

Samuel A. Thernstrom
06/10/2002 05:00:06 PM

Record Type: Record

To: James Connaughton/CEQ/EOP@EOP, Phil Cooney/CEQ/EOP@EOP, Scott McClellan/WHO/EOP@EOP, Kameron L. Bailey/CEQ/EOP@EOP

cc:

Subject: more kausfiles today on USCAR

<http://slate.msn.com/?id=2066517>

Kausfiles

By Mickey Kaus

Updated Monday, June 10, 2002, at 2:52 AM PT

More greenhouse gassing: Marc Ambinder of ABC's "The Note" has some good detail on conservatives upset by Bush's global warming ambiguity. ... He suggests Bush may seek refuge by arguing humans are causing "greenhouse gases" to rise, but that this may not necessarily cause global warming. Very Clintonian! But it's hard to see how this gets Bush off the hook, since the report produced by his EPA, as Ambinder himself notes, "lays the blame for global warming (not just greenhouse gases) on human industrial production." ... P.S.: When the leader of a big liberal interest group makes a stink about a Democratic president caving in to the right, I instinctively suspect that the leader just wants to raise the profile of his interest group. So why don't I think the same thing about Myron Ebell, lobbyist for the conservative Competitive Enterprise Institute, who is making a big stink about Bush's "reversal" on global warming? The answer is probably that one should suspect Ebell of the same thing. ...