Report Highlights 2nd Anniversary of the E-Government Act

Marking the second anniversary of the E-Government Act of 2002, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) released a report today which highlights the results and future path of President George W. Bush's goal of Expanding Electronic Government. The report identifies improved service delivery, enhanced role of enterprise architecture and future steps to be accomplished as part of the President's Management Agenda.

"Federal employees are working together, both within their agencies and across the Federal government. In concert with the four other management agenda goals, E-government is transforming our agencies and producing results by providing improved services," said Clay Johnson III, Deputy Director for Management for OMB.

The report outlines specific goals for the federal government in FY2005 including:

- Acceptable Business Cases –75% of agencies with acceptable business cases for all of their systems;
- Earned Value Management –at least 50% (13) of agencies managing their IT portfolio in accordance with the standard;
- Cyber Security –90% of all IT systems properly secured (certified and accredited) including the Inspector General's verification of the effectiveness of the department's or agency's IT security remediation process; and
- Human Capital –50% of the agencies (13) with no IT skill gaps.

The report, entitled "Expanding E-Government: Partnering for a Results-Oriented Government," can be viewed at www.omb.gov. For more information please contact OMB Communications at 202-395-7254.
