(UPDATED 7-7-2000)

U.S. Department of Commerce
National Institute of Standards and Technology
Comprehensive Records Schedule

Introduction

The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST), formerly the National Bureau of Standards, was established on March 3, 1901, by "An Act to Establish the National Bureau of Standards" (31 Stat. 1449). In 1988, with the passage of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act (Public Law 100-418, 15 U.S.C. 272), the name was changed to NIST, and the agency was directed to assist industry in developing technology to improve product quality; to modernize manufacturing processes; to ensure product reliability; and to facilitate rapid commercialization of products based on new scientific discoveries. As a nonregulatory agency of the Department of Commerce, NIST aids U.S. industry through research and services; carries out selected programs in public health and safety and environmental improvement; and supports the U.S. scientific and engineering research communities through fundamental research.

NIST conducts basic and applied research in the physical sciences and engineering, and develops measurement techniques, test methods, standards, and related services. The Institute also conducts generic and precompetitive research and development work on new advanced technologies to facilitate technology transfer and commercialization. NIST offers direct technical and financial assistance to U.S. based companies to assist in leveraging research and development investments; maintains measurement and standards services such as Standard Reference Materials, Standard Reference Data, and equipment calibrations and testing; conducts joint research with industry, university, or other government scientists and engineers; participates in standards activities with local, state, and federal governments, private industry, and international standards organizations; and makes selected facilities available for cooperative research and proprietary projects. Major research areas include electronics and electrical engineering, manufacturing engineering, chemical science and technology, physics, materials science and engineering, building and fire research, computer systems, and computing and applied mathematics.

This comprehensive agency records schedule identifies ongoing series of records maintained throughout NIST by all operating units and divisions, and provides authorized disposition instructions for the unique program records created and maintained at NIST. This schedule should be used in conjunction with the General Records Schedules which cover common administrative and housekeeping records created, received, and maintained in many government agencies, or throughout the entire federal government. The use of both of these schedules is mandatory.

Records management in the federal government is a statutory responsibility of the Archivist of the United States and the heads of federal agencies, as defined in 44 U.S.C. Chapters 29 and 33. The Federal Records Act, 44 U.S.C. Chapter 33, defines federal records as "all books, papers, maps, photographs, machine readable materials, and other documentary materials, regardless of physical form or characteristics, made or received by an agency of the United States Government under Federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and preserved or appropriate for preservation by that agency or its legitimate successors . . ." There are other laws and regulations that govern recordkeeping in the federal government contained in the Code of Federal Regulations, the Privacy Act, the Freedom of Information Act, and other statutes. Federal records must be scheduled, and may not be destroyed without authorization from the Archivist of the United States in the form of an approved disposition instruction. The authorized dispositions in this schedule apply to all information regardless of the media, physical characteristics, or physical format of the records unless disposition authorization for a specific record media or format is listed separately.

Record disposition and destruction applies to all such documents regardless of whether records are already in storage or in operating units' files. To arrange for storage of inactive records, prepare Form NIST-1153, Records Transmittal and Receipt.

Send the original and two (2) copies to the NIST Records Management Office; one (1) copy is to be placed in the front of the first box of records that is to be sent to storage. Unscheduled records (records that are not listed on this record schedule or other approved authority) cannot be removed from office space or stored at a Federal Records Center.

Destruction of all agency records must be approved by the NIST Records Management Officer, and must be coordinated through the NIST Records Management Office. Authorized disposition is based on the actual date of creation of records (files), or the actual date of closure of records (files).

For assistance concerning the disposition of records not listed in this schedule, or for questions concerning the definition of federal records, records management at NIST, or the procedures to retire records from active office space, records destruction procedures, or other records matters, refer to NIST subchapter 2.06, Records Management, or contact the NIST Records Management Office or the division records liaison in the appropriate operating unit.

This section describes common records that may be located throughout all NIST operating units, divisions, sections, and other offices. The provisions of this schedule apply wherever records performing the function or functions described below are found regardless of the operating unit, division, or the location of the records in NIST. In some instances, specific NIST offices are identified as the office of record, and disposition instructions for records in those custodial offices are provided.

The web sites are used primarily to disseminate general information. The information on the sites is maintained in textual record series that serve as the record-keeping copy. The web sites contain no unique records. Only a portion of the textual records viewed on the web sites are scheduled for permanent retention. The textual (paper) versions constitute a complete set of the record rather than solely the most recent version as posted on the web sites.

The value of the web sites lies primarily in offering users convenient, rapid facilitation for searching through information. This increase in speed by which users locate information does not add sufficient value to any of the records in the web site format to the degree that the web sites warrant permanent preservation by NIST. While rapid access to information, this level of speed is not imperative to future researchers (i.e., no permanent information is lost using textual records).

5. Web Site Archives

Paper records that contain all screen printouts of the web site pages at any given point in time. This is the material as actually seen by users as of a specific date.

AUTHORIZED DISPOSITION: Cut off files at end of fiscal year. Destroy/delete 5 years after cutoff.

8. Web Site Feedback and Statistical Reports

Electronic records that contain all documents and feedback from web site users. Also included are reports that contain utilization statistics on the web site.
