Application Instructions for Eagle Parts for Native American Religious Purposes

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service administers the Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act, the Federal law protecting bald and golden eagles. This law provides for the use of eagle feathers for religious purposes by Native Americans. Eagles and eagle feathers are accumulated by, and made available to Native Americans through, the National Eagle Repository. In order to receive material from the Repository, you must obtain a permit from the Service Regional Migratory Bird Permit Office responsible for your state. To qualify for a permit, you must be a member of a federally recognized tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community recognized by, and eligible to receive services from, the Bureau of Indian Affairs. You must be at least 18 years old to apply for a permit.

The Repository serves Native Americans throughout the entire 50 states. Shipments of feathers are prioritized according to the date the Regional Migratory Bird Permit Office receives a complete application. You can avoid delays in the processing of your application by ensuring that your forms are complete and legible. We must have your current address and telephone number for the Repository to contact you when your request is ready to be filled. The Repository will not ship any eagle or eagle parts without prior telephone contact.

Note: Because the supply of eagle carcasses and eagle parts is limited, you may have only one request pending at a time, and you may not request both a whole bird and parts in the same request. Requests for whole carcasses average 3 ½ to 4 years to fill. Requests for loose feathers can usually be filled within 6 months to 1 year. An order for parts or feathers may not exceed the equivalent of a whole bird.
