

protecting what matters

gsa supports
homeland security
through a partnership with TSA

In the past few years, GSA and the Department of Homeland Security have forged a strong partnership in the acquisition of products and services used to keep our nation safe. Federal employees, especially those in the new Department of Homeland Security, have come to rely upon GSA to help support their complex responsibilities. GSA plays an important role in this effort by offering a full line of products and services to support the task of protecting people, information, and government assets.

GSA has teamed with numerous Department of Homeland Security personnel over the past few years, but one of the greatest success stories came from the interaction between GSA and Daryl Shall, Contracting Officer and Infrastructure Division Director with the Transportation Security Agency. Through a partnership between GSA, Mr. Shall, his team at TSA, and GSA contractors, TSA has been able to meet the demands of its charter while achieving savings for the American public. TSA has relied heavily on the Multiple Award Schedules program, specifically the Information Technology Schedule 70, to fulfill its product and services needs. Mr. Shall, said of GSA...

“The use of Schedule 70 allows us the luxury of gaining the benefits of competition in a streamlined environment, critical to a new agency seeking to meet mission critical requirements. The large number of premier contractors available on Schedule 70 allows us the ability to acquire goods and services from the leaders in the industry at the best value to our agency. Program officials appreciate the shortened procurement process enabling them to accomplish their program goals. We go to the schedules as a first choice when developing our acquisition strategies.”

Like Mr. Shall, other Department of Homeland Security personnel have come to rely on the GSA Federal Supply Service's 50 Multiple Award Schedules (MAS), and a host of Governmentwide Acquisition Contracts (GWACs) covering a wide variety of products and services. These contracts feature nearly 11,000 leading suppliers and professional service providers offering nearly 4 million items covering everything from office supplies and furniture solutions to cutting-edge professional services. These contracts, along with a variety of online acquisition e-tools such as GSA Advantage!, e-Buy, e-Library, e-tools, and the U-MAS virtual training campus, provide the tools Homeland Security personnel need to get their job done right!

When it comes to protecting our homeland, GSA has thousands of quality contractors in place to help you prepare, prevent, and respond to critical events. GSA contractors can provide a full range of planning solutions such as contingency and response planning, chemical/biological threat reduction, vulnerability assessments, and disaster preparedness modeling and analysis. Contractors are also in place to respond to an actual event providing everything from emergency equipment and supplies to the services necessary to perform your agency's mission. GSA stands ready to support your Homeland Security needs by providing quality products and services in the following areas:
