

I understand the problem with post office boxes. However, I do not understand how these coupons could possibly be denied to seniors who are living in nursing homes or assisted living facilities. Yes, they are not unique addresses but it is obvious by the address what type of facility it is (they usually have "assisted living" "health care" or some such in the name). At this point, the majority of those in these types of facilities are members of the Greatest Generation and I think it's sad that the government would possibly deny any benefit to members of the generation who lived through so much and contributed so much to the country (and to the world, for that matter).

If you want my honest opinion, I think that the conversion to High Def should be postponed again. With the economy being what it is right now, getting new televisions or converter boxes should definitely NOT be on anyone's high priority list. I wish SOMEONE could show a little common sense (or maybe that went out with the Greatest Generation!)
