Over $72 Million Awaits Account Holders

The Office of the Special Trustee for American Indians (OST) is trying to find Individual Indian Money (IIM) account holders who have not provided current addresses. There is a total of over $72 million that has not been distributed to these account holders. Some IIM accounts have balances of more than $100,000.

OST refers to account holders whose incorrect address information precludes delivery of their statements and checks as "Whereabouts Unknown" (WAU). At this time, there are more than 83,000 WAUs.

"We have many stories that show how finding a WAU can change lives," said Special Trustee Ross Swimmer. "Like the person who found out right before Christmas that she had an account, or the person who had been adopted and who was reunited with blood relations when he learned about his account."

To help locate WAUs and provide answers about IIM accounts and other issues such as probate and leases, OST representatives will team up with realty specialists from the Bureau of Indian Affairs at the Indian Summer Festival being held on the Milwaukee lakefront. Representatives will staff a booth at the event on Friday, September 5, and Saturday, September 6, 2008.

During the relocation era in the 1950s and 1960s, many American Indians left Indian lands to find work and educational opportunities in cities. Milwaukee was one of the urban areas used for relocation. According to Census 2000 data, American Indians and Alaska Natives comprise more than one percent of the population of Milwaukee County.
