Welcome to Our Annual Environmental Edition of MarkeTips!

This year we have included information on the efforts of a number of Federal agencies that, as part of their missions, work to protect our environment. Whether their activities involve research to develop renewable energy sources, or the preservation of wildlife habitats, or the administration of environmental policies, these agencies help to protect our greatest natural resource, our environment.

GSA's Federal Supply Service places a major emphasis on providing our customers the product and service solutions they need in a way that enables them to meet environmental requirements. GSA is proud to offer products and services that minimize waste, conserve natural resources and reduce or prevent pollution.

To help our customers find these products, we highlight them in our catalogs and have included a number of special icons in our on-line system, GSA Advantage!® We also have a separate publication, the Environmental Products and Services Guide (EPSG), which is a major source of information about the thousands of products GSA offers that have recycled content, conserve energy and/or water, or contain reduced pollutants. The EPSG also provides information about the many environmental services GSA offers. The 2003-2004 edition will be available later this Spring.

Our Environmental Web Site (fss.gsa.gov/enviro) contains not only environmental product and service information but also applicable laws, Executive orders, and other relevant regulations, as well as links to other agency sites and various environmental organizations.

At GSA, we not only provide the Federal community quality products and services; we also enable their environmental compliance.

"FSS takes great pride in offering easy access to numerous environmentally friendly products and services."
