Teen Workers: You Have a Right to a Safe and Healthy Workplace and a Responsibility to be Safe

You may work to earn spending money, buy a car, save for college or gain work experience. Whatever the reason, plans for your job and for your future don't include getting hurt.

Each year, 60 - 70 teens die from work-related injuries and about 200,000 young workers seek emergency medical treatment.

It doesn't have to be this way.

You have the right to be safe and healthy at work and you have a responsibility to be safe.

And there are simple, practical steps that you and your employer can take to help make sure that your job helps you build a better future.

Teen Worker Responsibilities:

- Trust your instincts about dangerous situations.
- Follow all safety rules.
- Wear proper safety equipment.
- Ask questions about potentially dangerous situations or equipment.
- Tell your supervisor or parent if you suspect unsafe conditions.
- Be aware of your work environment.
- Work safely.
- Stay sober and drug-free.
- Know your workplace rights.

Employer Responsibilities:

- Provide a workplace that protects workers from injuries, illnesses and fatalities.
- Know the law about working limits for teens, including the number of hours they can work and the kinds of jobs that can be performed.
- Emphasize the importance of safety.
- Make sure that young workers are trained properly.
- Teach workers to recognize hazards and use safe work practices.
