NEWS RELEASE

Geography Students Compete for the State Championship at the Eisenhower Library

The top geography students from across the state will gather at the Dwight D. Eisenhower Presidential Library and Museum on April 4 to vie for first place honors at the Kansas Geographic Bee. This year's competition began in November with local contests in Kansas schools. Students competing at the state level are required to pass a national qualifying exam. The Kansas winner will advance to the national competition, held at the National Geographic's Washington, D.C., headquarters on May 20-21.

Five simultaneous preliminary rounds will take place between 1:30 and 2:45 at various locations at the Eisenhower Center and the Greyhound Hall of Fame. The championship round is scheduled for 3:20 – 5:00 in the Visitors Center Auditorium. Members of the Kansas Geographic Alliance will be assisting the National Geographic Society in running the state Geographic Bee finals on April 4th.

The National Geographic Bee is an educational program instituted by the National Geographic Society in 1989 to address a lack of geographic knowledge among young Americans. Students in grades four through eight are eligible to participate. This year's sponsor is Plum Creek Timber Company. The purpose of the contest is to spark student interest in geography and to encourage teachers to include geography in the classroom curriculum. The Geographic Bee program brings public awareness to the importance of learning about geography. The national finalists, determined in May, will be awarded scholarships in the amounts of $25,000, $15,000, and $10,000.
