Dear Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Hunt:

To whom it may concern,
It seems to me that the U.S. is beginning to conform to the mentality of industrialism and corporatism and profit at all costs. Is this the kind of country we want to create? We are beginning to allow government officials to place value judgements on the welfare of people. The OMB Draft Guidelines for the Conduct of Regulatory Analysis and the Formating of Accounting Statements does just this. Saving the life of an elderly person is now deemed less worthy than a younger person, all to escape tighter regulations that would benefit all of society. Thanks for your time, Cassandra Howe

Sincerely,

Cassandra Howe
