly from GSA Schedule contractors. To become a GSA Schedule contractor, commercial firms first submit an offer in response to the applicable GSA Schedule solicitation; GSA then awards contracts to responsible companies offering commercial items, including architectural and engineering design services, that fall within the generic descriptions in the GSA Schedule solicitations.

The agency makes it very clear that price is the most important factor in the federal customer's decision to buy a service from the FSS.

GSA Schedule contracts are negotiated with the intent of achieving the contractors' "most favored customer" pricing/discounts under similar conditions. In order to ensure that they receive the best value at the lowest overall cost when using GSA Schedule contracts, agencies are encouraged and empowered to seek price reductions, not only for orders over the maximum order threshold, but also when circumstances warrant.

U.S. General Services Administration, Frequently Asked Questions, at http://www.gsa.gov/Portal/gsa/ep/contentView.do?faq=yes&pageTypeId=8199&contentId=8106&contentType=GSA_OVERVIEW#1 (emphasis added) (last visited Apr. 5, 2006).

GSA goes on to urge prospective federal customers to hunt for bargains and negotiate for the best price available for all services offered through the FSS.

and of technical services during the construction or installation phase, inspection, and evaluation of engineering projects, along with related services.

GSA has determined that prices under GSA Schedule contracts are fair and reasonable. With regard to Schedule contracts for services, while GSA has determined that the labor hour (hourly rate) for a labor [or] skill category is fair and reasonable, GSA has not determined that the level of effort or mix of labor [or] skill categories proposed in response to a specific requirement represents the best value. Therefore, when buying services that require a statement of work, the ordering activity must consider the level of effort and mix of labor [or] skill categories proposed for a particular requirement[] and make a determination that the total price is reasonable and represents the best value.

It is a proven best practice that ordering activities should seek additional price reductions [or] increased discounts and concessions when placing an order under a GSA Schedule contract. Contractors will often "sharpen their pencils" to obtain a large Schedule contract order. GSA Schedule contractors are not required to pass on to all Schedule users a price reduction extended only to an individual customer for a specific order.

General Services Administration Schedules, at

http://www.gsa.gov/Portal/gsa/ep/contentView.do?programId=10016&channelId=13463&oid=8126&contentId=10779&pageTypeId=8199&contentType=GSA_BASIC&programPage=%2Fep%2Fprogram%2FgsaBasic.jsp&P=FCOC (emphasis in original)(last visited Apr. 5, 2006).

The agency operates the "Service Acquisition Center" to provide professional services from contractors on the GSA Schedules. These services are provided through the Financial and Business Solutions Center (Schedule 520), which offers accounting, budgeting, and financial management services provided by commercial firms; the Advertising and Integrated Marketing Solutions Center (Schedule 541), which provides public relations, marketing, and media services to federal agencies; and the Professional Engineering Services Center (Schedule 871), which offers, among other things, civil and design engineering services from a number of large engineering corporations. In addition, the GSA also offers engineering services through the Environmental Services (Schedule 899) under its Management Services Center program.²

Schedule 871, Professional Engineering Services, provides system design and engineering, including computer-aided designs and design studies. The schedule contains six subschedules, called "Special Item Numbers (SINs)," which break down the engineering schedule into specialty areas. Several commercial firms on this schedule provide engineering services that traditionally have been awarded under the Brooks Architect-Engineers Act.

Although the GSA Web site states that architectural, engineering, and design services are to be obtained under the Brooks Architect-Engineers Act, the agency retains a number of engineering firms on Schedule 871 that effectively offer civil engineering services governed under the Brooks A/E Act in contravention of the Act. A few examples of commercial engineering firms offering Brooks A/E Act-covered services under the Federal Supply Schedules will suffice:

² Other services on various GSA Schedules consist of language translations, energy analyses, printing and telephone assistance, computer support and maintenance, the leasing and purchasing of office equipment, and the like.

GSA Contract No. GS-23F-0025K. “[The firm] will translate product concepts into preliminary and detailed engineering design plans and specifications.”

GSA PES Contract No. GS-23F-0128N. System design, engineering, and integration services, including “a preliminary and detailed design ... [and] engineering plans and specifications ...”).

GSA PES Contract No. GS-23F-0114L. Geotechnical engineering services, including “site selection, foundations, ground stabilization, erosion control, geophysical investigation, seismic analyses, special inspection and testing, and construction monitoring.”

GSA PES Contract No. GS-23F-0161M. “Civil Engineering. Provides professional civil engineering design services for site improvements, roads and streets maintenance and construction, sanitary and stormwater collection and conveyance systems, drainage and stormwater management facilities and wastewater treatment plant operations and maintenance.”

GSA PES Contract No. GS-00F-0005R. System, design, and integration services, including “a preliminary and detailed design [and] engineering plans and specifications ...”

Schedule 899, Environmental Services, also provides engineering-related services. Among the types of engineering services obtainable from the this Schedule are hazardous-waste-site investigations, environmental assessments and the preparation of Environmental Impact Statements under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA); mapping and cartography; the drafting of endangered species, wetlands, watersheds, and other natural resource management plans; the preparation of waste-management plans; environmental program management and environmental regulation development; “and other environmentally related studies ... or consultations.”

See General Services Administration, Federal Supply Schedule Listing, Schedule Summary, at <http://www.gsaelibrary.gsa.gov/ElibMain/ScheduleSummary?scheduleNumber=899&x=18&y=12> (last visited Apr. 5, 2006).

B. Qualifications-Based Selection for A/E Design Services

The Brooks Architect-Engineers Act established a governmentwide policy “to publicly announce all requirements for architectural and engineering services and to negotiate contracts for architectural and engineering services on the basis of demonstrated competence and qualification for the type of professional services required and at fair and reasonable prices.” 40 U.S.C. § 1101(emphasis added).

GSAL APR 2006-101-16

Congress clearly intended to protect the ability of the government to obtain on a competitive basis the services of the most qualified architects and engineers at the fairest price. “[T]he committee feels that the Government's interest, which is the public interest, is best served by placing the emphasis on obtaining the highest qualified architectural and engineering services available.” S.Rep. No. 92-1219 (1972), reprinted in 1972 U.S.C.C.A.N. 4767, 4772.

The Comptroller General has stated repeatedly that the contracting agency retains wide discretion in the use of the Act in order to safeguard the government's best interests.

[T]he determination concerning the applicability of the Act to a particular procurement is the responsibility of the contracting agency ... because it concerns the nature and the scope of the work to be done and the needs of the contracting agency. We have, therefore, recognized the broad discretion on the part of the agency to make these determinations and we will not disturb them unless the agency's conclusions are shown to be so unreasonable as to demonstrate an intent either to circumvent the Act or to employ the noncompetitive procedures enunciated by the Act to secure services that should properly be solicited by competitive means.

In Re Consulting Engineers Council of Metropolitan Washington 1983 WL 27932, *2 (quoting Association of Soil and Foundation Engineers, 62 Comp. Gen. 297 (1983), 83-1 CPD 362).

C. The Engineering Industry

In 2002, the last year for which complete data are available, there were 55,229 establishments providing engineering services in NAICS sector 541330. U.S. CENSUS BUREAU, ARCHITECTURAL, ENGINEERING, AND RELATED SERVICES: 2002, 19 (2004).³ These establishments generated $116.5 billion in revenues. The 50 largest engineering firms operated 2,433 establishments—just four percent of the total. But these 50 firms had total revenues of $40.2 billion—nearly 35 percent of all industry revenues for 2002. Thus the bulk of the engineering industry's income in 2002 was generated by small (or smaller) businesses.⁴

COMMENTS

The selection of professional engineers as prime consultants and subconsultants should always result from competition based on the qualifications best suited to complete the work successfully. Qualifications, including the training, registration, experience, skills and availability of the proposed project personnel, must be the dominant factor in the selection of engineering services.

³ An “establishment” is one office. A firm may have more than one office location in the United States.

⁴ The Small Business Administration does not keep statistics on the actual number of small businesses in any one NAICS code. Email from Jon Haisuka, Office of Size Standards, Small Business Administration, to ASCE, Apr. 17, 2006 (on file with ASCE).

The cost of engineering services, while important and meriting careful negotiations and performance accountability, is related to work to be performed which often is not clearly defined at the time the engineer is selected. Therefore, cost should be secondary to professional qualifications.

The qualifications-based selection (QBS) procedure assures the selection of the best qualified firm. Under QBS, A/E firms compete based on their professional qualifications and quality of services, which allows large and small firms alike to compete on an equal footing. Thus, the process allows small firms to try to win contracts based exclusively on the quality of their services. Larger firms would have a distinct advantage if competitive bidding were based solely on price. Indeed, we have been told by more than one executive of major engineering firms that the larger firms would be able to win many more federal contracts without the Brooks Architect-Engineers Act simply by underbidding their smaller competitors and making up the loss elsewhere on the contract.

QBS is the preferred system for selecting A/E services because the precise scope and range of the design services which are the basis for any contract price cannot be accurately determined until specific negotiations begin. Innovative approaches and alternative designs or methods arise when a client and a design professional develop the precise scope of a project together.

Too often when a scope of work is developed as part of a price bidding system prior to the selection of an A/E firm, it is so vague that inaccurate assumptions are made by the A/E firm responding to the solicitation. Even when a government agency or grantee has in-house professional design staff sufficiently skilled to develop a detailed scope of work upon which an A/E's price bid can be based, the complexity of the contract cannot be anticipated and the bids often do not accurately reflect the cost.

QBS requires A/E firms to compete based on skills, experience and ability to perform the required services-not on the illusory economy that a low bid may seem to provide. Low bids requiring substantial change orders or resulting in high construction or high life-cycle operating or maintenance costs are not cost effective.

QBS is the preferred procurement process for the selection of A/E services; a simplified QBS should be used in small purchase procedures; and whenever state or local law requires the use of QBS for government-funded A/E services, QBS should be used for contracts for federally funded projects that solicit such services.

This process has been so successful at the federal level that it is recommended by the American Bar Association in its model procurement code for state and local government. Forty-five states have enacted their own qualifications-based selection laws for architecture, engineering, surveying and mapping services. Others use it as a standard procedure. Today, no state has a specific law requiring bidding of architectural or engineering design services.

GSAK APR 2006-101-16

- 7 -

ASCE urges GSA to remove the ability for agencies to purchase A/E services from the Federal Supply Schedule, which is a direct infringement on the explicit requirements of the Brooks Architect-Engineers Act.

#

ACEC

AMERICAN COUNCIL OF ENGINEERING COMPANIES

April 17, 2006

Ms. Laurieann Duarte
General Services Administration
FAR Secretariat (MVA)
1800 F Street, NW
Room 4035
Washington, DC 20405

Re: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01: General Services Administration Acquisition Regulation ; GSAR Revision Initiative.

Dear Ms. Duarte:

The American Council of Engineering Companies (ACEC) appreciates the opportunity to comment on General Services Administration Acquisition Regulation; GSAR Revision Initiative as published in the Federal Register, on February 15, 2006 (Fed. Reg. Vol. 71 7910.)

The American Council of Engineering Companies (ACEC) is the voice of America's engineering industry. Council members – numbering more than 5,500 firms throughout the country – are engaged in a wide range of engineering works that propel the nation's economy, and enhance and safeguard America's quality of life.

Today ACEC is a large federation of 51 state and regional councils representing the great breadth of America's engineering industry. ACEC member firms employ more than 300,000 engineers, architects, land surveyors, scientists, and other specialists, responsible for more than $100 billion of private and public works annually. Member firms range in size from a single registered professional engineer to corporations employing thousands of professionals. The Council's mission is to contribute to America's prosperity and welfare by advancing the business interests of member firms.

ACEC has concerns and questions regarding section 536.602-1(a)(2) which states:

“This factor must not exceed 5 percent of the total weight of all evaluation criteria. In order to receive the maximum score for this factor, the architect-engineer firm(s) must demonstrate that at least 35 percent of the architect-engineer contract services (based on the total contract price) will be accomplished within the geographical boundaries established for the project.”

ACEC members are concerned that tracking the 35 percent would result in a new reporting requirement will cause undue financial burden on firms. The firms could be required to create a separate tracking mechanism that would to ensure a firm is in compliance with the 35 percent locality requirement.

GSAR ANPR 2006-1101-17

Another area of concern is the disconnect between the 5 percent weighted selection and the 35 percent of the work to be performed in the locale. The proposed change suggests that the government will attribute 5 percent of the locality in the selection, versus requiring that 35 percent of the work be performed in the locality. It would appear that these two percentages need to be more in line if the government is requiring such a significant amount of the work to be performed in a particular region. ACEC members would prefer an equal no more that a 10% allocation for local work to meet the full selection score. A 10% allocation of contract value would be reasonable for our small and large businesses while meeting the intent of local participation. (ON WHAT? PLEASE CLARIFY)

Finally ACEC would like to comment on section 536.602-1(3)(d) which requires:

"The public announcement (Commerce Business Daily notice) must provide the number of calendar days the architect-engineer of record has to establish a production capability within the general geographical area of the project. You may allow the architect-engineer of record up to 45 calendar days after contract award to establish this production capability."

If the 35 % requirement is changed to 10%, our concerns with this stipulation would be minimized.

ACEC appreciates the opportunity to comment on these proposed changes to the GSAR.

Sincerely,

Cindy Hsu
Director of Federal Procurement Policy

GSAR ANPR
2006-N01-18

Sharon Cordesse

From: Matt Johnson
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 1:59 PM
To: Sharon Cordesse
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Lloyd Chapman
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:50 AM
To: 'gsaranpr.2006-N01@gsa.gov'
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

As President of the American Small Business League, I am very concerned about changes GSA is considering to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that will affect small businesses.

There are over 23 million firms in the United States that have less than 100 employees. These companies have clearly suffered an adverse significant economic impact when funds that were "set-aside" for them have actually gone to Fortune 1000 firms.

There have been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting. This has allowed billions of dollars reported as going to small businesses to be diverted to some of the largest companies in the world. SBA Office of the Inspector General Report 5-15 states:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."

GSA procurement practices are a major contributor to this ongoing problem. Any policies adopted by GSA must be responsive to the recommendations made in the eleven investigations to stem the tide of fraud and abuse. A good start would be to require annual re-certification of contractor small business status.

Changes made to GSA policies and procedures that affect small business should be consistent with Congressional intent in passing the Small Business Act, which is to ensure that 23% of the total value of prime and subcontracts are awarded to legitimate small businesses and NOT to subsidiaries or divisions of Fortune 1000 firms or other large companies.

Establishing policies that make procurement easier and efficient are great, but not to the extent that it is inconsistent with the law and doesn't serve the best interest of the American people.

The American Small Business League is dedicated to ensuring that there is no further degeneration of policies designed to protect the interests of small business. If the GSA tries to adopt even a single policy that we believe to be anti-small business, we will take appropriate legal action to stop its implementation. Accordingly, potential policy changes should be made with the view of being able to stand up in court. We will not tolerate procurement policies of any kind that allow government agencies to circumvent the Small Business Act and divert small business contracts to large firms.

Sincerely,

Lloyd Chapman
President and Founder
American Small Business League
3910 Cypress Dr., Suite B
Petaluma, CA 94954
(707) 789-9575

4/18/2006

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 10:47 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jrbooth@cpgp.com[SMTP:JRBOOTH@CPGP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 10:46:51 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Andrew Wallace
Communications Professionals, Inc.
15565 Northland Drive, Ste. 304W
Southfield, MI 48075

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 10:47 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jrbooth@cpgp.com [SMTP:JRBOOTH@CPGP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 10:46:51 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Andrew Wallace
Communications Professionals, Inc.
15565 Northland Drive, Ste. 304W
Southfield, MI 48075

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 8:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: shahsam1@chartertn.net [SMTP:SHAHSAM1@CHARTERTN.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 8:38:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sam Shah
Dayenesi LLC
1234 EAGLE NEST LANE
KNOXVILLE, TN 37922

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 6:52 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jeanienolle@yahoo.com[SMTP:JEANIENOLLE@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 6:51:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

jeanie nolle
19215 clear sky drive
kingwood, TX 77346

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 5:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kcyros@ofms.org [SMTP:KCYROS@OFMS.ORG]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 5:58:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Kreon Cyros
OFMS, Inc.
200 Corporate Place
Suite 6B
Peabody, MA 01960

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 5:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kcyros@ofms.org [SMTP:KCYROS@OFMS.ORG]
Sent: Tuesday, April 18, 2006 5:58:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Kreon Cyros
OFMS, Inc.
200 Corporate Place
Suite 6B
Peabody, MA 01960

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:35 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: LUPE@MASMOVING.COM [SMTP:LUPE@MASMOVING.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:34:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Lupe Ortiz
M.A.S Moving And associated Services Inc.
18450 E. Gale Ave
City Of Industry, CA 91748

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: willbuild@sti.net [SMTP:WILLBUILD@STI.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:24:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jenene Jones
Sierrea Electronic Assembly
P. O. Box 235
Ahwahnee, CA 93601

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: willbuild@sti.net [SMTP:WILLBUILD@STI.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:24:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jenene Jones
Sierra Electronic Assembly
P. O. Box 235
Ahwahnee, CA 93601

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 3:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vsykes@sacblackchamber.org [SMTP:VSYKES@SACBLACKCHAMBER.ORG]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 3:20:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Velma Sykes
Sacramento Black Chamber of Commerce
2655 Del Monte Street
West Sacramento, CA 95691

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mitchellsalazar@hotmail.com [SMTP:MITCHELLSALAZAR@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:57:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

mitchell salazar
M.N.C.
362 Capp street
San Francisco, CA 94110

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bookkeeper@rubecon.com [SMTP:BOOKKEEPER@RUBECON.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:52:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sharon Santana
Rubecon General Contracting
3450 3rd Street, 1B
San Francisco, CA 94124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Sistasolar@yahoo.com [SMTP:SISTASOLAR@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:28:22 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Gloria Wroten
The Wroten Technology
1533 Minturn St. Ste. 2
Alameda, CA 94501-2510

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: appraisals@treffergroup.com [SMTP:APPRAISALS@TREFFERGROUP.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:22:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mary Mitchell
Treffer Appraisal Group
1244 Ritchie Highway
Suite 19
Arnold, MD 21012

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mreitzig@treffergroup.com [SMTP:MREITZIG@TREFFERGROUP.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:20:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Melody Reitzig
Treffer Appraisal Group
1244 Ritchie Highway
Suite 19
Arnold, MD 21012

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: appraisals@treffergroup.com [SMTP:APPRAISALS@TREFFERGROUP.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 1:20:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Emerson Treffer
Treffer Appraisal Group
1244 Ritchie Highway
Suite 19
Arnold, MD 21012

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 12:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mr.carpet@coastalnet.com [SMTP:MR.CARPET@COASTALNET.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 12:06:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Lee Anne Flanagan
Mr. Carpet, Inc.
801 East Main Street
Havelock, NC 28532

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 12:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: doug@gaschprinting.com [SMTP:DOUG@GASCHPRINTING.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:59:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Doug Gasch
Gasch Printing
9090 Junction Drive
Annapolis Junction, MD 20701

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: monica@gaschprinting.com[SMTP:MONICA@GASCHPRINTING.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:58:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Monica Rosen
Gasch Printing
9090 Junciton Drive
Annapolis Junction, MD 20701

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: monica@gaschprinting.com[SMTP:MONICA@GASCHPRINTING.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:58:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Monica Rosen
Gasch Printing
9090 Junciton Drive
Annapolis Junction, MD 20701

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:51 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Bailey@fiberplex.com [SMTP:BAILEY@FIBERPLEX.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:50:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Harold Bailey

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vadmachine@centurytel.net [SMTP:VADMACHINE@CENTURYTEL.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:39:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Virginia Horton

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:35 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admachine@centurytel.net [SMTP:ADMACHINE@CENTURYTEL.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:35:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Donald Metzger
A&D Machine, Inc.
N1335 County Rd. EE
Redgranite, WI 54970

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:29 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: angieadmachine@centurytel.net [SMTP:ANGIEADMACHINE@CENTURYTEL.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:29:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Angela Metzger
A&D Machine, Inc.
N1335 County Rd. EE
Redgranite, WI 54970

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: macbogert@aol.com [SMTP:MACBOGERT@AOL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:48:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mac Bogert
Allen Zabriskie and Associates
120 Gemini Drive
Unit S
Annapolis, MD 21403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:52 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sue@horanconstruction.com [SMTP:SUE@HORANCONSTRUCTION.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 11:51:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Susan Arnholt
Horan Construction
1720 W. Chanute Road
Peoria, IL 61615

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cwprather@aol.com [SMTP:CWPRATHER@AOL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:16:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Charles Prather
Bottom Line Innovation Associates, Inc.
619 Kensington Place
Ft. Lauderdale, FL 33305

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: greg@dial411.net [SMTP:GREG@DIAL411.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:25:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Gregory Gasson
Dial411
23939 Ventura Blvd
Calabasas, CA 91302

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rljohnson9305@comcast.net [SMTP:RLJOHNSON9305@COMCAST.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:19:39 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Robert Johnson

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:35 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: woogie815@hotmail.com [SMTP:WOOGIE815@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 10:34:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Thomas Wohlgemuth
Chesapeake Rigging Ltd.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: skomatz@decisiondisplay.com [SMTP:SKOMATZ@DECISIONDISPLAY.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:58:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Steve Komatz

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: seaborn@hc.com [SMTP:SEABORN@HC.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:47:34 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jackie Amadio
Seaborn Health Care Inc.
PO Box 41158
St. Petersburg, FL 33743

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:47 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wberry@envirosystems.com [SMTP:WBERRY@ENVIROSYSTEMS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 6:47:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Wendell Berry
EnviroSystems, Inc.
PO Box 778
Hampton, NH 03843

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 12:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rlgc@earthlink.net [SMTP:RLGC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 12:07:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

R. Leontia Gormley
CG2

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ltclean@starpower.net [SMTP:LTCLEAN@STARPOWER.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:37:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tawanna Key

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:12 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rdavis@quantum3d.com [SMTP:RDAVIS@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:12:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Rick Davis
Quantum3D Inc
1525 Perimeter Parkway
Suite 405
Huntsville , AL 35806

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: alexis@paulandpartners.net [SMTP:ALEXIS@PAULANDPARTNERS.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 5:18:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Alexis Heins
Paul&Partners Inc.
43670 Trade Center Place
Suite 150
Dulles, VA 20166

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 9:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wkatz@mak.com [SMTP:WKATZ@MAK.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 9:25:48 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Warren Katz

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:58 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pwestgate@environmentaloptions.com [SMTP:PWESTGATE@ENVIRONMENTALOPTIONS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:57:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Pamela Westgate
Environmental Options, Inc.
PO Box 879
Rocky Mount, VA 24151

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: greg@dial411.net [SMTP:GREG@DIAL411.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 17, 2006 7:25:39 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Gregory Gasson
Dial411
23939 Ventura Blvd
Calabasas, CA 91302

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 7:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: burkheimer@hotmail.com [SMTP: BURKHEIMER@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 7:44:04 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Paul Burkheimer
Burkheimer Equipment
651 Gilbert Rd.
Aberdeen, MD 21001-1104

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 12:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: speech.solutions@verizon.net [SMTP:SPEECH.SOLUTIONS@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 12:19:42 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Barbara Mann

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 3:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: anooco@aol.com [SMTP:ANOOCO@AOL.COM]
Sent: Sunday, April 16, 2006 3:29:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Dr. Alex Okereke Okereke
Anooco Inc
67 Highland Avenue
Randolph, MA 02368

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 8:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: fedhawaii@hawaii.rr.com [SMTP:FEDHAWAII@HAWAII.RR.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 8:47:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Myers
Federal Business Solutions Group, LLC
2121 Ala Wai Blvd., #4005
Honolulu, HI 96815

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lawcrespo@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:LAWCRESPO@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:22:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Crespo Rafael
Law Offices of Rafael Crespo
2785 Mission Street Suite 204
San Francisco, CA 94110

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 10:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lynell@whatifllc.com [SMTP:LYNELL@WHATIFLLC.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 10:25:26 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Lynell Otto

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 10:11 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wdheird@yahoo.com[SMTP:WDHEIRD@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 10:11:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William Heird

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 9:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lawrence@jfaucett.com[SMTP:LAWRENCE@JFAUCETT.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 9:15:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Michael Lawrence
Jack Faucett Associates
4550 Montgomery Ave
Bethesda, MD 20814

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 8:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rsams@quantum3d.com [SMTP:RSAMS@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 8:14:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Harry Sams

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: global.ent@verizon.net [SMTP:GLOBAL.ENT@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:53:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

cesar ortiz
global entertainment inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:02 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: abjsinc@earthlink.net [SMTP:ABJSINC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Saturday, April 15, 2006 7:02:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Bobby Tate
Andre\'s & Bobby\'s Janitorial Service Inc.
2666 Numilla Dr.
Orlando, FL 32839

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:18 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: harveycoleconst@yahoo.com[SMTP:HARVEYCOLECONST@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:18:06 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

harvey cole
harveycoleconstllc
418 first st e,#9
polson, MT 59860

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jmyers8@comcast.net [SMTP:JMYERS8@COMCAST.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:50:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jon Myers
SGT Technologies
PO 277
Kentfield, CA 94914

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:25 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ormiston@wavecable.com [SMTP:ORMISTON@WAVECABLE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:24:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jim Ormiston

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: james@jebcomputerservices.com [SMTP:JAMES@JEBCOMPUTERSERVICES.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:53:52 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

James Busch
J.E.B. Computer Services
400 W. Grand River #125
P.O. Box 199
Webberville, MI 48892

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rsmith@quantum3d.com[SMTP:RSMITH@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:43:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Ross Smith
Quantum3D, Inc.
6330 San Ignacio Ave.
San Jose, CA 95119

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: 98406ABryant555@hotmail.com[SMTP:98406ABRYANT555@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:20:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Arthur Bryant
Arthur Bryant Real Estate Appraisals
714 N Mt. View Ave
Tacoma, WA 98406

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rtsubota@yahoo.com [SMTP:RTSUBOTA@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:56:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Russell Tsubota
ABC Music, Inc.
732A Pumehana Street
Honolulu, HI 96826

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bigjim9rs@cox.net [SMTP:BIGJIM9RS@COX.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:53:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

James Gibson
11424 N 37th Place
Phoenix, AZ 85028

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tdowgiallo@quantum3d.com [SMTP:TDOWGIALLO@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:35:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tom Dowgiallo
Quantum3D, Inc
6330 San Ignacio Avenue
San Jose, CA 95119

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: r.russell.ct@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:R.RUSSELL.CT@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:22:14 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Robbye Russell
93 Highland Ave
Branford, CT 06405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: operations@seasubsystems.com[SMTP:OPERATIONS@SEASUBSYSTEMS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 3:12:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Anne LaMaire
Sea Sub Systems, Inc.
P.O.Box 1204
Indian Rocks Beach, FL 33785

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:14 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: manders@quantum3d.com [SMTP:MANDERS@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:13:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mark Anderson
quantum3d
1500 perimeter pkwy
huntsville, AL 35804

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:11 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: support@nylan.com [SMTP:SUPPORT@NYLAN.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:11:22 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Amjad Naeem
New York Lan Communications, Inc.
224 West 30th Street
Suite 805
New York, NY 10001

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vieiraj@jdosinternational.com[SMTP:VIEIRAJ@JDOSINTERNATIONAL.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 2:04:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Janice Vieira
J-Dos Internationale, Inc.
7826 Eastern Ave, NW
Suite 400
Washington, DC 20012

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: joliver@quantum3D.com [SMTP:JOLIVER@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:43:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Oliver

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lisacarey@coachlisacarey.com[SMTP:LISACAREY@COACHLISACAREY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:39:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Elizabeth Carey
Carey Coaching
7612 Cervantes Ct
Springfield, VA 22153

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bdickens@quantum3d.com [SMTP:BDICKENS@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:37:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Brian Dickens
Quantum3D, Inc.
6330 San Ignacio Ave
San Jose , CA 95119

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rwendlandt@quantum3d.com [SMTP:RWENDLANDT@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:36:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Richard Wendlandt
Quantum3D
7055 W. Bell Road
Suite 6
Glendale, AZ 85308

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:26 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: alans@quantum3d.com [SMTP:ALANS@QUANTUM3D.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:25:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Alan Simmonds
Quantum3D, Inc.
6330 San Ignacio Ave.
San Jose, CA 95119

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mrgraphics@yahoo.com [SMTP:MRGRAPHICS@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:23:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Cary Coulson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:14 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sydney@seepoint.com [SMTP:SYDNEY@SEEPOINT.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:13:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sydney Arfin
SeePoint
2619 Manhattan Beach Blvd.
Redondo Beach, CA 90278

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: zjk@giottoinc.com[SMTP:ZJK@GIOTTOINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 1:02:48 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Zbigniew Karaszewski
PO Box 570065
Houston, TX 77257-0065

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:56 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kosteleckyj@auble.com [SMTP:KOSTELECKYJ@AUBLE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:56:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jason Kostecky
Auble, Jolicoeur, and Gentry
107 S. Howard
Suite 300
Spokane, WA 99205

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: whause@maine.rr.com [SMTP:WHAUSE@MAINE.RR.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:52:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William Hause
Hause Enterprises & Consulting
26 Clover Street
Caribou, ME 04736-2477

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Barbara@LeadingAttitudes.com [SMTP:BARBARA@LEADINGATTITUDES.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:41:38 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Barbara Boden

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rodney@e-ccsinc.com [SMTP:RODNEY@E-CCSINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 12:30:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Rodney Meeks

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:57 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: msmussel@oceanequities.org [SMTP:MSMUSSEL@OCEANEQUITIES.ORG]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:57:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Leonard Dorothy
Ocean Equities LLC
776 Rolling View Drive
Annapolis, MD 21409

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:47 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: thom@tmscontracting.com [SMTP:THOM@TMSCONTRACTING.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:46:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Thom M. Spigner
TMS Contracting, LLC
635 Frosty Morn Dr.
Clarksville, TN 37040

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:22 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: scott@ridgelinetechology.net [SMTP:SCOTT@RIDGELINETECHNOLOGY.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 11:21:41 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Scott Nettleton
Ridgeline Technology
303 Potrero
Suite 58
Santa Cruz, CA 95060

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jbeasley@ssiworld.com [SMTP:JBEASLEY@SSIWORLD.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:54:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Joyce Beasley
SSI Shredding Systems

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ghughes@windwardcs.com [SMTP:GHUGHES@WINDWARDCS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:52:30 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

George Hughes
Windward reative Services
534 Epping Forest rd
Annapolis, MD 21401

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:43 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jodi.rossi@cox.net [SMTP:JODI.ROSSI@COX.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:42:54 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jodi Rossi

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:36 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ben.jones@netcm.net [SMTP:BEN.JONES@NETCM.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:36:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William Jones
The Jones Group International
13171 Morning Spring Lane
Fairfax, VA 22033-3709

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:31 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tuftrks@ndak.net [SMTP:TUFTRKS@NDAK.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:31:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Annette Kniffen
Tuff Trucks inc
1625 27 ST SE
Minot, ND 58701

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:29 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: virginia@williamslifeskills.com [SMTP:VIRGINIA@WILLIAMSLIFESKILLS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:28:39 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Virginia Williams

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vainer@polymeright.com [SMTP:VAINER@POLYMERIGHT.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:22:54 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Alex Vainer
POLYMERright, Inc.
4404-C Enterprise Place
Fremont, CA 94538

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:04 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ncanu@futuretechllc.com[SMTP:NCANU@FUTURETECHLLC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 10:03:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Nino Canu
Future Technologies
300 Petty Road
Lawrenceville, GA 30043

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:58 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: naresh@net-compliance.com [SMTP:NARESH@NET-COMPLIANCE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:58:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Naresh Singh
NetCompliance Environmental Services, LLC
2112 East 26th Street
Vancouver, WA 98661

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sdoherty@efoundry.com [SMTP:SDOHERTY@EFOUNDRY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:56:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Steven Doherty
eFoundry Corporation
5 Clock Tower Place
Suite 470
Maynard, MA 01754

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jeffbaker@mti-inc.us [SMTP:JEFFBAKER@MTI-INC.US]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:55:22 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jeff Baker
MTI
3655 West Ninigret Dr.
SLC, UT 84104

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tomeglock@earthlink.net [SMTP:TOMEGLOCK@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:44:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

TOM CARBONE
CARBONE\ 'S CUSTOM FIREARMS
6810 front st
KEY WEST, FL 33040

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pordist@netdoor.com[SMTP:PODIST@NETDOOR.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:44:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

jeff cleere
Perma Coatings
170 Myers Rd.
Petal, MS 39465

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:36 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hlytle@nrcinc.com [SMTP:HLITTLE@NRCINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:35:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Howard Lytle
National Repair Center Inc.
3808 n sullivan road
Bldg #5
SPOKANE, WA 99216-1608

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:31 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gentrym@auble.com [SMTP:GENTRYM@AUBLE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:30:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mike Gentry

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: darryl@ridgelinetechology.net [SMTP:DARRYL@RIDGELINETECHNOLOGY.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:24:40 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Darryl Fair
Ridgeline Technology
303 Potrero
Santa Cruz, CA 95060

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: darryl@ridgelinetechology.net [SMTP:DARRYL@RIDGELINETECHNOLOGY.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:24:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Darryl Fair
Ridgeline Technology
303 Potrero
Santa Cruz, CA 95060

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tere@cablemoore.com [SMTP:TERE@CABLEMOORE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:19:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tere O'Connor
CABLE MOORE INC
1425 5th Street
Oakland, CA 94607

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: duane@suntvl.com [SMTP:DUANE@SUNTVL.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:18:50 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Duane Coleman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: t_hurl@comcast.net [SMTP:T_HURL@COMCAST.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:15:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tom Hurley
IPIntegration, Inc
PO Box 28617
Santa Ana, CA 92799

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:12 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: thsobota@apri.com [SMTP:THSOBOTA@APRI.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:11:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Thom Sobota
APRI
2141 East Aladena Drive
Altadena, CA 91001

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:10 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: LH.DA@verizon.net [SMTP:LH.DA@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 9:09:39 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Lonnie Daniels
L.H. Daniels Associates
144 Jerome Street
Medford, MA 02155

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bobfair15@aol.com[SMTP:BOBFAIR15@AOL.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:53:26 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Bob Fairweather

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sharonhughart@landing.hitfarm.com [SMTP: SHARONHUGHART@LANDING.HITFARM.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:53:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sharon Hughart

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:51 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dwells@sterlinginnovations.com [SMTP:DWELLS@STERLINGINNOVATIONS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:51:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Dale Wells
Sterling Innovations, Inc.
6824 S Lee Way
Littleton, CO 80127

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:35 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul.olson@snei.net [SMTP:PAUL.OLSON@SNEI.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 8:35:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Paul Olson
SNEI
420 Bedford Street
Lexington, MA 02420

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wesken@sashcoinc.com [SMTP:WESKEN@SASHCOINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:44:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William esken
SASHCO, Inc.
720 S. Rochester Avenue
Ontario, CA 91761

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: joe@rubecon.com [SMTP:JOE@RUBECON.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:40:35 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph Barton
Rubecon General Contracting, Inc.
3450 Third St., Bldg 1B
San Francisco, CA 94124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:37 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lou@quantumlogicdevices.com [SMTP:LOU@QUANTUMLOGICDEVICES.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:36:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Louis Brousseau
Quantum Logic Devices

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:34 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cathy@rubecon.com [SMTP: CATHY@RUBECON.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:34:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Cathy Davis
Rubecon General Contracting Inc.
3450 Third Street, Bldg. 1B
San Francisco, CA 94124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cmc@jcomail.com[SMTP:CMC@JCOMAIL.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:22:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Christopher Crandell
The Johnson Company
100 State St.
Suite 600
Montpelier, VT 05602

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:11 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: RegisC@GeneralOceanics.com [SMTP:REGISC@GENERALOCEANICS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:10:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Regis Cook
General Oceanics, Inc.
1295 NW 163rd Street
Miami, FL 33169

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jairo@diecuttech.com [SMTP:JAIRO@DIECUTTECH.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:08:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jairo Barsallo
Die Cut Technologies
10943 Leroy Dr
Northglenn, CO 80233

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:05 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: theoxfordcompany@usa.com [SMTP:THEOXFORDCOMPANY@USA.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:05:25 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Jorden
The Oxford Company
18565 Soledad Canyon Road #143
Santa Clarita, CA 91351

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:03 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lsedhom@aseccorp.com [SMTP:LSEDHOM@ASECCORP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:03:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Lirba Sedhom
ASEC Corporation
100 Hallet Street
Boston, MA 02124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:02 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wjm@aseccorp.com [SMTP:WJM@ASECCORP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:01:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William Montuori
ASEC Corporation
100 Hallet Street
Boston, MA 02124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:01 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Jrmonteiro@aseccorp.com[SMTP:JRMONTEIRO@ASECCORP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:01:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Willa Monteiro
ASEC Corporation
100 Hallet Street
Boston, MA 02124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:01 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Jrmonteiro@aseccorp.com [SMTP:JRMONTEIRO@ASECCORP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 7:00:31 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Monteiro
ASEC Corporation
100 Hallet Street
Boston, MA 02124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:50 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: keithburgess@corporatestudio.com [SMTP:KEITHBURGESS@CORPORATESTUDIO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:50:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Keith Burgess

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:33 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@opendoors.com [SMTP:ADMIN@OPENDOORS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:32:25 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

myles spicer

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: brunob@junct.com[SMTP:BRUNOB@JUNCT.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:30:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Robert Bruno
American Indian Distributing, LLC
32534 Pebble Beach
Bird Island, OK 74331

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Brianw@4allmemory.com [SMTP:BRIANW@4ALLMEMORY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:18:52 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Brian Way
4 All Memory
655 Leffingwell Ave
Kirkwood, MO 63122

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:03 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dpujals@t3corp.com [SMTP:DPUJALS@T3CORP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 6:02:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

David M. Pujals
T3 Corporation
309 Cleveland Avenue
Suite 501
Fairmont, WV 26554

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ekroman3d@yahoo.com [SMTP:EKROMAN3D@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:54:33 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Edward Kroman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:45 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bruce@brucesprecision.com[SMTP:BRUCE@BRUCESPRECISION.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:44:29 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Bruce Kunze
Bruce\'s Precision Welding & Machine
6503 Fordice Dr.
MUONT AIRY, MD 21771

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:45 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bruce@brucesprecision.com [SMTP:BRUCE@BRUCESPRECISION.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:44:29 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Bruce Kunze
Bruce\'s Precision Welding & Machine
6503 Fordice Dr.
MUONT AIRY, MD 21771

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Daniel.Gilliam@AbleBT.com [SMTP:DANIEL.GILLIAM@ABLEBT.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:43:35 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Daniel Gilliam
Able Business Technologies, Inc.
200 S. Walworth Street
Darien, WI 53114-1506

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tim@talteceng.com [SMTP:TIM@TALTECENG.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:40:30 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tim Talmage
TALTEC Engineering
713 William Rd
Azle, TX 76020

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:36 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: billfranke@earthlink.net [SMTP:BILLFRANKE@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:35:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

William Franke
Bill\'s Cycles
1824-A
Hwy 79 south
Henderson, TX 75654

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: markesi@suscom.net [SMTP:MARKESI@SUSCOM.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:26:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mark Nardontonia
Electronic Systems Installers Inc.
56 N. Queen St.
York, PA 17403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: settco9855@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:SETTCO9855@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:24:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Shelley Campbell
SETCCO Group
PO Box 1093
Carmel, IN 46032

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:21 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mbrooke@hmconsult.com [SMTP:MBROOKE@HMCONSULT.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:21:12 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mildred Brooke
Health Management Consultants
5950 Symphony Woods Road
Suite 218
Columbia, MD 21044

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: terry.basford@4btechnology.com [SMTP:TERRY.BASFORD@4BTECHNOLOGY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 5:15:54 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Terryann Basford

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rogers@bedrockinc.net [SMTP:ROGERS@BEDROCKINC.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:42:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Roger Stradley
Bedrock Company Inc.
1309 N Wilson Road
Suite 1
Radcliff, KY 40175

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rogers@bedrockinc.net [SMTP:ROGERS@BEDROCKINC.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:42:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Roger Stradley
1309 N Wilson Road
Suite 1
Radcliff, KY 40175

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mail@jamesbrown.com [SMTP:MAIL@JAMESSBROWN.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:38:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

James Brown
TPG
11099 Saffold Way
Reston, VA 20190-3817

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: scott@properpitch.com[SMTP:SCOTT@PROPERPITCH.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 14, 2006 4:08:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

scott stewart

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: eaim@phonewave.net [SMTP:EAIM@PHONEWAVE.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:52:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Edith Isidoro-Mills
Garden of Edith Nursery
3900 Sheckler Rd.
Fallon, NV 89406

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ghudson2@satx.rr.com [SMTP:GHUDSON2@SATX.RR.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:44:22 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Gregory Hudson

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sharon@youngsplumbing.com[SMTP:SHARON@YOUNGSPLUMBING.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:30:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sharon Copeland
Young\'s Inc
3121 SE 6th
Topeka, Kansas 66607

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ssidner@ac-ssrc.com [SMTP:SSIDNER@AC-SSRC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:17:09 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Dr. Sanford Sidner
AC-Sidner, Stevens, Rhonda & Coco, LLC
2307 Woodridge Street NE
WASHINGTON, DC 20018

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:16 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: francis@mcis.com[SMTP:FRANCIS@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:16:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Francis Parks
Absolute MAC
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jlp58@charter.net [SMTP:JLP58@CHARTER.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:47:42 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Pallaoro

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: deniseg@3rivers.net [SMTP:DENISEG@3RIVERS.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:19:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Denise E Gemar
Backcountry Support Systems

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: curt@lyme.com [SMTP:CURT@LYME.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:07:33 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Curt Vinson
Lyme Computer Systems
One Lyme Common
Lyme, NH 03768

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: zman@bvti.com[SMTP:ZMAN@BVTI.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:57:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Dan Zimmerman
Best Value Technology, Inc.
15855 Parnell Court
Haymarket, VA 20169

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rfletcher@creativeventures.biz [SMTP:RFLETCHER@CREATIVEVENTURES.BIZ]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:48:03 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Randy Fletcher
Creative Ventures LLC
49 Werner Road
Picayune, MS 39466

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:33 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: george@dxresearch.net [SMTP:GEORGE@DXRESEARCH.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:32:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

George Chynoweth, PhD
dxResearch

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jsavage@usgcinc.com [SMTP:JSAVAGE@USGCINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:04:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Jack Savage
USGC, Inc.
2238B Bay Ridge Avenue
Annapolis, MD 21403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:55 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bhartley@ahtna-inc.com [SMTP: BHARTLEY@AHTNA-INC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:55:11 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Albert Hartley
Ahtna Construction
P.O Box 169
Glennallen, AK 99588

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:55 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chuck.kelly@microsearch.net [SMTP:CHUCK.KELLY@MICROSEARCH.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:54:51 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Chuck Kelly
Microsearch Corporation
999 Broadway
Suite 101
Saugus, MA 01906

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ptf@olympen.com [SMTP:PTF@OLYPEN.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:50:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

peter langley
251 otto st
Port townsend, WA 98368

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rtansy@ahtna.net [SMTP:RTANSY@AHTNA.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:47:43 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Roy Tansy
Ahtna Inc.
406 W. Fireweed Ln.
Anchorage, AK 99503

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: walker.fleming@axci.com [SMTP:WALKER.FLEMING@AXCI.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:45:12 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Walker Fleming
AxxessConnect, LLC
1400 16th Street, #400
Denver, CO 80202

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: d.graham@hptsinc.com [SMTP:D.GRAHAM@HPTSINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:44:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

David Graham
HPTS
Post Box 14346
Oklahoma, OK 73113

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: d.graham@hptsinc.com [SMTP:D.GRAHAM@HPTSINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:43:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

David Graham
HPTS
Post Box 14346
Oklahoma, OK 73113

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:41 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: linda@zenobiahelicopters.com [SMTP:LINDA@ZENOBIAHELICOPTERS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:40:59 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Linda Mosness
Zenobia Helicopters, LLC
16 Cheyenne Avenue
Eaton, CO 80615-3462

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tony@sygnetics.com[SMTP:TONY@SYGNETICS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:39:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tony Tarkowski
Sygnetics, Inc.
2514 S Rochester Rd
Rochester Hills, MI 48307

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: JKessler@JKATech.com [SMTP:JKESSLER@JKATECH.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:36:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

John Kessler
JKA Technologies, Inc
PO Box 5121
Annapolis, MD 21403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jgrubbs@expressop.com [SMTP:JGRUBBS@EXPRESSOP.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:35:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Julian Grubbs
Shelby Distributions Inc
1601 Magoffin Ave
El Paso, TX 79901

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tom_deb@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:TOM_DEB@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:29:57 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Tom McCollum

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:27 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chevy265@lomonicocontracting.com [SMTP:CHEVY265@LOMONICOCONTRACTING.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:27:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Anthony Lomonico
Lomonico contracting inc.
2301 us 27 south
sebring, FL 33870

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pam@1b2binc.com [SMTP:PAM@1B2BINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:23:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Pam Branner
HB Distributors
8741 Shirley
Northridge, CA 91324

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pdougherty@klinefelterelectric.com [SMTP:PDOUGHERTY@KLINEFELTERELECTRIC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:22:05 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Paul Dougherty
Klinefelter Electric
40 South Main
PO Box 552
Biglerille, PA 17307-0552

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: krishnan@aasc.net [SMTP:KRISHNAN@AASC.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:16:38 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mahadevan Krishnan

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: allaroundtree@ypc.net [SMTP:ALLAROUNDTREE@YPC.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:12:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sylvia Batie
All Around Tree Svc. Inc

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: allaroundtree@ypc.net [SMTP:ALLAROUNDTREE@YPC.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:12:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Sylvia Batie
All Around Tree Svc. Inc

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:11 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mattsantos@gmail.com [SMTP:MATTSANTOS@GMAIL.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:11:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Matthew Santos

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ssiegwald@6s.com [SMTP:SSIEGWALD@6S.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:02:58 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Scott Siegwald
The 6S Company
13410 N. 53rd Drive
Glendale, AZ 85304

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ssiegwald@6s.com [SMTP:SSIEGWALD@6S.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:02:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Scott Siegwald
The 6S Company
13410 N. 53rd Drive
Glendale, AZ 85304

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: slk3005@blackfoot.net [SMTP:SLK3005@BLACKFOOT.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:59:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Roger Hober
Dolly\'s Forest Service
P.O. Box 783
Seeley Lake, MT 59868

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: victor@portableone.com[SMTP:VICTOR@PORTABLEONE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:56:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

victor reyes
282 Digital Drive
Morgan Hill, CA 95037

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mvs.cemc@verizon.net [SMTP:MVS.CEMC@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:52:24 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Raymond Gould
marine Supply
15051 Leffingwell rd
Whittier, CA 90604

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: egoff@geomorphis.com [SMTP:EGOFF@GEOMORPHIS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:51:29 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Eileen Goff
1538 10th Avenue
San Diego, CA 92101

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: patrick@portableone.com [SMTP:PATRICK@PORTABLEONE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:45:06 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Patrick Reyes

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: randy@portableone.com [SMTP:RANDY@PORTABLEONE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:44:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Randolph Gospich
Portable One, Inc
282 Digital Drive
Morgan Hill, CA 95037

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tsims@columbiadb.com [SMTP:TSIMS@COLUMBIADB.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:43:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

tartanitia sims
columbia enterprises
1018 7th street se
washington, DC 20003

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: fhammond@columbiadb.com[SMTP:FHAMMOND@COLUMBIADB.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:43:05 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

patricia mitchell
columbia enterprises
1018 7th street se
washington, DC 20003

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:41 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: liesha@sitabs.com [SMTP: LIESHA@SITABS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:40:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Liesha Mehra
Sita Business Systems, inc.
11574 Seneca hill ct
Great falls, VA 22066

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: russelln@swbell.net [SMTP:RUSSELLN@SWBELL.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:37:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

russell canney
the sound shop
1626 n 2nd st
abilene, TX 79601

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cgrace@itcelectronics.com [SMTP:CGRACE@ITCELECTRONICS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:19:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Charles Grace
ITC ELECTRONICS
2772 W. Olympic Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90006

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Ronga4@Verizon.net [SMTP:RONGA4@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 3:13:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

ROSE NGADI
MICKEYROSE INTERNATIONAL COMPANY
2315 WALTON AVE, SUITE 6C
BRONX, NY 10468

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: glenn@aerobrake.com [SMTP:GLENN@AEROBRAKE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:53:04 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Glenn McNew, Jr.
Aero Brake & Spares, Inc.
15444 Tradesman Drive
San Antonio, TX 78249-1319

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:34 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mark@rubecon.com [SMTP:MARK@RUBECON.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:34:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

The General Services Administration is reviewing procurement policies in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities."

The following statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR, and although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have now been eleven Federal investigations that have found fraud, abuse, loopholes, and lack of oversight that has allowed billions of dollars in small business contracts to go to some of the largest companies in the world. GSA policies must address the major problems that continue to allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies to ensure that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses, as the law requires. Policies that create more loopholes to allow fraud and abuse will no longer be tolerated.

Respectfully submitted,

Mark McKenna
Rubecon General contractors
3450 3rd st.
San Francisco, CA 94124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ruben@rubecon.com [SMTP:RUBEN@RUBECON.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:23:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ruben A. Santana
Rubecon General Contracting Inc.
3450 Third St. Bldg. 1-B
San Francisco, CA 94124

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:16 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: stella@mercomcorp.com [SMTP:STELLA@MERCOCORP.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 2:15:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Stella Colwell
Mercom

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 1:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bob.arnold@s3inc.com [SMTP:BOB.ARNOLD@S3INC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 1:07:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bob Arnold
system Studies & Simulation
615 Discovery Drive
Huntsville, AL 35806

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 1:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dsapkar@amtech-usa.com [SMTP:DSAPKAR@AMTECH-USA.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 1:06:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dimce Sapkar
Amtech, Inc.
2333 Central Avenue
Lake Station, IN 46405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: stephon@houston.rr.com [SMTP:STEPHON@HOUSTON.RR.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:56:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

stephon olivier
Precision Communication, Concept, LLC
P.O. Box 62
Stafford, , TX 77497-0062

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rickeyequality@yahoo.com [SMTP:RICKEYEQUALITY@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:46:58 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rickey Scott
E Quality Corporation
1308 Scott Drive
Cedar Hill, TX 75104

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:29 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@saitech-hsv.com [SMTP:INFO@SAITECH-HSV.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:28:48 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mangala Annambhotla
SaiTech Inc
3877 Fairfax Ridge Rd.
Fairfax, VA 22030

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sam.mcnullly@alatecinc.com [SMTP: SAM.MCNULLY@ALATECINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:17:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sammy McNully
ALATEC, Inc.
2317 Meridian Street NW
Building 3400 Suite 81
Huntsville, AL 35811-1859

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dale.carpenter@imediait.com[SMTP:DALE.CARPENTER@IMEDIAIT.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:07:14 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dale Carpenter
Imedia.it
2100 West Loop South
Houston, TX 77027

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: SterlingGroupNC@earthlink.net [SMTP:STERLINGGROUPNC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:02:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

J.D. Bundy
Sterling Group
Box 87367
Fayetteville, NC 28304

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bobpat@cableone.net [SMTP:BOBPAT@CABLEONE.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 12:01:18 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

R W Arnold
Wetmore Declamation Bureau
Box 2695
Sioux City, IA 51106

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tanya@bce-ak.com [SMTP:TANYA@BCE-AK.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:41:06 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Tanya Bratslavsky
BCE, Inc.
500 W 27th Avenue S-te A
Anchorage, AK 99503

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: steve@powersofautomation.com [SMTP:STEVE@POWERSOFAUTOMATION.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:22:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Steve Powers

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From:
Chic.ransone@internationalindustries.net [SMTP:CHIC.RANSONE@INTERNATIONALINDUSTRIES.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Morris Ransone
International Industries Inc.
407 Innovation Drive
Annapolis, MD 21402

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From:
Chic.ransone@internationalindustries.net [SMTP:CHIC.RANSONE@INTERNATIONALINDUSTRIES.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19:27 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Morris Ransone
International Industries Inc.
407 Innovation Drive
Annapolis, MD 21402

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: uelysee@infolynx.com [SMTP:UELYSEE@INFOLYNX.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19:12 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Uelysee Scantling
InfoLynx Services, Inc.
325 Danbury Rd.
New Milford, CT 06776

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Liz@Dial411.net [SMTP:LIZ@DIAL411.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 11:19:00 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Lev
Dial411
23939 Ventura Blvd.
Calabasas, CA 91302

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: zjk@giottoinc.com[SMTP:ZJK@GIOTTOINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:39:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Zbigniew Karaszewski
PO Box 570065
Houston, TX 77257-0065

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tvil@fast.net [SMTP:TVI1@FAST.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:39:48 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

William Mosser
Thermoplastic Valves Inc.
53 S. 7th St.
Emmaus, PA 18049

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:39 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tvil@fast.net [SMTP:TVI1@FAST.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:39:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mary Jo Serfass
Thermoplastic Valves Inc.
53 S. 7th St.
Emmaus, PA 18049

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kmeeks@gseinc.net [SMTP:KMEEKS@GSEINC.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:37:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Kaye Meeks
Great Southern Engineering, Inc.
3795 Gordon Terry Parkway
Trinity, AL 35673

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: stamco@erols.com [SMTP:STAMCO@EROLS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:36:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

gail snyder
STAMCO Aerospace Inc
2840 Pine Road
Unit E
Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: captain@callcbc.com [SMTP:CAPTAIN@CALLCBC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:36:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Daryl Lev
CBC
23939 Ventura Blvd
Calabasas, CA 91302

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: WAYNE01@CAVTEL.NET [SMTP:WAYNE01@CAVTEL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:35:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

WAYNE D. BERRY

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:35 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jcartmill@shieldsharper.com[SMTP:JCARTMILL@SHIELDSHARPER.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:35:14 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jimmy Cartmill
Shields, Harper & Co.
5107 Broadway
Oakland, CA 94611

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:34 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sandyb@firstclasspack.com[SMTP:SANDYB@FIRSTCLASSPACK.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:33:52 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sandra Brock
First Class Packaging

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:32 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lorry@phillipselectric.com[SMTP:LORRY@PHILLIPSELECTRIC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:32:18 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Lorry Wagner
Phillips Electric
4126 St. Clair Ave
Cleveland, OH 44103

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:31 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: edc@vintagepavingco.com [SMTP:EDC@VINTAGEPAVINGCO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:30:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Edward Carbahal
Vintage Paving Company
119 Main Street
Winters, CA 95694

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:29 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rsybrandy@pacificgyre.com[SMTP:RSYBRANDY@PACIFICGYRE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:29:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Risa Sybrandy
Pacific Gyre
110 Copperwood Way
Suite G
Oceanside, CA 92054

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:29 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rthydean@transaeroheli.com [SMTP:RTHYDEAN@TRANSAEROHEL.I.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:28:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Robert Thydean
Trans Aero, LTD
4101 Evans Ave.
Cheyenne, WY 82001

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Brianw@4allmemory.com [SMTP:BRIANW@4ALLMEMORY.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:27:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Brian Way
4 All Memory
655 Leffingwell Ave
Kirkwood, MO 63122

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:27 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bob@federalsales.com [SMTP:BOB@FEDERALSALES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:27:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Bob Manciet
Gemini
6 Morgan
Irvine, CA 92618

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:27 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gary.egan@AMDETECH.com [SMTP:GARY.EGAN@AMDETECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:26:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

gary egan
AMDETECH
602 East 7th Street
south boston, MA 02127

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:27 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bob@federalsales.com [SMTP:BOB@FEDERALSALLES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:26:48 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Bob Manciet
Gemini
6 Morgan
Irvine, CA 92618

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:26 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@federalsales.com[SMTP:SALES@FEDERALSALES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:25:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jacques Manciet
Federal Technology Solutions Inc
6 Morgan
Ste 126
Irvine, CA 92618

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:26 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nelsonhs@earthlink.net [SMTP:NELSONHS@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:25:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Nelson Stiltner

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: keithburgess@corporatestudio.com [SMTP:KEITHBURGESS@CORPORATESTUDIO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:24:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Keith Burgess

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jjacaruso@defwiring.com [SMTP:JJACARUSO@DEFWIRING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:23:08 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jason Jacaruso
D/E/F Wiring Services, Ltd
863 Voluntown Road
Griswold, CT 06351

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: john.bosma@bosma-research.com [SMTP:JOHN.BOSMA@BOSMA-RESEARCH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John Bosma
Bosma Research International, Inc.
1420 Fifth Avenue, 22nd Floor
Seattle, WA 98101

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: maoj@knowceanconsulting.com [SMTP:MAOJ@KNOWCEANCONSULTING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John Mao
Knowcean Consulting Inc.
5 Stoney Creek Way
Potomac, MD 20854

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: john@aabinc.com [SMTP:JOHN@AABINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:22:12 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John Sajjadi
AAB Imaging, Inc.
1101 King Street
Suite 107
Alexandria, VA 22314

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: herndonh@compliancecorporation.com [SMTP:HERNDONH@COMPLIANCECORPORATION.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:21:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Harold Herndon

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:16 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ronko@aloha.net [SMTP:RONKO@ALOHA.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:16:12 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ron Kohn
Palmer Pavement Marking
95-177 Waikalani Drive
Mililani, HI 96789

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:15 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tki@wyoming.com[SMTP:TKI@WYOMING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:14:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Bob Kenison
TK Industries
P.O. Box 1045
Laramie, WY 82073

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:14 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Dean.Williams@valornet.com[SMTP:DEAN.WILLIAMS@VALORNET.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:13:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Dean Williams

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:11 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: clearaire@flagstaff.az.us [SMTP:CLEARAIRE@FLAGSTAFF.AZ.US]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:10:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Greg Crosman
Clear Aire Audio

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rhinologistics@wi.rr.com[SMTP:RHINOLOGISTICS@WI.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:08:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Napoleon Hardy
Rhino Logistics LLC
2820 Crossridge Dr
Racine, WI 53405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: idbaxter@semdesigns.com[SMTP:IDBAXTER@SEMDESIGNS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:05:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ira Baxter
Semantic Designs
12636 Research Blvd #C214
Austin, TX 78759

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sean.escobar@drcservicesgroup.com[SMTP:SEAN.ESCOBAR@DRCSERVICESGROUP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:05:43 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

SEAN ESCOBAR
DRC SERVICES GROUP
5716 CORSA AVE.
SUITE 100
WESTLAKE VILLAGE, CA 91362

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: algamarina@caribe.net [SMTP:ALGAMARINA@CARIBE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:03:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Madeleine Cancel
Alga Marina
#15 Buenaventura Quinones ST.
Guanica, PR 00653-2645

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: shan@sciengg.com[SMTP:SHAN@SCIENGG.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

shan Shanmugam
SCI Engg.P.C
241 West 30th St
New York, NY 11040

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Jan@ERScheck.com [SMTP:JAN@ERSCHECK.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jan Harper
Employment Research Services
10555 Montgomery Blvd
Bldg 3 Suite 180
Albuquerque, NM 87111

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: titoune@wildthingsgear.com[SMTP:TITOUNE@WILDTHINGSGEAR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:01:58 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Marie Meunier
Wild Things Inc.
1618 White Mtn Hwy
North Conway, NH 03860

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dbrunsell@dts9000.com [SMTP:DBRUNSELL@DTS9000.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:01:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Dennis Brunsell
DTS
2680 Westcott Blvd
Knoxville, TN 37931-3111

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rhess@rhess.net [SMTP:RHESS@RHESS.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:00:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Robert Hess

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@williamstump.com[SMTP:SALES@WILLIAMSTUMP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:59:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

William Stump

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lsims@Grandelectricsupply.com[SMTP:LSIMS@GRANDELECTRICSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:58:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Laura da Silva Sims
Grand Electric Supply, Inc.
2450 La Mirada Dr.
Vista, CA 92081

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:56 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pbrown@blackball.com[SMTP:PBROWN@BLACKBALL.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:55:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Patricia Brown
BlackBall, Inc.
10525 Vista Sorrento Pkwy
Suite 100
San Diego, CA 92121

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@aesaz.com[SMTP:ADMIN@AESAZ.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:53:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Martin Godusi
Applied EnviroSolutions, Inc.
325 E. Southern Ave Suite 115
Tempe, AZ 85282

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tfhale@charte.net [SMTP:TFHALE@CHARTE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:53:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Thomas Hale
Technology & Networking
610 E Second Street
Scott City , MO 63780

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: howard@trailerrentalco.com[SMTP:HOWARD@TRAILERRENTALCO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:52:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Howard Norton
Trailer Rental Company
P. O. Box 27595
Salt Lake City, UT 84127

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: officel@advantagecc.com[SMTP:OFFICE1@ADVANTAGECC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:50:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

russell grant
Advantage Commercial Cleanig

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: fxc@ieee.org [SMTP:FXC@IEEE.ORG]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:50:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Francis Canning
Simply Sparse (R) Technologies
59 Delrose Drive
Morgantown, WV 26508

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cmw@topechelon.com[SMTP:CMW@TOPECHELON.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:47:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Charlene Turczyn
CMW & Associates
122 W Pine
Springfield, IL 62704

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ceiinc-ken@sti.net [SMTP:CEIINC-KEN@STI.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:47:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Kenneth Gossett
Control Enterprises, Inc.
P.O. Box 396
40124 Highway 49
Oakhurst, CA 93644

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@csbsllc.com[SMTP:ADMIN@CSBSLLC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:46:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Anthony McFadgen
CSBS Business Services, LLC
200 Gary Road
Carrboro, NC 27510

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wildhorse@adelphia.net [SMTP:WILDHORSE@ADELPHIA.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Christine Johnson
Wild Horse Computers
PO Box 265
Lancaster, NH 03584

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sig@usroads.biz [SMTP:SIG@USROADS.BIZ]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45:08 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

SIEGFRIED MAYER
US Roads, LLC
684 Blackhawk Dr
Colorado Springs, CO 80919

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sig@usroads.biz [SMTP:SIG@USROADS.BIZ]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45:08 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

SIEGFRIED MAYER
US Roads, LLC
684 Blackhawk Dr
Colorado Springs, CO 80919

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hughes-s@erols.com [SMTP:HUGHES-S@EROLS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:44:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Susan Hughes
Individual Development Associates, Inc.
P. O. Box 1108
Dumfries, VA 22026

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: keith@criticalbattery.com[SMTP:KEITH@CRITICALBATTERY.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:44:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Keith Clark
Sandown Wireless
PO Box 564
East Hampstead, NH 03826

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ken-cybergear@cox.net [SMTP:KEN-CYBERGEAR@COX.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:44:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ken Katz
Cybergear
9025 N. 14th Street
Phoenix, AZ 85020

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rhorn@bizopp.state.nv.us [SMTP:RHORN@BIZOPP.STATE.NV.US]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:42:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Rick Horn
State of Nevada -Econ Dev
555 E. Washington Ave.
Las Vegas, NV 89101

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rluciani@3rivers.net [SMTP:RLUCIANI@3RIVERS.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:41:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Raul Luciani
CP of Bozeman, Inc.
P O Box 207
McAllister, MT 59740

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:41 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: SONNY@MBSDIRECT.COM [SMTP:SONNY@MBSDIRECT.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:41:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sonny Tohan
Mac Business Solutions, Inc.
9057 Gaither Road
Gaithersburg, MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tvil@fast.net [SMTP:TVI1@FAST.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mary Ellen Mosser
Thermoplastic Valves Inc.
53 S. 7th St.
Emmaus, PA 18049

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tvil@fast.net [SMTP:TVI1@FAST.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Donnita Fisher
Thermoplastic Valves Inc.
53 S. 7th St.
Emmaus, PA 18049

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: george@dxresearch.net [SMTP:GEORGE@DXRESEARCH.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:39:58 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

George Chynoweth, PhD
dxResearch

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: csi@cannonsports.com [SMTP:CSI@CANNONSPORTS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:09:08 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jon Warner
Cannon Sports, Inc.
PO Box 11179
Burbank, CA 91510-1179

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: eaim@phonewave.net [SMTP:EAIM@PHONEWAVE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:04:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Edith Isidoro-Mills

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kullphoto@earthlink.net [SMTP:KULLPHOTO@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:04:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Larry Kull
Kull & Company Photo Systems
27215 124th Ave. SE
Kent, WA 98058

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: eilene@4image.com [SMTP:EILENE@4IMAGE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:03:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Eilene Murphree
Image Concepts, Inc.
3727 Greenbriar, Suite #117
Stafford, TX 77477

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dbondcst@showme.net [SMTP:DBONDCST@SHOWME.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:03:12 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Donald Bond
Donald Bond Const.
P.O. Box 99
363 Charleston
Benton, MO 63736

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bill@stellarsun.com[SMTP:BILL@STELLARSUN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:56:38 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

William Ball

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: americanhvac@bellsouth.net [SMTP:AMERICANHVAC@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:53:58 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

NICK SINDICICH
AMERICAN HVAC
3370 SW 13 AVE
FORT LAUDERDALE, FL 33315

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ssanner@terrasolutionsonline.com [SMTP:SSANNER@TERRASOLUTIONSONLINE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:47:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Susan Sanner
Terra Solutions
427 Calle Robles
San Clemente, CA 92672

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bob.ellison@numarkoffice.com [SMTP:BOB.ELLISON@NUMARKOFFICE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:44:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Bob Ellison
NuMark Office Interiors
3600 - 136th Pl. SE
Bldg. 4
Bellevue, WA 98006

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kgregory@bulltrackconstruction.com [SMTP:KGREGORY@BULLTRACKCONSTRUCTION.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:40:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Kelly Gregory
Bulltrack Construction Co
P.O. Box 2477
Marysville, CA 95901

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jim@kmedrysuits.com [SMTP:JIM@KMEDRYSUITS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:37:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jim Knannlein
KME Diving Suits, Inc.
3420 C st. N E # 405
Auburn, WA 89002

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lawlereva@hotmail.com [SMTP:LAWLEREVA@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:36:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Eva Esparza
CAPAware, Inc.
6810 Thorncliffe Drive Ste B
Austin, TX 78731

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marymcfaddin@bellsouth.net [SMTP:MARYMCFADDIN@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:22:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

mary mcfaddin
lordanddominion

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mozart@lighttouchmedical.com [SMTP:MOZART@LIGHTTOUCHMEDICAL.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:21:11 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Donald Schmucker
LighTouch Medical, Inc.
P.O. Box 531
Bryn Athyn, PA 19009

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marymcfaddin@bellsouth.net [SMTP:MARYMCFADDIN@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:20:52 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

mary mcfaddin

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ssweeney@newhorizonsnj.com [SMTP:SSWEENEY@NEWHORIZONSNJ.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:12:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Stephen Sweeney
New Horizons Computer Learning Center of NJ
111 Wood Ave South
Iselin, NJ 08735

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:11 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: james.askew@diversitechinc.com [SMTP:JAMES.ASKEW@DIVERSITECHINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:10:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

James Askew
Diversitech

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ckleeberg@medicalimagingtech.com [SMTP:CKLEEGERG@MEDICALIMAGINGTECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:09:56 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

K. Charles H. Kleeberg
Medical Imaging Technologies
875 Valley St
Colorado Springs, CO 80915

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rnewton@seanet.com [SMTP:RNEWTON@SEANET.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:08:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Roger Newton
Newton Building & Development, LLC
1705 4th Street
Bremerton, WA 98337

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: verndavis@strategicadvantages.com [SMTP:VERNDAVIS@STRATEGICADVANTAGES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:03:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Vernestine Davis
Strategic Advantages, LLC
8203 Northlake Court
Laurel, MD 20707

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: verndavis@strategicadvantages.com[SMTP:VERNDAVIS@STRATEGICADVANTAGES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 3:03:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Vernestine Davis
Strategic Advantages, LLC
8203 Northlake Court
Laurel, MD 20707

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pdc@synergist-tech.com[SMTP:PDC@SYNERGIST-TECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:58:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Cacciamani
200A Main Street
Peckville, PA 18452-2406

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lstuhl@chemmotif.com[SMTP:LSTUHL@CHEMMOTIF.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:57:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Louis Stuhl
ChemMotif, Inc.
60 Thoreau St
Concord, MA 01742

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jjwagone@highland.net [SMTP:JJWAGONER@HIGHLAND.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:57:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jacqueline Wagoner
Evergreen Metals
935 Camp Austin Road
Oakdale, TN 37829

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Noi.Finley@naknan.com [SMTP:NOI.FINLEY@NAKNAN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:57:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Noklek Naknan Finley
Naknan, Inc.
1300-A Bay Area Blvd.
Suite #233
Houston, TX 77058

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:56 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: awallace@cpgp.com [SMTP:AWALLACE@CPGP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:55:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Andrew Wallace
Communications Professionals Inc.
15565 Northland Dr. Ste 304W
Southfield, MI 48075

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Egreen@eeenterprisesinc.com[SMTP:EGREEN@EEENTERPRISESINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ernest Green
E&E Enterprises Global, Inc.
20 Basil Sawyer Drive
Hampton, VA 23666

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bcunning@eklunds.com [SMTP:BCUNNING@EKLUNDS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Beth Cunningham
BCE Specialties Inc
POB 1566
Grapevine, TX 76099

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sharon@milehifire.com [SMTP:SHARON@MILEHIFIRE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sharon Sells
Mile-Hi Fire Apparatus, Inc.
7270 Dahlia St
Commerce City, CO 80022

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ann@alphasoftwear.com[SMTP:ANN@ALPHASOFTWARE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:52:52 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

ann meyer

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: blue@fuse.net [SMTP:BLUE@FUSE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:52:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Phil Paradis
Blue@ Editorial LLC

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: parkway@swva.net [SMTP:PARKWAY@SWVA.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:47:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ted Westmoreland
Parkway Knitting Co, Inc
1000 Pilot View Rd
Hillsville, VA 24343

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ltomaselli@earthlink.net [SMTP:LTOMASELLI@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:43:42 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Linda Tomaselli
GISRDC
341 Jamaica Way
Niceville, FL 32578

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:35 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ewenzel@aesclever.com[SMTP:EWENZEL@AESCLEVER.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:34:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Wenzel
AES
149 Commonwealth Dr
Menlo Park, CA 94025

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:26 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: smithauto@bbtel.com [SMTP:SMITHAUTO@BBTEL.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:26:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jon Pirtle
Smith Auto Supply
716 High Street
Brandenburg, KY 40108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:25 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mk@mwknowles.com [SMTP:MK@MWKNOWLES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:25:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Michael Knowles
Michael Knowles Consulting, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:25 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nolanfischer@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:NOLANFISCHER@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:24:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Nolan Fischer
Ward Consulting, LLC/Full Circle Consulting Group 1450 Washington Blvd
S1302
Stamford, CT 06902

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tom@dial411.net[SMTP:TOM@DIAL411.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:24:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Thomas Miller-Freutel
Dial411
324 Apple Drive
Steamboat Springs, CO 80487

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:18 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cmoore@cjmconstruction.net [SMTP:CMOORE@CJMCONSTRUCTION.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 2:18:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Cynthia Moore
CJM Construction Co., LLC
7065 W Ann Rd #130-662
Las Vegas, NV 89130

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: amy.funk@target.com[SMTP:AMY.FUNK@TARGET.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:08:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Amy Funk
Target
2119 Oliver Ave S
Minneapolis, MN 55405-2440

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: abell@sift.info [SMTP:ABELL@SIFT.INFO]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:08:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Andrea Bell
SIFT
1272 Raymond Ave.
St. Paul, MN 55108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cmiller@sift.info[SMTP:CMILLER@SIFT.INFO]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:08:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Chris Miller
SIFT
1272 Raymond Ave.
St. Paul, MN 55108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hfunk@SIFT.info[SMTP:HFUNK@SIFT.INFO]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:07:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Harry Funk
SIFT, LLC
2119 Oliver Ave S
Minneapolis, MN 55405-2440

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chs@chsmail.com [SMTP:CHS@CHSMAIL.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:40:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Robert Bisnett
CHS
10543
Las Vegas, NV 89135

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vonrick@polarcomm.com [SMTP:VONRICK@POLARCOMM.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:38:08 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Richard Parsons
NorthStar Works LLC
500 Garrison
Larimore, ND 58251

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: scott@aboutmontana.net [SMTP:SCOTT@ABOUTMONTANA.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 6:04:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Scott Davidson
Davidson Construction Inc.
PO Box 1094
Whitefish, MT 59937

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jwfinger@sioux.com [SMTP:JWFINGER@SIOUX.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:57:14 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John Finger
Sioux Steam Cleaner Corporation
1 Sioux Plaza
Beresford, SD 57004

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: w4seas@arctic.net [SMTP:W4SEAS@ARCTIC.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:56:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Dean Kasischke
Four Seasons Boat Services
PO Box 2352
Seward, AK 99664

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tmezzell@lamserv.com [SMTP:TMEZZELL@LAMSERV.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:53:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mason Ezzell
LSI
3081 Bartlett Corp. Dr.
Memphis, TN 38133

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pshugart@hpcomputing.com [SMTP:PSHUGART@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:51:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Shugart
High Plains Computing
1746 Cole Blvd.
Bld 21 Suite 225
Lakewood, CO 80401

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: QED@pacific.net [SMTP:QED@PACIFIC.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:42:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Judith Luchsinger
QED Consulting Group
1825 Hartley Street
Lakeport, CA 95453

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:35 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: diana@flaggbuilding.com [SMTP:DIANA@FLAGGBUILDING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:34:43 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Diana Bonnett
Flagg Building Improvements

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:31 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: macochran@kennett.net [SMTP:MACOCHRAN@KENNETT.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:31:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Milton Cochran
Cochran Consulting, Inc.
P.O. Box 35
Landenberg, PA 19350

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cwilson@teamcpn.com [SMTP: CWILSON@TEAMCPN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:03:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Costello Wilson
CPN-NETWORK, LLC
805 15th Street #NW
Washington, DC 20005

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul@oandn.com [SMTP:PAUL@OANDN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 5:01:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Neville
O'Brien & Neville, Inc.
81 Highland Street
Holliston, MA 01746

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ceo@webainc.com[SMTP:CEO@WEBAINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:57:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Wayne Beale
Wayne E Beale Associates Inc
4309 Decatur Dr
Suite 500K
Woodbridge, VA 22193

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: asap@mandptechnologies.com [SMTP:ASAP@MANDPTECHNOLOGIES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:51:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jim Criss

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: belscher@waterstoneinc.com[SMTP:BELSCHER@WATERSTONEINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:51:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Doug Belscher
Waterstone Environmental

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lshugart@hpcomputing.com [SMTP:LSHUGART@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:36:51 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Linda Shugart
HPC
1746 Cole Blvd. #225
Lakewood,, CO 80439

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lshugart@hpcomputing.com [SMTP:LSHUGART@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:36:51 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Linda Shugart
HPC
1746 Cole Blvd. #225
Lakewood,, CO 80439

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sandyl.gsenviron@verizon.net [SMTP:SANDYL.GSENVIRON@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:21:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sandy Schneeberger
Golden State Environmental
15051 Leffingwell Rd.
Ste 102
Whittier, CA 90604

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:18 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: MOTORSANDMORE@EARTHLINK.NET [SMTP:MOTORSANDMORE@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:18:03 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

GLENN BIRK
MOTORS&MORE
3030 WESTWOOD DRIVE
LAS VEGAS, NV 89109

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:16 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: fred@stcind.com [SMTP:FRED@STCIND.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:16:24 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Fred Mutzek
Spiral Tool Corporation dba STC Industries
761 Route 6
Shohola, PA 18458

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: larry@officesmade.com [SMTP:LARRY@OFFICESMADE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 4:13:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Larry Gelhaar
Offices Made

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:57 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tyler@lakesideexcavation.com [SMTP:TYLER@LAKESIDEEEXCAVATION.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:57:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Tyler Smith

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:51 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sytecorpchicago@sbcglobal.com [SMTP:SYTECORPCHICAGO@SBCGLOBAL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:50:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mario Short
SYTE Corp
207 E. Ohio Street
Suite 194
Chicago, IL 60611-3238

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:46 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bill@anmelectronics.com [SMTP:BILL@ANMELECTRONICS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:45:34 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Chong Chan
A & M Electronics Supply
4254 Bluebonnet
Stafford, TX 77477

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:40 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chan@xerosupply.com [SMTP:CHAN@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:40:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Chan Sinthansiphone
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:40 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tanya@xerosupply.com [SMTP:TANYA@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:39:30 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Tanya Eck
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wlapp@xerosupply.com [SMTP:WLAPP@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:38:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Wendy Lapp
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wschrewe@xerosupply.com[SMTP:WSCHREWE@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:37:50 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

William Schrewe
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:37 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rschrewe@xerosupply.com[SMTP:RSCHREWE@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:37:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Rose Marie Schrewe
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:36 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sleny@xerosupply.com[SMTP:SLENY@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:36:12 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Scott Leny
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:34 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cleney@xerosupply.com [SMTP:CLENY@XEROSUPPLY.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:34:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Christine Leny
Xerographic Supply of WI
406 Travis Lane
Ste 48
Waukesha, WI 53189

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:29 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rcarr@auntpearlies.com[SMTP:RCARR@AUNTPEARLIES.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:29:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John R. Carr
Aunt Pearlle\'s Food Products Inc
302 Brown Avenue
Columbus, GA 31909

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:22 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@sparrowtechinc.com[SMTP:SALES@SPARROWTECHINC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:22:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

shakeela bennett
Sparrow Technologies, Inc
9067 N US Hwy 31
Suite 202
Berrien Springs, MI 49103

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ffrysiiek@prgusa.net [SMTP:FFRYSIEK@PRGUSA.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:15:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Frank Frysiiek
Potomac River Group, LLC
803 Sycolin Rd.
Suite 205
Leesburg, VA 20175

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:13 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul@novatechlighting.com[SMTP:PAUL@NOVATECHLIGHTING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:13:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Demos
Novatech Lighting Systems, Inc.

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: drmwhite@nets.com[SMTP:DRMWHITE@NETS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:08:55 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

David White

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:00 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: foster@jumpgate.net [SMTP:FOSTER@JUMPGATE.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:59:33 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Lionel J. Foster
Foster Concrete Forms & Supplies, Ltd.
P.O. Box 564
Mason City, IA 50402-0564

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:51 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: talwar@trieco.net [SMTP:TALWAR@TRIECO.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:50:34 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

suneel talwar
trieco llc
7710 springvale drive, suite 201
louisville, KY 40241-2745

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hpost@abtcap.com[SMTP:HPOST@ABTCAP.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:48:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Henry Post
American Business Technology
5570 Port Royal Road
Springfield, VA 22151-2303

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:46 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gidind@cybrtyme.com[SMTP:GIDIND@CYBRTYME.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:46:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sharon Hyde
Gadsden Industrial
192 Wiggins St
Rainbow City, AL 35906

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:46 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ghilton@1stcallstaffing.com[SMTP:GHILTON@1STCALLSTAFFING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:45:35 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Gina Hilton
FirstCall Staffing Solutions
2008 NW South Outer Rd
Blue Springs, MO 64015

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:43 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: asisylvia@bellsouth.net [SMTP:ASISYLVIA@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:43:18 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sylvia Puente Fels
Aerospace Suppliers Inc.
4155 Dow Rd., Suite M
Melbourne, FL 32934

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ACSTRAFFIC@EARTHLINK.NET [SMTP:ACSTRAFFIC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:42:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

JOSEPH MUNIZ
ADVANCED CABLING SOLUTIONS
PO BOX 300666
FERN PARK, FL 32730

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: m_schipper@envrus.com[SMTP:M_SCHIPPER@ENVRUS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:14:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mark Schipper

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:13 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: prince.construction@verizon.net [SMTP:PRINCE.CONSTRUCTION@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:13:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

alberto gomez
prince construction company, inc.
1111 good hope road, s.e.
washington, DC 20020

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:05 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: truffhead@fcp-filters.com[SMTP:TRUFHEAD@FCP-FILTERS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:05:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Thomas Ruffhead
Fluid Conditioning Products, Inc.
Kleine & Warwick Sts.
PO Box 407
Lititz, PA 17543

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 4:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: QUICK@BOREAL.ORG [SMTP:QUICK@BOREAL.ORG]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 4:59:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

DAVID PEDERSEN
PEDERSEN CONSTRUCTION
801 WEST 1ST STREET
PO BOX 1282
GRAND MARAIS, MN 55604-1282

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 4:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sjacobs@fedresources.com [SMTP: SJACOBS@FEDRESOURCES.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 4:44:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

George Jacobs
Federal Resources Corporation
10875 Main Street
Suite 211
Fairfax, VA 22030

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 3:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hparodi@prtc.net [SMTP:HPARODI@PRTC.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 3:31:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ramon Parodi
Grama Mia
P. O. Box 34286
Ponce, PR 00734-4286

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 12:03 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: transunimission@juno.com [SMTP:TRANSUNIMISSION@JUNO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 12:02:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Vladimir Abramov
TransUNImission, Inc.
P. O. Box 22075
Eagan, MN 55337

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:39 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rstiles@api-corp.com [SMTP:RSTILES@API-CORP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:38:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Randy Stiles
Applied Planning Intl Inc
po box 910
Wilton, CA 95693

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:32 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lor57conaway@yahoo.com[SMTP:LOR57CONAWAY@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:31:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

lorraine conaway

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: omoore11@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:OMOOREL1L@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:07:51 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

odell moore

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: salestpi@lvcm.com[SMTP:SALESTPI@LVCM.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:51:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Blake Porter
True Power, Inc.
2313 Brady Ave.
Las Vegas, NV 89101

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: suppliers2003@yahoo.com [SMTP: SUPPLIERS2003@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:39:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Thomas Deel Jr.
Red Cedar Development LLC.
858 TC Sand Dunes
Tuba City, AZ 86045

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:23 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ed-ads@speakeasy.net [SMTP:ED-ADS@SPEAKEASY.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:22:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ed Bryant
Advanced Digital Solutions Inc
1418 6th Avenue Suite A
TACOMA, WA 98405

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: precisionboat@gci.net [SMTP:PRECISIONBOAT@GCI.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:20:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Michael Litman
Precision Boatworks
P.O. Box 1971
Sitka, AK 99835

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: qpremier@bellsouth.net [SMTP:QPREMIER@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 8:01:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Quincey Roberts
Premier Printing
1211 Melissa Drive
Valdosta, GA 31601-4250

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:59 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: craigc@cybergearusa.com[SMTP:CRAIGC@CYBERGEARUSA.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:58:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Craig Carnahan
Cybergear, Inc.
16302 East Page Ave.
Gilbert, AZ 85234

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sally@wizardassociates.com [SMTP: SALLY@WIZARDASSOCIATES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 7:21:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sally Willard
Wizard Associates
13 Foster Road
Burlington, MA 01803

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bholbert@hpcomputing.com [SMTP:BHOLBERT@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:59:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

B Holbert
HPC
1746 Cole Blvd. #225
Lakewood, CO 80401

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: at.at@charter.net [SMTP:AT.AT@CHARTER.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:58:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ann Tisue
Agile Technology, Inc.
1329 Santa Cruz Dr.
Minden, NV 89423

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:58 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pshugart@hpcomputing.com [SMTP: PSHUGART@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:57:41 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Shugart
HPC
1746 Cole Blvd. #225
Littleton, CO 80401

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:58 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: juan@fastclothing.net [SMTP:JUAN@FASTCLOTHING.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:57:36 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Juan Davis

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ronaldjfranke@mindspring.com [SMTP:RONALDJFRANKE@MINDSPRING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:56:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ronald Franke
Franke Risk Services, LLC
3162 Johnson Ferry Road
Suite 260-707
Marietta, GA 30062-7600

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bthorne@hpcomputing.com [SMTP:BTHORNE@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:55:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Brandon Thorne
HPC
1746 Cole Blvd. #225
Lakewood, CO 80439

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mlcastellanos@juno.com [SMTP:MLCASTELLANOS@JUNO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:53:09 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Maria Luisa Castellanos
United Architects, Inc.
1385 Coral Way, Suite 207
Miami, FL 33145

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:52 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vgmoles@msn.com [SMTP:VGMOLES@MSN.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:52:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Victoria Moles
Electrical Innovations
150 Chuckwagon Lane
Livermore, CO 80536

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: genedouglas@juno.com [SMTP:GENEDOUGLAS@JUNO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:49:18 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Gene Messerschmidt
1997 Dineh Drive
Prescott, AZ 86305-3910

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:35 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: comments@mindconnection.com [SMTP:COMMENTS@MINDCONNECTION.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:35:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mark Lamendola
Mindconnection
4806 Wedd St
Merriam, KS 66203

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marcia.myerberg@myerberg.com [SMTP:MARCIA.MYERBERG@MYERBERG.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:25:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Marcia Myerberg
Myerberg & Company, L.P.
780 Third Avenue
New York, NY 10017

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul@sonomatech.com [SMTP:PAUL@SONOMATECH.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 9:16:52 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Roberts

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:36 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: svann7463@charter.net [SMTP:SVANN7463@CHARTER.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:35:55 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sundra Vann
Sun Van and Associates Corp.
243 W. Congress, Suite 350
Detroit, MI 48226

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: francis@mcis.com [SMTP:FRANCIS@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:32:23 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Francis Parks
Absolute MAC
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: erlinda@mcis.com [SMTP:ERLINDA@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:32:09 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Francis Parks
Absolute MAC
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: erlinda@mcis.com [SMTP:ERLINDA@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:31:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Erlinda Carpenter
Music computer integration Services
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:31 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: max@mcis.com [SMTP:MAX@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:30:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Max De Arriz
MCIS corp.
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: raul@mcis.com[SMTP:RAUL@MCIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:30:24 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Raul De Arriz
Absolute MAC
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: maccorporate@mac.com [SMTP:MACCORPORATE@MAC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:29:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Raul DeArriz
MCIS corp.
18525 N. Frederick Avenue
Gaithersburg, MD 20879

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:29 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tricopy@bellsouth.net [SMTP:TRICOPY@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:28:53 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Elnieda Sinclair
Trinity Graphics & Copy Center, Inc.
701 Brickell Avenue
Lobby 106
Miami, FL 33131

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:28 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: neilson@ludd.com [SMTP:NEILSON@LUDD.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:27:55 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

George Neilson
Lake Union Drydock Co.
1515 Fairview Ave. E.
Seattle, WA 98102

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: allcity@thejnet.com [SMTP:ALLCITY@THEJNET.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:22:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

ISIDORE FRIED

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nigh10gale_songbird@yahoo.com[SMTP:NIGH10GALE_SONGBIRD@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:16:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Debi Prindel
Precision Pumping Systems Inc.
2204 Talley Way
Longview , WA 98632

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: allaroundtree@ypc.net [SMTP:ALLAROUNDTREE@YPC.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:15:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Sylvia Batie
All Around Tree Svc. Inc
2728 South 2700 West
West Valley City,, UT 84119

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:12 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mike@pacificstandard.com[SMTP:MIKE@PACIFICSTANDARD.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:11:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mike Thetford

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:03 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bthorne@hpcomputing.com[SMTP:BTHORNE@HPCOMPUTING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 8:03:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Brandon Thorne
High Plains Computing, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jennifer@utahsigngirl.com[SMTP:JENNIFER@UTAHSIGNGIRL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:54:24 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Delker
Utah Sign Girl
762 E. Hawthorne Ave
Salt Lake City, UT 84102

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: randyleclair@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:RANDYLECLAIR@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:53:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Raymond LeClair
117 W 133rd Pl N
Skiatook, OK 74070

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dbowens@async-nu.com [SMTP:DBOWENS@ASYNC-NU.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:53:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Daniel Bowens
Async-Nu Microsystems
7415 Ni River Landing
Fredericksburg, VA 22407

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cclbiomed@verizon.net [SMTP:CCLBIOMED@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:44:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Nina Lamba
CCL Biomedical, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:43 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chris@chrisdavis.net [SMTP:CHRIS@CHRISDAVIS.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:43:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Christine Davis

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:37 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: beech eagle@hotmail.com [SMTP:BEECHEAGLE@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:37:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Malcolm Beech
National Business League
6230 3rd Street, NW
Suite 12
Washington, DC 20011

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dlgood@tampabay.rr.com [SMTP:D1GOOD@TAMPABAY.RR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:08:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

David Goodman
International Logistics Inc
19803 Gulf Blvd.
Unit 301
Indian Shores, FL 33785

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: seaborn@sprynet.com [SMTP:SEABORN@SPRYNET.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:08:26 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jackie Amadio
Seaborn Health Care Inc.
7099 Greenbrier Dr.
Seminole, FL 33777

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 7:00 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: william.skinner@aediinc.com[SMTP:WILLIAM.SKINNER@AEDIINC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:59:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

William Skinner
A/E Data Integration, Inc.
933 N. Kenmore St, suite 318
Arlington, VA 22201

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tdpinc@bellsouth.net [SMTP:TDPINC@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:59:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Terry Powers
Tri City Van & Storage

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jeffelterman@earthlink.net [SMTP:JEFFELTERMAN@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:47:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Elterman
DigitalMix, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mau@aasc.net [SMTP:MAU@AASC.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:37:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Michael Au
AASC

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: juan@webjungle.com [SMTP: JUAN@WEBJUNGLE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 2:19:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Juan Santana
Jungle Communications, Inc.
1750 Montgomery Street, Ste. 1108
San Francisco, CA 94111

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pmgeiger@artemisindustries.com [SMTP:PMGEIGER@ARTEMISINDUSTRIES.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:47:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

PATRICIA GEIGER
ARTEMIS INDUSTRIES, INC.
2550 GILCHRIST ROAD
AKRON, OH 44305-4405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ajelterman@mindspring.com [SMTP:AJELTERMAN@MINDSPRING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:47:29 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

A.J. Elterman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: richb@kitcodedefense.com [SMTP:RICHB@KITCODEDEFENSE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:21:29 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Richard Ballantyne
Kitco Defense
1625 N 1100 W
Springville, UT 84663

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: richb@kitcodedefense.com [SMTP:RICHB@KITCODEDEFENSE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:21:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Richard Ballantyne
Kitco Defense
1625 N 1100 W
Springville, UT 84663

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: richb@kitcodedefense.com [SMTP:RICHB@KITCODEDEFENSE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:21:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Richard Ballantyne
Kitco Defense
1625 N 1100 W
Springville, UT 84663

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul.coleman@suntvl.com [SMTP:PAUL.COLEMAN@SUNTVL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 1:04:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Paul Coleman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 12:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: robertom@mwminc.com [SMTP:ROBERTOM@MWMINC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 12:29:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Robert Martinez
Martinez, Wright & Mendez
7700 Chevy Chase Drive
Bldg One, Ste 100
Austin, TX 78753

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: deanna@ntds.org [SMTP:DEANNA@NTDS.ORG]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:32:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

deanna nunez
Native Tele-Data Solutions
4443 N Flowing Wells
Tucson, AZ 85705

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: eunica@aol.com [SMTP:EUNICA@AOL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:29:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Shasta Gavin
HPC

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:22 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: duane@suntvl.com [SMTP:DUANE@SUNTVL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:22:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Duane Coleman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kay.george@erols.com [SMTP:KAY.GEORGE@EROLS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:39:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Kathryn George
K George Consulting
16625 Alden Av
Gaithersburg , MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:27 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rmillersales@applecapital.net [SMTP:RMILLERSALES@APPLECAPITAL.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:27:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Rodney Miller

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:19 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: chamber@rsg.org [SMTP:CHAMBER@RSG.ORG]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:19:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Loretta Podeszwa
Richmond/Spring Grove Chamber of Commerce P.O. Box 475 Richmond, IL 60071

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: larry@aptinstruments.com [SMTP:LARRY@APTINSTRUMENTS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:16:27 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Larry Van Bogaert
APT Instruments
PO Box 347
Farmersville, IL 62533

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: larryeason@yahoo.com [SMTP:LARRYEASON@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:14:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Larry E. Eason
JRL Executive Recruiters
2007 Fayette Street
NORTH KANSAS CITY, MO 64116-3507

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:12 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gwen@hrnow.biz [SMTP:GWEN@HRNOW.BIZ]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:12:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Gwen Thomas
HR Management Solutions Inc dba HR Now!
3475 Lenox Road
Suite 660
Atlanta, GA 30326

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Luis@hccet.org [SMTP:LUIS@HC CET.ORG]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:07:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Luis Velazquez
Hispanic Chamber of Commerce of East Tennessee
17 Market Square #201
Knoxville, TN 37902-1405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:06 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: zoroasteri@aol.com [SMTP:ZOROASTERI@AOL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:05:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Chris Erickson
Cartridge Care Inc
1314 Lebanon ST SE
Lacey , WA 98503

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Marsha@Yahoo.com [SMTP:MARSHA@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:52:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marsha Drane

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:30 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: shea_duce@yahoo.com [SMTP:SHEA_DUCE@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:29:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Brad Dunn
Lakeview Pt. Bed & Breakfast
166 Lakeview Pt.
Burgin, KY 40310

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nstevenson@stevensonsgroupinc.com [SMTP:NSTEVENSON@STEVENSONSGROUPINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:18:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Nancy Stevenson
Stevenson Group Contracting, Inc.
304 E. Diamond Avenue
Suite 100
Gaithersburg, MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nstevenson@stevensonsgroupinc.com [SMTP:NSTEVENSON@STEVENSONGROUPINC.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 8:18:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Nancy Stevenson
Stevenson Group Contracting, Inc.
304 E. Diamond Avenue
Suite 100
Gaithersburg, MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 6:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jim@vaughnbusiness.com[SMTP:JIM@VAUGHNBUSINESS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 6:59:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jim Vaughn
Vaughn Business Systems
115 Arrow Road
Suite 2A
Hilton Head Island, SC 29928

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kris.dasari@consultrcg.com [SMTP:KRIS.DASARI@CONSULTRCG.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:54:38 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kris Dasari
Ryan Consulting Group Inc
361 Ridge point Dr
Carmel, IN 46232

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 8:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: abjsinc@earthlink.net [SMTP:ABJSINC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 8:21:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bobby Tate
Andre\'s & Bobby\'s Janitorial Service Inc.
2666 Numilla Dr.
Oralndo, FL 32839

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: carllois@pa.net [SMTP:CARLLOIS@PA.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:42:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Carl Robinson
Robinson Lumber Co
3265 Shermans Valley rd
Loysville, PA 17047

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:41 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ztransom@psci.net [SMTP:ZTRANSOM@PSCI.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:40:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

TODDY RANSOM
ZEKE RANSOM EXCAVATING

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ritterdp@pacecomm.net [SMTP:RITTERDP@PACECOMM.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:30:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Daniel Ritter
Pace Communications
634c Squankum Yellowbrokk Roado
Farmingdale , NJ 07727

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ritterdp@pacecomm.net [SMTP:RITTERDP@PACECOMM.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:28:03 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Daniel Ritter
Pace Communications
Five Finch Road
Howell, NJ 07731

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 5:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nbuck@acindustrialservices.com[SMTP:NBUCK@ACINDUSTRIALSERVICES.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 5:18:37 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Nicholas Buck
A/C Industrial Services Corp
1111 Marauder St.
Chico, CA 95973

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 4:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sbuff@opticom.com[SMTP:SBUFF@OPTICOMM.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 4:04:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Stephen Buff
Opticom Corp
6827 Nancy Ridge Dr.
San diego, CA 92121

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: doug@opinionlab.com[SMTP:DOUG@OPINIONLAB.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:51:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Doug Van Leuven
OpinionLab, Inc.
513 Central Avenue
Suite 300
Highland Park, IL 60035

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:45 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jorelien@scimetrika.com [SMTP:JORELIEN@SCIMETRIKA.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:44:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jean Orelie
SciMetrika, LLC

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dbarbeau@armormetal.com[SMTP:DBARBEAU@ARMORMETAL.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:36:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dennis Barbeau
Armor Metal Group
1327 Iroquois Drive
Madison, IN 47250

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dmacrae@infrastor.com[SMTP:DMACRAE@INFRASTOR.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 1:35:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David MacRae
InfraStor Technologies Corp.
338 Wall Street
Princeton, NJ 08540-1518

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 12:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: david.denton@consultrcg.com[SMTP:DAVID.DENTON@CONSULTRCG.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 12:58:22 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David Denton
Ryan Group
361 Ridge Point Drive
Carmel, IN 46032

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 12:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: vinnie.rao@cosnultrcg.com[SMTP:VINNIE.RAO@COSNULTRCG.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 12:46:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Vinnie Rao
Ryan Consulting Group
361 Ridge Point Dr
Carmel, IN 46032

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 11:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: JAPPLEMAN@VERIZONMAIL.COM [SMTP:JAPPLEMAN@VERIZONMAIL.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 11:24:36 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

JOSH APPLEMAN
10124-5 AVALON WAY
FORT WAYNE, IN 46825

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 10:57 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@orionrepair.com[SMTP:ADMIN@ORIONREPAIR.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 10:56:54 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Paul Laird
Orion Repair
Po Box 4172
So Colby , WA 98384

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 10:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@ironkneeproductions.com [SMTP:INFO@IRONKNEEPRODUCTIONS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 10:39:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jenise Celestin
Ironknee Productions
P.O. Box 14265
Chicago, IL 60614

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: garyt@answermidwest.com[SMTP:GARYT@ANSWERMIDWEST.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:52:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Gary Tedrick
Answer Midwest, Inc.
307 Henry Street, Suite 207
Alton, IL 62002-6326

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:50 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sharp@sharpinformatix.com[SMTP:SHARP@SHARPINFORMATIX.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:50:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Sharp

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: n.irwin@kipco-online.com[SMTP:N.IRWIN@KIPCO-ONLINE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 9:41:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

N B Irwin
The KIP Company

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 8:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: margyl@lafondassociates.com[SMTP:MARGYL@LAFONDASSOCIATES.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 8:16:06 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Margy LaFond
LaFond & Associates
7388 Kindler Rd
Columbia, MD 21046

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 7:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bengineering@cablone.net [SMTP:BENGINEERING@CABLEONE.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 7:17:36 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Linda Butler
Butler Engineering & Land Surveying
224 South State
P.O. Box 473
Shelley, ID 83274

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cbbfcl@aol.com [SMTP:CBBFCL@AOL.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 6:47:38 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

connie brown
Hominy Tag Agency
P O Box 82
113 W Main
Hominy, OK 74035

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 5:13 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: robert@dial411.net [SMTP:ROBERT@DIAL411.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 06, 2006 5:12:31 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Hernandez
Dial411
10835 Centennial Drive
Alpharetta, GA 30022

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rds4848@adelphia.net [SMTP:RDS4848@ADELPHIA.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 11:08:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rey Sandoval
REY & REYNNA
3360 N. El Paso St Unit m
Colorado Springs, CO 80907

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: andre@atcdirect.com[SMTP:ANDRE@ATCDIRECT.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 10:52:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Andre Tyson
Advanced Technology Computers, Inc.
824 Grimes Rd
Bothell, WA 98012

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: harold.sullivan@sqv.com[SMTP:HAROLD.SULLIVAN@SQV.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:46:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Harold Sullivan
SQV Technologies, Inc.
8311 Old Exchange Drive
Colorado Springs, CO 80920-4817

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:41 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: craig.duncan@c3daero.com [SMTP:CRAIG.DUNCAN@C3DAERO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 6:41:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Craig Duncan
1209 Ward Avenue
West Chester, PA 19403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: thompson@aasc.net [SMTP:THOMPSON@AASC.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 05, 2006 5:50:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Thompson
Alameda Applied Sciences Corporation
626 Whitney Street
San Leandro, CA 94577

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:39 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: barbaras@sysmanagement.com [SMTP:BARBARAS@SYSMANAGEMENT.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:38:29 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Barbara Schipper

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: clayton@dennisfoodgroup.com [SMTP:CLAYTON@DENNISFOODGROUP.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:36:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Clayton Dennington
Dennis Food Group, LLC
P.O. Box 809
117 N. Freeman
Dermott, AR 71638

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: artists@rilearts.com [SMTP:ARTISTS@RILEARTS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:24:29 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joanne Rile
Joanne Rile Artists Management, Inc.
Noble Plaza, Suite 212
801 Old York Road
Jenktintown, PA 19046

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:24 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: artists@rilearts.com[SMTP:ARTISTS@RILEARTS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:24:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joanne Rile
Joanne Rile Artists Management, Inc.
Noble Plaza, Suite 212
801 Old York Road
Jenktintown, PA 19046

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cindy@smartsensorsystems.com [SMTP:CINDY@SMARTSENSORSYSTEMS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:17:05 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Cynthia Nemeth-Johannes
Smart Sensor Systems
720 S.W. 14th Street
Loveland, CO 80537-6349

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cburgher@allergytest.com [SMTP:CBURGH@ALLERGYTEST.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:07:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Charles Burgher
Commonwealth Medical Labs
4228 Aiken Drive
Warrenton, VA 20187

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: CALMEDVI@ATTGLOBAL.NET [SMTP:CALMEDVI@ATTGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:02:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jaime Calvo
CalMed
PO Box 26225
Christiansburg, VA 00824

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bthomassales@earthlink.net [SMTP:BTHOMASSALES@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:46:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Barry THOMAS
Thomas Sales Inc
124 South Washington St.
Greencastle, PA 17225

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:30 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: istpanamacity@aol.com [SMTP:ISTPANAMACITY@AOL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:29:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David Burris
Integrated Science & Technology, Inc.
228 Harrison Ave.
Suite 102
Panama City, FL 32401

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marclerner@lifeskillsinc.com[SMTP:MARCLERNER@LIFESKILLSINC.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:19:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marc Lerner
Life Skills Inc.
323 Marine St. #20
Santa Monica, CA 90405

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: execoffice@mdkw.com [SMTP:EXECOFFICE@MDKW.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:16:40 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kenneth wheaten
Merchandise Dist
4253 N. Kedzie Ave
Chicago, IL 60618

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bhart@pubspros.com[SMTP:BHART@PUBSPROS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 1:00:41 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Barbara B. Hart
Publications Professionals LLC
3702 Oak Hill Way
Fairfax, VA 22030

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: billward@manengineer.com[SMTP:BILLWARD@MANENGINEER.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:53:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bill Ward
MEA

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: maient@erols.com[SMTP:MAIENT@EROLS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:46:48 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Norem
MAI Enterprises, Inc.
P.O. Box 1194
Annandale, VA 22003

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: menendez@spacecoastis.com[SMTP:MENENDEZ@SPACECOASTIS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 12:13:22 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Al Menendez
Space Coast Information Systems
752 Nicklaus Dr.
Melbourne, FL 32940

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: achawks@claysprinters.com[SMTP:ACHAWKS@CLAYSPRINTERS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:48:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Alexander Hawks
Clay\'s Printer Repair Inc.
PO Box 2167
Lexington, KY 40588-2167

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: artserv@earthlink.net [SMTP:ARTSERV@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:42:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Susette Horstkamp
Art Services, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pieratti@kingtech.com[SMTP:PIERATTI@KINGTECH.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:42:06 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Alan Pieratti
King Technologies, Inc
3760 Sports Arena Blvd
Suite 12
San Diego, CA 92110

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: agrawal1@apstechnologies.com [SMTP:AGRAWAL1@APSTECHNOLOGIES.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:15:16 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Piyush Agrawal
APS Technologies, Inc

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@wudang.com[SMTP:INFO@WUDANG.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 11:08:29 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Theresa Morgan

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:29 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kathie.justice@crestviewchamber.com [SMTP:KATHIE.JUSTICE@CRESTVIEWCHAMBER.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:28:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kathie Justice

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: terica20066@yahoo.com [SMTP:TERICA20066@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:26:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

La\'Terica Clark
Crestview Area Chamber
502 S. Main St.
Crestview, FL 32536

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:12 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@tascsinc.com [SMTP:ADMIN@TASCSINC.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 10:12:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Andrew Dickerson
TASCS Inc.
5711 W 42nd Street Sout
WICHITA, KS 67215-2032

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 9:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: theartisgroup@yahoo.com[SMTP:THEARTISGROUP@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 9:08:21 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sherman Artis
The Artis Group
459 Allana Court
Stone Mountain, GA 30087

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 8:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: srosenberg@eapconsultants.com [SMTP:SROSENBERG@EAPCONSULTANTS.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 8:41:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sandy Rosenberg
EAP Consultants, Inc.
3901 Roswell Road
Suite 340
Marietta, GA 30062

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 8:34 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nstyler@agesinc.com [SMTP:NSTYLER@AGESINC.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 8:34:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Neil Styler

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Sunday, April 09, 2006 4:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mjohnson@ztech.com[SMTP:MJOHNSON@ZTECH.COM]
Sent: Sunday, April 09, 2006 3:59:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mike Johnson
ZTECH

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:37 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bgpress@verizon.net [SMTP:BGPRESS@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:36:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Badiyah Amir
Best Graphics Press, Inc.
506 W. 145th Street
New York, NY 10031

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:06 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dj@exhib-it.com [SMTP:DJ@EXHIB-IT.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:06:17 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Debbie Jo Heckes
EXHIB-IT!
3831-B Singer Blvd., NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:06 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dj@exhib-it.com[SMTP:DJ@EXHIB-IT.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 11:06:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Debbie Jo Heckes
EXHIB-IT!
3831-B Singer Blvd., NE
Albuquerque, NM 87109

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 9:31 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@quick-brain.com[SMTP:SALES@QUICK-BRAIN.COM]
Sent: Saturday, April 08, 2006 9:30:27 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Basil Clay
Quick-Brain, Inc.
8525 Maggie Avenue
Las Vegas, NV 89143-1325

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 2:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hnp1@valornet.com [SMTP:HNP1@VALORNET.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 2:47:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Vickie Denny
Hominy News-Progress
115 W. Main
PO Box 38
Hominy, OK 74035

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 2:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: admin@fluidclarity.com [SMTP:ADMIN@FLUIDCLARITY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:59:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marion Kessy
FluidClarity Ltd
126 N Oak Park Avenue
Oak Park, IL 60304

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lfortenberry@integratedscience.com [SMTP:LFORTENBERRY@INTEGRATEDSCIENCE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:08:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Laura Fortenberry

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pprout@proutgroup.com [SMTP:PPROUT@PROUTGROUP.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:00:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Patrick Prout
The Prout Group, Inc.
1111 Superior Avenue
Suite 1120
Cleveland, OH 44114-9511

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 1:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bivarsen@sioux.com[SMTP:BIVARSEN@SIOUX.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:59:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Brian Ivarsen
Sioux Steam Cleaner Corporation
One Sioux Plaza
Beresford , SD 57004

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:59 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ivar@sioux.com[SMTP:IVAR@SIOUX.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:58:43 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ivar Kaardal
Sioux Steam Cleaner Corporation
One Sioux Plaza
Beresford, SD 57004

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: irosen@hwcny.com[SMTP:IROSEN@HWCNY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:44:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ilene Rosen
Hamburger Woolen Co
23 Denton Avenue
New Hyde Park, NY 11040

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: irosen@hwcny.com [SMTP:IROSEN@HWCNY.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 12:44:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ilene Rosen
Hamburger Woolen Co
23 Denton Avenue
New Hyde Park, NY 11040

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 11:24 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ggoode@telcomsg.com[SMTP:GGOODE@TELCOMSG.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 11:24:18 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

George Goode
TSG, Inc.
5540 Centerview Drive
Suite 304
Raleigh, NC 27606

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 11:24 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hicorp00@bellsouth.net [SMTP:HICORP00@BELLSOUTH.NET]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 11:23:45 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

RHONDA STEPHENS

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 10:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pbeasley@usacatalyst.com[SMTP:PBEASLEY@USACATALYST.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 10:15:52 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Patricia Beasley

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tom.grant@lacodeworks.com [SMTP:TOM.GRANT@LACODEWORKS.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:23:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Tom Grant
Louisiana Codeworks, Inc
104 Marshall St
Minden, LA 71055

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hturner@branmore.com [SMTP:HTURNER@BRANMORE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:17:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

harry turner-el
branmore const inc
304 e. diamond ave
gaithersburg, MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hturner@branmore.com [SMTP:HTURNER@BRANMORE.COM]
Sent: Friday, April 07, 2006 9:17:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

harry turner-el
branmore const inc
304 e. diamond ave
gaithersburg, MD 20877

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: davek@ccsdrives.com [SMTP:DAVEK@CCSDRIVES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:55:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

dave kiedrowski
consolidated computer service
351 e cliff rd
burnsville, MN 55337

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dchaves@attglobal.net [SMTP:DCHAVES@ATTGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:53:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

damien Chaves
Design Collaborative
386 Maple Ave E
Suite 103
Vienna, VA 22180

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ddenson@eaglemktg.com [SMTP:DDENSON@EAGLEMKTG.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:49:16 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Paul B Fellencer, Sr
Eagle Marketing Group, Inc.
P.O. Box 869
Spring, TX 77383-0869

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ddenson@eaglemktg.com [SMTP:DDENSON@EAGLEMKTG.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:48:51 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dana Denson
Eagle Marketing Group, Inc.
P.O. Box 869
Spring, TX 77383-0869

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:47 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@asilservices.com [SMTP:INFO@ASILSERVICES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:47:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dennis Johnson

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: danny.barnes@veritableolutions.com[SMTP:DANNY.BARNES@VERITABLESOLUTIONS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:19:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Danny Barnes
Absolute Veritable Solutions (AVS)
122 Smallwood Village Center
Suite A
Waldorf, MD 20602-1843

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 7:21 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bobbie@inet99.net [SMTP:BOBBIE@INET99.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 7:20:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Roberta (Bobbie) Young
Young\'s Poultry, Inc.
P.O. Box 403
Catlettsburg, KY 41129

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:40 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: envsafetyfwb@earthlink.net [SMTP:ENVSAFETYFWB@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:40:12 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Juanita Sanks

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: commodity_rich@yahoo.com [SMTP:COMMODITY_RICH@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:37:38 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Barry Franklin

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:14 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: craig@rainvillecarlson.com[SMTP:CRAIG@RAINVILLECARLSON.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:13:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Craig Johnson
Rainville Carlson, Inc.
4640 Lyndale Avenue North
Minneapolis, MN 55412

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:28 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ben.campbell@sla-services.com [SMTP: BEN.CAMPBELL@SLA-SERVICES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:28:00 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bennett Campbell
Sea, Land, and Air Professional Services, LLC
102 Satilla Lane
Warner Robins, GA 31088-1670

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: broadwaylinen@coxinternet.com [SMTP: BROADWAYLINEN@COXINTERNET.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:19:41 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Pat Jones
Broadway Linen Service
548 N. Broadway
Greenville, MS 38701

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 5:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: conga_perk@hotmail.com [SMTP:CONGA_PERK@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 5:28:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Charles Perkins

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 5:16 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: airclean@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:AIRCLEAN@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 5:15:57 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Pamela Wilson
Unlimited Services Airclean, Inc
11856 Balboa Bl., #202
Granada Hills, CA 91344

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:39 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: scott@cornerstonemetrology.com [SMTP:SCOTT@CORNERSTONEMETROLOGY.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:39:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Scott Davis

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:32 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bcnorie@earthlink.net [SMTP:BCNORIE@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:31:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

robert norie
Pace Forest Works
PO Box 3235
Ashland, OR 97520

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:12 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: asantiago@arsari.com [SMTP:ASANTIAGO@ARSARI.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:11:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Arturo Santiago-Rivera
ARTURO SANTIAGO RIVERA d/b/a GRUPO ARSARI P.O. Box 1814 Sabana Seca, PR 00952-1814

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kacarlson@integratedscience.com [SMTP:KACARLSON@INTEGRATEDSCIENCE.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 4:06:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Keith Carlson
IST

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: theboltguys@msn.com [SMTP:THEBOLTGUYS@MSN.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:51:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Compton
American Fasteners Co., Inc.
9600 Waller Road East
Tacoma, WA 98446

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: charles.roberts@empcom.com [SMTP:CHARLES.ROBERTS@EMPCOM.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:50:04 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Charles Roberts
Empire Construction Servies, Inc.
4095 Jackson Street
Denver, CO 80216

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: constructioneer@aol.com[SMTP:CONSTRUCTIONEER@AOL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:37:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Linda Schwartz

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ahtnafinnesand@earthlink.net [SMTP:AHTNAFINNESAND@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:16:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Pamela Finnesand
Ahtna Development Corporation
406 W. Fireweed Lane
Suite 101
Anchorage, AK 99503

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: crivera@camrisinternational.com [SMTP:CRIVERA@CAMRISINTERNATIONAL.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 3:00:23 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Carlos Rivera
CAMRIS International
1801 Rockville Pike
Suite 410
Rockville, MD 20852

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: conor@advancedenergysvc.com [SMTP:CONOR@ADVANCEDENERGYSVC.COM]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:47:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Conor Coughlin
Advanced Energy Services, Inc
10924 Mukilteo Speedway, #110
Mukilteo, WA 98275

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jstrebel@international-data.net [SMTP:JSTREBEL@INTERNATIONAL-DATA.NET]
Sent: Monday, April 10, 2006 2:46:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jessy Strebel

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jack.dunlap@verizon.net [SMTP:JACK.DUNLAP@VERIZON.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:27:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

ack Dunlap
Dunlap & Associates
4201 Wilson Blvd #110-308
Arlington, VA 22203

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:18 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jbogolino@countertrade.com [SMTP:JBOGLINO@COUNTERTRADE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:17:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joe Boglino
CounterTrade Products, Inc.
7585 W. 66th Avenue
Arvada, CO 80003

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dgoulden@yorkind.com[SMTP:DGOULDEN@YORKIND.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:07:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

dennis goulden
york industries inc.
706 willow springs lane
york, PA 17402

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dgoulden@yorkind.com [SMTP: DGOULDEN@YORKIND.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:07:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

dennis goulden
york industries inc.
706 willow springs lane
york, PA 17402

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dgoulden@yorkind.com [SMTP: DGOULDEN@YORKIND.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:07:33 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

dennis goulden
york industries inc.
706 willow springs lane
york, PA 17402

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jerryholden@blomand.net [SMTP:JERRYHOLDEN@BLOMAND.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:06:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jerry Holden
Holden Innoventions
1990 Ike Adcock Rd
Smithville, TN 37166

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Jim@nestlerodeengineering.us [SMTP:JIM@NESTLERODEENGINEERING.US]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:00:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jim Nestlerode
Nestlerode Engineering
POBox 5126
West Hills, CA 91302-5126

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@themetisgroup.com [SMTP:INFO@THEMETISGROUP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:57:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Libby Kavoulakis

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:57 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jhasson@norseman.com [SMTP:JHASSON@NORSEMAN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:56:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joshua Hasson
Norseman, Inc.
8172 Lark Brown Rd
Ste. 101
Elkridge, MD 21075

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jodelius@norseman.com [SMTP:JODELIUS@NORSEMAN.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:52:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Odelius
Norseman Inc
8172 lark Brown Rd
Elkridge, MD 21075

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lynnm@loretel.net [SMTP:LYNNM@LORETEL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:46:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Lynn Dauner

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:15 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pnavarro@gulfsouth-contractors.com [SMTP:PNAVARRO@GULFSOUTH-CONTRACTORS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:15:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Franciso Navarro
Gulf South Contractors
702 N Anchor Street
Ft Walton Beach, FL 32548

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:13 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jgonzalez@gulfsouth-contractors.com[SMTP:JGONZALEZ@GULFSOUTH-CONTRACTORS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:13:11 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joe Gonzalez
Gulf South Contractors
702 n Anchor Street
Ft Walton Beach, FL 32548

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:12 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rmuniz@gulfsouth-contractors.com [SMTP:RMUNIZ@GULFSOUTH-CONTRACTORS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:11:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

rosa muniz
Gulf South Contractors
702 N Anchor Street
Ft Walton Beach, FL 32548

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marnold@tfc-inc.com [SMTP:MARNOLD@TFC-INC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:09:50 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michael Arnold
First Choice Consultants
521 South Main
Findlay, OH 45840

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:02 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jeanne@servercentric.com [SMTP:JEANNE@SERVERCENTRIC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 1:02:03 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Janice Shotton
Server Centric Consulting
11939 Manchester Rd., #110
St. Louis, MO 63131

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 12:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: COMBYTE@COMBYTEUSA.COM[SMTP:COMBYTE@COMBYTEUSA.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 12:43:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Daniel Ebert
ComByte USA
5520 Hempstead-#B
Springfield, VA 22151

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 12:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dzarfoss@debsglass.com [SMTP:DZARFOSS@DEBSGLASS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 12:21:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Debra Zarfoss

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hcloitre@ashlandelectric.com[SMTP:HCLOITRE@ASHLANDELECTRIC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:26:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Heather Cloitre
Ashland Electric Products, Inc.
10 Industrial Way
Rochester, NH 03867-4296

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: teresaroberts@lpsinc.net [SMTP:TERESAROBERTS@LPSINC.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:18:09 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Teresa Roberts
Leading Innovative Products & Solutions, Inc.
2 Shaker Road
Suite D210
Shirley, MA 01464

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:13 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: duane@rinconconsultants.com [SMTP:DUANE@RINCONCONSULTANTS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:12:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Duane Vander Pluym
Rincon Consultants, Inc.
790 E. Santa Clara
Ventura, CA 93001

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: carter_smith@cnphealthcare.com[SMTP:CARTER_SMITH@CNPHEALTHCARE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:09:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Carter Smith
C&P Healthcare Inc.
106 Ferry Street
Fall River, MA 02722

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nancysimmons@aerogroup.com [SMTP:NANCYSIMMONS@AEROGROUP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:08:31 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Nancy Simmons
Aero Industries of the Space Coast

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:04 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dgray@lawhon-assoc.com [SMTP:DGRAY@LAWHON-ASSOC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:04:22 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Deborah Gray
Lawhon & Associates, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 11:00 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: srabah@allphaseenv.com[SMTP:SRABAH@ALLPHASEENV.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:59:52 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sal Rabah
All Phase Environmental, Inc.
215 N Federal Hwy
Suite 6A
Boca Raton, FL 33432

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nabila@allphaseenv.com [SMTP:NABILA@ALLPHASEENV.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:59:16 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Nabila Martins
All Phase Services, Inc.
215 N Federal Hwy
Suite 6A
Boca Raton, FL 33432

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: olga@allphaseenv.com[SMTP:OLGA@ALLPHASEENV.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:58:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Olga Rabah
All Phase Services, Inc.
215 N Federal Hwy
Suite 6A
Boca Raton, FL 33432

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:58 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cmartins@allphaseenv.com [SMTP:CMARTINS@ALLPHASEENV.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:58:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Carlos Martins
All Phase Services, Inc.
215 N Federal Hwy
Suite 6A
Boca Raton, FL 33432

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:14 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rob.w@cartridgesavers.com[SMTP:ROB.W@CARTRIDGESAVERS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:14:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Wangard
Cartridge Savers, Inc.
6613 Seybold Road
Ste F
Madison, WI 53719

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: afreedman@socal.rr.com [SMTP:AFREEDMAN@SOCAL.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:08:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Alan Freedman
A.L. Freedman Promotional Advertising
19350 Saticoy Street #104
Reseda, CA 91335

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:06 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dps@grand-canyon.az.us [SMTP:DPS@GRAND-CANYON.AZ.US]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:06:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Daniel Tobin
Dante Professional Svcs.
1495 Ponderosa St.
PO Box 45
Grand Canyon, AZ 86023-0045

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:04 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: annt@transource.com [SMTP:ANNT@TRANSOURCE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 10:03:30 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

ANN TING
TRANSOURCE
10850 N. 24TH AVE
STE. 102
PHOENIX, AZ 85029

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: aisha@maroonbiotech.com[SMTP:AISHA@MAROONBIOTECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:53:26 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Aisha Chaudhri

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: faa-llc@cfl.rr.com[SMTP:FAA-LLC@CFL.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:40:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dennis Foldesi
FAA, LLC
1705 Vega Ave
Merritt Island, FL 32953

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:33 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: suzanne@brc-research.com [SMTP:SUZANNE@BRC-RESEARCH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:32:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Suzanne de Berge
Behavior Research Center
P.O. Box 13178
Phoenix, AZ 85002-3178

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:27 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: djh@hodgsoncorp.com[SMTP:DJH@HODGSONCORP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:27:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David Hodgson
Hodgson Corporation
15770 N. Roadrunner Ridge Lane
Tucson, AZ 85739-9004

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:04 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dick@cmisales.com[SMTP:DICK@CMISALES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:03:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dick Dean

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jwilliams@aerogroup.com [SMTP:JWILLIAMS@AEROGROUP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:58:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

JEFFREY WILLIAMS

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: salesinfo@mikancorp.com[SMTP:SALESINFO@MIKANCORP.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:56:00 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Margaret Stevens
Mikan Corporation

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jgarner@norseman.com [SMTP:JGARNER@NORSEMAN.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:54:35 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Josh Garner

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jj@kamico.com[SMTP:JJ@KAMICO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:52:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Joseph J Wechsler
KAMICO Instructional Media, Inc.
4413 Spicewood Springs Road
Austin, TX 78759

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:53 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: elvirasmith16@hotmail.com[SMTP:ELVIRASMITH16@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:52:37 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Elvira Smith
C&P Healthcare Inc
106 Ferry St
Fall River, MA 02720

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jake@directics.com[SMTP:JAKE@DIRECTICS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:48:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jacob Respondek
Direct Components, Inc.
4828 W. Gandy Blvd
Tampa, FL 33611

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jake@directics.com[SMTP:JAKE@DIRECTICS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:48:43 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jacob Respondek
Direct Components, Inc.
4828 W. Gandy Blvd
Tampa, FL 33611

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Jerry.ColorTec@earthlink.net [SMTP:JERRY.COLORTEC@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:38:35 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jerry Summers
ColorTec Digital, Inc.
1813 J & C Blvd.
Naples, FL 34109

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:01 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: john-elwood@stny.rr.com [SMTP:JOHN-ELWOOD@STNY.RR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:01:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Haugen
P.O.Box 753
Marathon, NY 13803

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:24 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ke4ljd@yahoo.com [SMTP:KE4LJD@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:23:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Clint Rowlett
Alaska Maintenance & Repair
P.O.Box 55627
North Pole, AK 99705

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dloffreda@plateauequipment.com [SMTP:DLOFFREDA@PLATEAUEQUIPMENT.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 9:47:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Daniele Loffreda
Plateau Equipment Supply
2331 West Hampden Avenue
Unit 135
Sheridan, CO 80129

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mahiett@mindspring.com[SMTP:MAHIETT@MINDSPRING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 8:41:33 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mary Ann Hiett
Seals & Stamps Unlimited
1236 Powers Fy Commons
Marietta, GA 30067

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 7:34 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cheetham@avencia.com [SMTP:CHEETHAM@AVENCIA.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 7:33:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Cheetham
Avencia Incorporated
340 N 12th St
Suite 402B
Philadelphia, PA 19107

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:31 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ect@ect4u.com [SMTP:ECT@ECT4U.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:30:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Yury Erman
Engineering Consulting Team
4933 Calle Robleda
Agoura Hills, CA 91301

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 6:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: SStewart@arcticcontrols.com [SMTP:SSTEWART@ARCTICCONTROLS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:59:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Scott Stewart
Arctic Controls, Inc.
1120 East 5th Avenue
Anchorage, AK 99501-2759

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: khoy@summit-group.com [SMTP:KHOY@SUMMIT-GROUP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:49:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kirk Hoy
Summit Engineering Group
102 Paul Mellon Court
Suite 1
Waldorf, MD 20602

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:39 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jpierce@jpinnovations.com[SMTP:JPIERCE@JPINNOVATIONS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:38:51 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Pierce
JP Innovations, LLC
101 East Main St.
Suite 207
Monroe, WA 98272

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:15 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@campbellcab.com [SMTP:INFO@CAMPBELLCAB.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:14:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jim Campbell
Campbell Int'l. Inc.
120 Kent Ave
Wauconda, IL 60084

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ka4etn@tampabay.rr.com [SMTP:KA4ETN@TAMPABAY.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:05:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Anderson
Anderson Consulting
2717 Seville Blvd
#1-101
Clearwater, FL 33764

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lynnvf@vfginc.com[SMTP:LYNNVF@VFGINC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 5:00:38 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Lynn Van Fleit
The Van Fleit Group, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mario.a.cervantes@c3iconsult.com [SMTP:MARIO.A.CERVANTES@C3ICONSULT.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:53:49 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mario Cervantes
C3I
7828 Corral Dr.
El Paso, TX 79915

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Intacap@woh.rr.com [SMTP:INTACAP@WOH.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:43:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Boone
Intacap
207 E. Main St.
Union City, OH 45390

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:37 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lgm1@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:LGM1@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:37:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Les Miklosy
Software to Spec
706 Colorado Blvd
Palo Alto, CA 94303

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:33 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: language@horizontranslating.com [SMTP:LANGUAGE@HORIZONTRANSLATING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:33:03 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Maria Roper
Horizon Translating & Interpreting, LLC

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:32 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sreid@avantire.net [SMTP:SREID@AVANTIRE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 4:31:56 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

sheila reid
Avanti Real Estate
3421 14th st., N.W.
washington, DC 20010

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:58 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: penguini@spinn.net [SMTP:PENGUINI@SPINN.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:57:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mary Christophersen
4374-R Alexander Blvd. NE
Albuquerque, NM 87107

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:54 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kzagrav@xebecdata.com [SMTP:KZAGRAY@XEBECDATA.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:54:18 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kristin Zagray
Xebec Data Corp.
10730 E. Bethany Dr. #305
Aurora, CO 80014

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:53 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: tony@rgb.com [SMTP:TONY@RGB.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:53:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Anthony Spica
RGB Spectrum
40 Sonia St
oakland , CA 94618

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:48 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kaneintl@gte.net [SMTP:KANEINTL@GTE.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:48:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Kane
Kane International Corp.
2825 Ualena Street
HONOLULU, HI 96819

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:44 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kkogod@comcast.net [SMTP:KKOGOD@COMCAST.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:44:19 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kanu Kogod
Bridges in Organizations, Inc

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Irene@irenes-teas.com [SMTP:IRENE@IRENES-TEAS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:27:27 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Irene Nielsen
Irene\'s Teas, etc
124 So Main Street
Lindsborg, KS 67456

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:21 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kdlong@voice-ergonomics.com[SMTP:KDLONG@VOICE-ERGONOMICS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:21:00 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Karen Long
Voice Regonomics®
704 South Elam Ave
Greensboro, NC 27403

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:14 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paquino@triersoftware.com [SMTP: PAQUINO@TRIERSOFTWARE.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:13:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Patrick Aquino
Trier Software Inc
35440 Thomas RD
Agua Dulce, CA 91390

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: csulli@att.net [SMTP:CSULLI@ATT.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 3:03:56 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Chris Sullivan

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:56 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Boritex@swbell.net [SMTP:BORITEX@SWBELL.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:56:06 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jose Ramos
Boritex Inc.
PO Box 171088
Arlington, TX 76003-1088

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:56 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: markm@ccsdrives.com [SMTP:MARKM@CCSDRIVES.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:55:45 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Mosvick

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:42 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jsklar@spexus.com[SMTP:JSKLAR@SPEXUS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 11, 2006 2:41:46 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Sklar

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:22 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mlewis@advanetrix.com[SMTP:MLEWIS@ADVANETRIX.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:22:01 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mike Lewis

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: randyw@dswebnet.com [SMTP:RANDYW@DSWEBNET.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:05:26 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Randall Waldie
American Grass Seed Producers
PO Box 268
32345 McLagan Rd
Tangent, OR 97389-0268

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:52 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lcphillips@ibi-usa.com[SMTP:LCPHILLIPS@IBI-USA.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:52:15 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Lucie Phillips
IBI--Int\1 Business Initiatives
2200 Clarendon Blvd., suite 1200
Arlington, VA 22201

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mmartinez@networxinc.com[SMTP:MMARTINEZ@NETWORXINC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:18:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Matthew Martinez

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pdevadas@sei2003.com [SMTP:PDEVADAS@SEI2003.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:10:05 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Prachee Devadas
Synergy Enterprises Inc.
8757 Georgia Avenue
Suite 450
Silve, MD 20854

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:05 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: infiniteblue8@hotmail.com [SMTP:INFINITEBLUE8@HOTMAIL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 3:05:18 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Paul Widerman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:59 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: paul.osenar@protonex.com [SMTP:PAUL.OSENAR@PROTONEX.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:58:53 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Paul Osenar

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nvbill@ptd.net [SMTP:NVBILL@PTD.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:42:57 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

William Grube

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:36 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: nancy@jumpshack.com [SMTP:NANCY@JUMPSHACK.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:36:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

NANCY LARIVIERE
PARACHUTE LABS, INC
1665 LEXINGTON AVE
SUITE #106
DE LAND, FL 32724

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:29 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@hendersontx.com [SMTP:INFO@HENDERSONTX.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:28:52 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mary Jackson
Henderson Area Chamber of Commerce
201 N. Main
Henderson, TX 75652

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: louann.ohl@qckslvr.com [SMTP:LOUANN.OHL@QCKSLVR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:07:17 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

LouAnn Ohl
QuickSilver Analytics

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:07 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kim.oyster@qckslvr.com [SMTP:KIM.OYLER@QCKSLVR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:06:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kim Oyster
QuickSilver Analytics

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rod.hudson@qckslvr.com [SMTP:ROD.HUDSON@QCKSLVR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:05:59 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rod Hudson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ptech@pipeline.com [SMTP:PTTECH@PIPELINE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 2:04:04 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Peggy Tech
LSA, Inc.

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 1:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mturpyn@ncst.com [SMTP:MTURPYN@NCST.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 1:46:32 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mitch Turpyn
NCS Technologies

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 12:04 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bobc941@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:BOBC941@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 12:04:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bob Culpepper
AstroBotix, Inc.
910 Layfair Place
Friendswood, TX 77546

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hbjorkman@lambhansonlamb.com [SMTP:HBJORKMAN@LAMBHANSONLAMB.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:55:05 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Heather Bjorkman
Lamb Hanson Lamb Appraisal Associates, Inc.
650 South Orcas Street
Suite 114
Seattle, WA 98108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mthorsell@smtarchitects.com[SMTP:MTHORSELL@SMTARCHITECTS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:38:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michelle Thorsell
SMT Architects, P.C.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mthorsell@smtarchitects.com[SMTP:MTHORSELL@SMTARCHITECTS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:38:07 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michelle Thorsell
SMT Architects, P.C.

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: slamb@lambhansonlamb.com [SMTP:SLAMB@LAMBHANSONLAMB.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:37:50 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sibyl Lamb
Lamb Hanson Lamb Appraisal Assoc., Inc.
650 S. Orcas Street, Suite 114
Seattle, WA 98108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mnabers@spartnerships.com [SMTP:MNABERS@SPARTNERSHIPS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:25:05 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mary Nabers

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:22 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ron@perptech.com [SMTP:RON@PERPTECH.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:22:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ronald Plew
Perpetual Technologies, Inc.
3500 Depauw Blvd.
Suite 2110
Indianapolis, IN 46268

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 11:00 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ginseaborn@sprynet.com[SMTP:GINSEABORN@SPRYNET.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:59:53 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ginger Martinez

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:57 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: k_hayashida@yahoo.com [SMTP:K_HAYASHIDA@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:56:38 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ken Hayashida
KAI Hawaii Inc.
31 North Pauahi Street, 2nd Floor
Honolulu, HI 96817

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mike.holmes@gh-systems.us [SMTP:MIKE.HOLMES@GH-SYSTEMS.US]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:49:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michael Holmes
GH Systems, Inc.
655 Discovery Drive Suite 302
Huntsville, AL 35806

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mfagerlin@ssi-main.com[SMTP:MFAGERLIN@SSI-MAIN.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:17:02 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Fagerlin
Satellite Services, Inc.
309 So. Front St.
Marquette,, MI 49855

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mwilson@spaceklabs.com [SMTP:MWILSON@SPACEKLABS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:07:27 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michael Wilson
Spacek Labs, Inc.
212 East Gutierrez St
Santa Barbara, CA 93101

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:06 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jjones@alphaservicesnv.com[SMTP:JJONES@ALPHASERVICESNV.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:06:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jeanne Jones
ALPHA Services
P.O. Box 81752
Las Vegas, NV 89180-1752

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:03 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rhidalgo@hidalgoindustrial.com [SMTP:RHIDALGO@HIDALGOINDUSTRIAL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:03:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Randee Kelley
Hidalgo Industrial

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:01 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: krisma@chartert.net [SMTP:KRISMA@CHARTERT.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 10:01:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bruce Volk
Krisma Audio/Video
199 W. Interlaken Rd
Fairmont, MN 56031

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:57 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: treva.trinkner@williams-pyro.com [SMTP:TREVA.TRINKNER@WILLIAMS-PYRO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:56:32 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Treva Trinkner
Williams Pyro, Inc

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:50 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: medstaff@healthplanning.com [SMTP: MEDSTAFF@HEALTHPLANNING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:49:33 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Dove Pierce

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Mikeevans777@gmail.com [SMTP:MIKEEVANS777@GMAIL.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:38:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michael Evans
Aerowing, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jim@seabornhc.com [SMTP:JIM@SEABORNHC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:25:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jim Crouch
Seaborn Health Care, Inc.
P.O. Box 41158
St. Petersburg, FL 33743

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:24 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: janicec@flagsource.com [SMTP:JANICEC@FLAGSOURCE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:24:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Janice Christiansen

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:20 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mgross@oakgrovetech.com[SMTP:MGROSS@OAKGROVETECH.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:19:51 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Gross
Oak Grove Tech
7200 Stonehenge Drive
Suite 306
raleigh, NC 27613

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:18 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mimsco@mksi.com [SMTP:MIMSC@MKSI.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 9:18:23 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Creflo MIMS
MKS, Inc.
4829 Woodward Ave.
Suite 201
Detroit, MI 48201

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:46 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: matjack@sprynet.com [SMTP:MATJACK@SPRYNET.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:46:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Sweezy Jr
Matjack/ Indianapolis Industrial Products Inc.
1441 Sadlier Cir. W. Dr.
Indianapolis, IN 46239

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:33 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mbishoff@authsec.com [SMTP:MBISHOFF@AUTHSEC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:33:16 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marion Bishoff

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kgs@ksengineering.com[SMTP:KGS@KSENGINEERING.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:14:39 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ken Stroffolino

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:14 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: joannboggs@polypakusa.com [SMTP:JOANNBOGGS@POLYPAKUSA.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:14:11 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jo Ann Boggs
Poly-Pak & Ship, Inc.
2021 Illini Avenue
Vandalia, IL 62471

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:51 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marekjp@yahoo.com [SMTP:MAREKJP@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:51:14 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marek Podgorny
CollabWorx
235 Harrison St.
Ste. 303
Syracuse, NY 13202

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ejones@eja-inc.com[SMTP:EJONES@EJA-INC.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:37:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Elmer Jones
EJA Partners LLC
4811 Harding Blvd
Baton Rouge, LA 70811

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:25 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: julia@kleenslate.com [SMTP:JULIA@KLEENSLATE.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:25:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Julia Rhodes

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: wats2@hvc.rr.com [SMTP:WATS2@HVC.RR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:41:29 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jim Watts
Wats International Inc.
200 Manchester Road
Poughkeepsie , NY 12603

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kelley.caudle@do-corp.com[SMTP:KELLEY.CAUDLE@DO-CORP.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:41:18 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kelley Caudle
620 Discovery Dr.
Huntsville, AL 35806

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:17 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dwalls@bsedunbar.com [SMTP:DWALLS@BSEDUNBAR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:17:01 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David Walls
Buchanan Sound & Electronics
420 16th St.
Dunbar, WV 25064

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:16 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dwalls@bsedunbar.com [SMTP:DWALLS@BSEDUNBAR.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:15:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

David Walls
Buchanan Sound & Electronics
420 16th St.
Dunbar, WV 25064

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: lsullivan@ses.net [SMTP:LSULLIVAN@SES.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:09:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Larry Sullivan

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dmcneill@agdavis.com [SMTP:DMCNEILL@AGDAVIS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:58:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Don McNeill

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: LDINEEN@BLUEBELLCARTS.COM[SMTP:LDINEEN@BLUEBELLCARTS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:55:44 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Lawrence Dineen

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:55 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: larry.snyder@sensorcominc.com [SMTP:LARRY.SNYDER@SENSORCOMINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:55:24 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Larry Snyder

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:50 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: asbl@ifds.com[SMTP:ASBL@IFDS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:49:48 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Richard Wells

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:45 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: getinfo@optemax.com [SMTP:GETINFO@OPTEMAX.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:45:15 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Walter Collier
Optemax
930 Henryton Road
Marriottsville, MD 21104

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: spi@processtransition.com [SMTP:SPI@PROCESSTRANSITION.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:42:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Detta dymond
Process Transition International, Inc.
PO Box 1988
Annapolis, MD 21401

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: spi@processtransition.com[SMTP:SPI@PROCESSTRANSITION.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:42:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Detta dymond
Process Transition International, Inc.
PO Box 1988
Annapolis, MD 21401

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sam@subsystem.com [SMTP:SAM@SUBSYSTEM.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:14:36 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Sam Malhotra
Subsystem Technologies, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:10 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: donsunnychoe@yahoo.com [SMTP:DONSUNNYCHOE@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:09:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Don Choe
Conexus LLC
1450 Frazee Rd Suite 603
San Diego, CA 92108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:10 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gene@gra3.com[SMTP:GENE@GRA3.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:09:33 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Gene Rouleau
GRA, Inc.
1501 N Grand, Ste D
Box 202
Gainesville, TX 76240

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:05 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@value-enviro.com [SMTP:INFO@VALUE-ENVIRO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:05:19 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

mel hamsher
13663 65th st`
largo, FL 33771

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:05 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@value-enviro.com [SMTP:INFO@VALUE-ENVIRO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 10:05:13 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

mel hamsher
13663 65th st`
largo, FL 33771

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:54 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ekane@gcmicro.com [SMTP:EKANE@GCMICRO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:53:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ed Kane

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:49 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: saiyed@compuserve.com [SMTP:SAIYED@COMPUSERVE.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:49:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Johnny Saiyed
Saiyed Engineering Group, P.S., Inc.
11009 15th Ave NE
Seattle, WA 98125

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:42 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: raule@lslink.com[SMTP:RAULE@LSLINK.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:41:55 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Raul Espinosa
FitNet
669 Treehouse Circle
St. Augustine, FL 32095

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:39 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rslovan@yahoo.com [SMTP:RSLOVAN@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:38:59 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Ronald Slovan
Slovan Assoc., Inc.
8060 E. Ft Lowell Road
Tucson, AZ 85750

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:34 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mkimball@lambhansonlamb.com [SMTP:MKIMBALL@LAMBHANSONLAMB.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:34:04 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marsha Kimball
Lamb Hanson Lamb Appraisal Assoc., Inc.
650 S Orcas St, Ste 114
Seattle, WA 98108

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:24 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@picsi.com[SMTP:SALES@PICS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:24:24 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Anita Schultz
Perfect Image Cartridge Solutions, Inc.
901 Kingston Drive
Cherry Hill, NJ 08034

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:15 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: sales@ardem.net [SMTP:SALES@ARDEM.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 9:14:53 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

arun Malhotra
ARDEM Incorporated
120 Stryker Lane
#402
Hillsborough, NJ 08844

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:38 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rrrippin@rtr-tech.com [SMTP:RRRIPPIN@RTR-TECH.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:37:33 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Randy Rippin
RTR Technologies, LLC
1201 Technology Dr
Aberdeen, MD 21234

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:33 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pmitchell@columbiadb.com[SMTP:PMITCHELL@COLUMBIADB.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:33:03 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Bruce Mitchell
Columbia Enterprises, Inc
1018 7th street se
Washington, DC 20003

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:27 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: PMC@progressiveziehm.com[SMTP:PMC@PROGRESSIVEZIEHM.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 8:26:51 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jean Wilson
Progressive Medical Corp

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:44 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: patrolbike@earthlink.net [SMTP:PATROLBIKE@EARTHLINK.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:44:20 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mark Eumurian
Patrol Bike Systems Inc
P O Box 9308
St Paul, MN 55109-0308

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:11 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: RJMiles@funkandcompany.com [SMTP:RJMILES@FUNKANDCOMPANY.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:10:42 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Miles
Funk and Company
2000 Myrtle
El Paso, TX 79901

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:09 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: alexa@funkandcompany.com [SMTP:ALEXA@FUNKANDCOMPANY.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:09:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Alex Aguirre
Funk and Company
2000 Myrtle
El Paso, TX 79901

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:08 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marionm@funkandcompany.com [SMTP:MARIONM@FUNKANDCOMPANY.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 7:07:28 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Marion Miles
Funk and Company
2000 Myrtle
El Paso, TX 79901

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:59 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: jbest@eastex.net [SMTP:JBEST@EASTEX.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:58:47 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Jon Best
Jon Best
401 South Main
Henderson, TX 75654

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:43 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: charles@raderfh.com[SMTP:CHARLES@RADERFH.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:43:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Charles Rader
Charles Rader Funeral Home

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rizwan@cenmed.com [SMTP:RIZWAN@CENMED.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:40:31 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rizwan Chaudhry
Cenmed Enterprises
2 Claire Rd
East Brunswick, NJ 08816

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:26 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rebecca@iGoErgo.com [SMTP:REBECCA@IGOERGO.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:26:08 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Boenigk
Neutral Posture, Inc.
3904 N. Texas Ave.
Bryan, TX 77803

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:23 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rfoster@sybionics.net [SMTP:RFOSTER@SYMBIONICS.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 6:22:41 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Robert Foster
Symbionics, Inc.
3305 Freezeland Road
Linden, VA 22642

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:50 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rfisher@leioptics.com [SMTP:RFISHER@LEIOPTICS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:49:53 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rex Fisher
Lightwave Enterprises Inc

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cjacobs@pqsiinc.com [SMTP:CJACOBS@PQSIINC.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:47:58 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Chet A Jacobs
Product Quality Solutions & Innovations, Inc.
30680 Montpelier
Suite 300
Madison Heights, MI 48071

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:41 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pmoran7@vol.com [SMTP:PMORAN7@VOL.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 5:40:55 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Patrick Moran

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:48 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Pmehta@psiint.com[SMTP:PMEHTA@PSIINT.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:47:56 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Prakash Mehta
PSI International, Inc.
10306 eaton Place
#400
Fairfax, VA 22030

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:32 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: woodyhatfield@cox.net [SMTP:WOODYHATFIELD@COX.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:32:10 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

woody hatfield
MasterWork Marketing
593 colonial dr.
henderson, TX 75652

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:21 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: juniper@erols.com [SMTP:JUNIPER@EROLS.COM]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:21:05 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Kevin Howe
Juniper Construction Co.
4932-C Eisenhower Ave.
Alexandria , VA 22304

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:21 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ploger@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:PLOGER@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Thursday, April 13, 2006 4:20:46 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

John Ploger
Ploger Business Inc
PO Box 321
Kinsley, KS 67547

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:40 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: onyxdist@sbcglobal.net [SMTP:ONYXDIST@SBCGLOBAL.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:39:38 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Freeda Muldoon
Onyx Distribution & Services
2417 S. Wabash Avenue
P. O. Box 16801
Chicago, IL 60616

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pmacdonagh@tkdg.com [SMTP:PMACDONAGH@TKDG.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:09:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Peter MacDonagh
The Kestrel Design Group, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rhopkins@biancohopkins.com [SMTP:RHOPKINS@BIANCOHOPKINS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 8:05:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rosalie Hopkins
Bianco Hopkins
6025 The Corners Pkwy.
Norcross, GA 30092

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: JEGERMAN10@AMERITECH.NET[SMTP:JEGERMAN10@AMERITECH.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:01:21 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

JUANTIA GERMAN
REACH UNLIMITED INC
342 N LAGRANGE ROAD
SUITE 301
FRANKFORT, IL 60423

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 7:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: research@omniphoto.com [SMTP:RESEARCH@OMNIPHOTO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:59:34 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Mary Fran Loftus

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: pcollier@uas-securityproducts.com[SMTP:PCOLLIER@UAS-SECURITYPRODUCTS.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:19:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Patrick Collier
UAS Security Products Corp
12 Newton Rd.
P.O. Box 73
Aberdeen, MD 21001-0073

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:15 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rdr2go@yahoo.com [SMTP:RDR2GO@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 6:15:10 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Reed Miller
Miller Moving & Storage
305 Dela Vina Ave
Monterey, CA 93940

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:46 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: owner@dryzdesign.com [SMTP:OWNER@DRYZDESIGN.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:46:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Raymond Dryz
Dryz and Associates
1809 NW Euclid Ave
Lawton, OK 73507

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:26 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mrw2@shreve.net [SMTP:MRW2@SHREVE.NET]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 5:26:07 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Michael Wilcots
MRW Consulting

Beckville, TX 75631

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:51 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rick@cdsg.com [SMTP:RICK@CDSG.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:50:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Richard Goldman

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:38 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rick@carlilevaluation.com[SMTP:RICK@CARLILEVALUATION.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:38:02 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rick Carlile

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rick@hrs-s.com[SMTP:RICK@HRS-S.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:27:44 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rick Habegger
HR Strategies & Solutions, Inc.
4109 Rollsbys Ct.
Apex, NC 27539

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:28 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rick@hrs-s.com [SMTP:RICK@HRS-S.COM]
Sent: Wednesday, April 12, 2006 4:27:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPR

It is my understanding that you are reviewing areas in the GSAR that may "unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities." In this matter, I submit the following comment:

I am very concerned any changes GSA might propose will fail to address the biggest problem affecting small businesses today. According to the SBA Inspector General:

"One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards."
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

There have been seven Federal investigations that have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs which allowed billions of dollars in awards to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the major problems that allow this to happen.

I would be very happy to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Before adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR. Although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's website to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

Sincerely,

Rick Habegger
HR Strategies & Solutions, Inc.
4109 Rollsbey Ct.
Apex, NC 27539

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:20 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: cgary@adelphitech.com [SMTP:CGARY@ADELPHITECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:20:20 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Charles Gary
981-B Industrial Road
San Carlos, CA 94070

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: marsha@qbct.com[SMTP:MARSHA@QBCT.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:19:12 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Marsha Barbour
Quick Beam

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:19 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: john.franks@ingenuityinc.net [SMTP:JOHN.FRANKS@INGENUITYINC.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:18:57 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

John Franks
Ingenuity, Inc.
12416 Casbeer Drive
Fairfax, VA 22033

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:18 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: louvis@coastaltech.com[SMTP:LOUVIS@COASTALTECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:18:09 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Frank Louvis
Coastal Technologies / WebsFirst, Inc.
615 Valley Road
Montclair, NJ 07043

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:17 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: info@capitalservices.net [SMTP:INFO@CAPITALSERVICES.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:16:33 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ivory Forsythe
Capital Services & Supplies Inc.
2804 Douglas St. NE
Washington, DC 20018

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:12 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dpalmintera@innovationassoc.com [SMTP:DPALMINTERA@INNOVATIONASSOC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:12:11 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Diane Palmintera
Innovation Associates
1612 Washington Plaza N.
Reston, VA 20190

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:12 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: kfontenot01@houston.rr.com[SMTP:KFONTENOT01@HOUSTON.RR.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:11:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Kimberly Fontenot
Stellar Grants, Inc.
2106 Meadow Parkway North
League City, TX 77573

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:10 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hstanford@dtgtech.com[SMTP:HSTANFORD@DTGTECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:09:28 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Hal Stanford
Diversified Technology Group
2904 Westcorp Blvd
Suite 101
Huntsville, AL 35805

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:09 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: hstanford@dtgtech.com [SMTP:HSTANFORD@DTGTECH.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:09:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Hal Stanford
Diversified Technology Group
2904 Westcorp Blvd
Suite 101
Huntsville, AL 35805

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:08 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: gsm.eng@adelphia.net [SMTP:GSM.ENG@ADELPHIA.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:08:25 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Gary Mirzakhonov
GSM Engineering
2538 Integrity Court
Colorado Springs, CO 80918

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:06 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: dave@schmitzking.com [SMTP:DAVE@SCHMITZKING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:05:57 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

David King
Schmitz, King & Assoc.
18900 W. 158th St.
Suite G
Olathe, KS 66062

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: GALEX@EMASSIST.COM[SMTP:GALEX@EMASSIST.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:02:59 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Gregg Alex
EM-Assist, Inc.

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: apexsteel@covad.net [SMTP:APEXSTEEL@COVAD.NET]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:02:54 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Norman Cantor
APEX Steel Corp
50 East Palisade Ave., Suite 404
Englewood, NJ 07631

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:01 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: rst46@yahoo.com [SMTP:RST46@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:00:30 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Robert Thomas

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:00 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: fasbury@armorit.com[SMTP:FASBURY@ARMORIT.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 1:00:16 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Floyd Asbury
Armorit, LLC
1060 Commerce Blvd N
Sarasota, FL 34243

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:50 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: bennetcyrus@metrotravel.biz [SMTP:BENNETCYRUS@METROTRAVEL.BIZ]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:49:35 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Cyrus Bennet
Metro Travel & Tours
9298 Central Ave.,
Suite 222
Minneapolis, MN 55434

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:49 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: businessaccessories@yahoo.com [SMTP:BUSINESSACCESSORIES@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:49:13 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Joe DiBartolo

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:49 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: alan@envirocontrol-inc.com[SMTP:ALAN@ENVIROCONTROL-INC.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:48:39 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Alan Paquette

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:47 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ariel_nievera@yahoo.com [SMTP:ARIEL_NIEVERA@YAHOO.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:46:43 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ariel Nievera

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:43 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: ari.vidali@envisagenow.com[SMTP:ARI.VIDALI@ENVISAGENOW.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:42:36 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Ari Vidali
ENVISAGE Technologies Corp.
1441 Fenbrook Lane
Bloomington, IN 47401

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:15 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: DIANE.CIESLER@AEMGCORP.COM[SMTP:DIANE.CIESLER@AEMGCORP.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:14:55 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

DIANE CIESLER

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:03 PM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: mike@gsanalysis.com[SMTP:MIKE@GSANALYSIS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 12:02:47 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Mike Milczarek
GeoSystems Analysis, Inc.
2015 N. Forbes Blvd,
Suite 105
Tucson, AZ 85745

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 11:37 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: susan.janger@axaconsulting.com [SMTP: SUSAN.JANGER@AXACONSULTING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 11:36:49 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Susan Janger
AXA Consulting, Inc.
421 South Ellwood Avenue
Baltimore, MD 21224

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 10:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: Info@TechExecPartners.com [SMTP:INFO@TECHEXECPARTNERS.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 10:55:57 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Dianne Gubin
Tech Exec Partners
23679 Calabasas Rd #415
Calabasas, CA 91302

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 10:56 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

From: j-bar-h@mindspring.com [SMTP:J-BAR-H@MINDSPRING.COM]
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 10:55:30 AM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
Auto forwarded by a Rule

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

James Hooper
Hooper\'s Contract Management Services
13185 New Avenue
San Martin, CA 95046

Matt Johnson

From: Matthew Santos
Sent: Tuesday, April 04, 2006 9:46 AM
To: Matt Johnson
Subject: FW: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

Matt,

Do you want me to forward these to you? To Rob?

-MS

-----Original Message-----

From: FJohnson43@sc.rr.com [mailto:FJohnson43@sc.rr.com]
Sent: Monday, April 03, 2006 4:31 PM
To: Matthew Santos
Subject: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01

Individual comment for GSA ANPRM

This statement reflects my individual comment about changes in the GSAR and, although I am choosing to use the American Small Business League's Web site to send my comment, this is my sole comment and should be counted as an individual comment.

In regards to the regulatory portion of the GSAR that may 'unnecessarily impose an adverse significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities,' I submit the following comment:

As a small business owner, I am very concerned that changes GSA may propose will not address the single largest problem affecting small businesses that has been brought to light in the last three years. To quote the SBA Inspector General:

One of the most important challenges facing the Small Business Administration and the entire Federal government today is that large businesses are receiving small business procurement awards and agencies are receiving credit for these awards.
(Report 5-15, February 24, 2005)

Seven Federal investigations have found fraud and abuse in small business contracting programs that have diverted billions of dollars in funds to some of the largest companies in the world. Any changes in GSA policies should address the significant problems that allow this to happen.

I am also concerned that any policy changes GSA might make could exacerbate the problem of large firms getting small business awards.

I would like to see GSA propose policies that will uphold the Small Business Act which requires that 23% of Federal contracts goes to legitimate small businesses. Therefore, in adopting any changes to the GSAR, GSA needs to ensure that procurement activities comply with Federal law and that more loopholes aren't created that will allow the Defense Department and other major agencies to divert small business contracts to large companies.

Sincerely,

Floyd Johnson
Floroni Enterprises
P. O. Box 673
Columbia, SC 29202

2006-1101-28

April 20, 2006

Via Email to jerry.zaffos@gsa.gov

Gerald Zaffos, Director, Contract Policy Division
The FAR Secretariat
1800 F Street, N.W., Room 4035
Washington, DC 20405

Re: GSAR ANPR 2006-N01: General Services Administration's
Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking Regarding General
Services Administration Acquisition Regulation Revision
Initiative, 71 Fed. Reg. 7910 (February 15, 2006)

Request for Extension of Time for Submitting Comments

Dear Mr. Zaffos:

On behalf of the Information Technology Association of America (ITAA) and the Contract Services Association,¹ we write this letter to request a three month extension of time to the current April 17, 2006, deadline for submitting comments on the Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPR) pertaining to the General Services Administration Acquisition Regulation (GSAR) Revision Initiative. The GSAR Revision Initiative provides a great opportunity for GSA to improve the GSAR, including the elimination of inconsistencies and duplications with the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) and within the GSAR itself; clarifying certain provisions that currently are the ¹ ITAA provides global public policy, business networking, and national leadership to promote the continued rapid growth of the IT industry. ITAA consists of over 400 corporate members throughout the U.S. and a global network of 50 countries' IT associations. The Association plays the leading role in issues of IT industry concern including information security, taxes and finance policy, digital intellectual property protection, telecommunications competition, workforce and education, immigration, online privacy and consumer protection, government IT procurement, human resources, and e-commerce policy. ITAA members range from the smallest IT start-ups to industry leaders in the Internet, software, IT services, ASP, digital content, systems integration, telecommunications, and enterprise solution fields. For more information visit www.itaa.org.

CSA is the nation's oldest and largest association of service contractors representing over 200 companies that provide a wide array of services to Federal, state, and local governments. CSA members perform over $40 billion in Government contracts and employ nearly 500,000 workers, with nearly two-thirds of CSA companies using private sector union labor. CSA members represent the diversity of the Government services industry and include small businesses, 8(a)-certified companies, small disadvantaged businesses, women-owned, HubZone, Native American owned firms and global multi-billion dollar corporations. CSA promotes Excellence in Contracting by offering significant professional development opportunities for Government contractors and Government employees.

1401 Wilson Blvd., Suite 1100, Arlington, VA 22209
703-522-5055
www.itaa.org

Handwritten notes: "L. C. W. 4-25-06" and a circled signature "uml".

2006-NO-1-20

ITAA/CSA Letter
GSAR ANPR 2006-N01
April 20, 2006
Page 2

source of differing interpretations; deleting certain provisions that impose an unnecessary administrative burden on the Government and/or contractors; and providing new or augmented coverage where desirable. Unfortunately, however, the April 17 deadline does not provide us with sufficient time to methodically analyze the many sections of the GSAR and to prepare the type of detailed comments that we believe you seek and such an undertaking warrants. We submit that much more time is necessary.²

Indeed, there are many areas of the GSAR that should be closely examined and potentially revised. Based on our preliminary review, we have identified the following areas that we intend to explore (other areas may be identified in the course of an extensive review) if provided with ample time:

1. Revise the GSAR to address inconsistencies and duplication between and among GSA contract clauses and the FAR Part 12 clauses that are often included in a single contract.
2. Revise the GSAR to clarify the application of the Price Reductions Clause, including the identity of the events that trigger a price reduction and the duration of price reductions.
3. Clarify and revise the Commercial Sales Practices Format, including simplifying the provision and removing those requirements associated with the mechanism that represents the pricing relationship between the Government and the basis of award customer (or category of customers) that pose undue administrative burden.
4. Revise the GSAR to provide an exception to the Trade Agreements Act (and certain other domestic source requirements) for commercial-off-the-shelf items.
5. Revise the GSAR to clarify issues concerning application of the industrial funding fee.
6. Revise the GSAR to address issues pertaining to time-and-materials (T&M) contracts, including (i) revising the GSAR to clarify that subcontractor labor hours under a T&M contract (see FAR clause 52.232-7) are paid at the rates established in the prime contract (including FSS contract) or task order; and (ii) revising the GSAR to provide that contractors may apply

² In addition to requesting additional time, we suggest that GSA might want to consider taking a phased approach similar to one used by the Department of Defense for the Defense Federal Acquisition Regulation Supplement transformation initiative in order to make the revision process more manageable.

2006-1101-20

G&A to travel costs and other direct charges in accordance with each vendor's approved cost accounting standards disclosure statement.

7. Revise the GSAR to encourage contracting officers to consider a vendor's commercial practices and policies during negotiations of contract terms and conditions, consistent with the contracting officer's ability to tailor clauses under FAR 12.302.
8. Revise the Assignment of Claims clause to facilitate contractor teaming arrangements (the clause should permit one teammate to be the lead and issue invoices and accept payment on behalf of the other teammates).
9. Revise the Economic Price Adjustment clause, including revising the clause to eliminate the ten percent cap on price increases. (Instead, price increases should be consistent with the negotiated pricing methodology established between the vendor and GSA.)
10. Revise the GSAR to address the application of the advance payment prohibition to certain commercial offerings, including to software maintenance.
11. Revise the GSAR to address the procurement practice known as "reverse auctions." While we support innovative competitive techniques, we are concerned about the implication that auction techniques should be required, even to the extent practicable, for the purchase of commercial items. Not all commercial items, and in particular not all commercial services, lend themselves to the "price-only" bidding used in auction (and reverse auction) techniques.
12. Revise the GSAR to clarify the ability of agencies to enter into share-in-savings contracts.
13. Establish a single location where someone can find all of the GSA contract clauses used in FSS and government-wide acquisition contracts.
14. Consider ITAA's and CSA's comments on GSA's 2005 ANPR addressing post-award audits and limitation on damages.
15. Clarify the requirement to establish and maintain Earned Value Management Systems in a manner consistent with current Department of Defense policy.

Furthermore, a multi-association Task Force on Service Contracting (led by CSA and ITAA) released a report in May 2005 that highlighted a number of regulatory recommendations. Among the findings, was a recognition that providing in the FAR a greater emphasis on "services" and contract methodology will enhance and support the FAR and the procurement/project management community in acquisition planning, to include post-award management and oversight. The Task Force undertook a thorough review of the FAR and recommended several regulatory changes (e.g., to FAR Part 7 and 15). The Task Force also specifically looked at making significant changes in Part 37, Service Contracting. It should be noted that specific agency FAR supplements and implementing guidance also may require revision – and, as such, any GSAR changes should reflect similar revisions.

2006-1101-20

Accordingly, there are many important issues worthy of comment. If given the opportunity, we strongly believe that consideration of these and potentially other issues would greatly improve the GSAR Revision process.

We look forward to hearing your response.

Respectfully submitted,

Robert Laurence
President
ITAA

Chris Jahn
President
CSA

cc. Emily Webster Murphy, Chief Acquisition Officer